This London Edition OF THE SELF-INTERPRETING BIBLE,

Being correctly printed from the Original, is published with the Approbation and Recommendation of the Sons of the much Esteemed Author:

Rev. JOHN BROWN, Whitburn, Scotland, The Rev. EBENEZER BROWN, Inverkeithing, Scotland,
And also by the following Ministers.

SIR,

AFTER the high character which the Self-Interpreting Bible of the late Rev. JOHN BROWN, Haddington, has obtained in the churches, it may be deemed unnecessary and officious to draw the attention the public to the new edition which you are printing. But for the sake of young persons, and others who are strangers to the work, it may be proper to notice the excellent collection of scriptural references which the author has placed in the margin, by which the different parts of revealed truth shed light on each other. The practical applications, at the end of each chapter, are happily adapted to make the Scriptures profitable for doctrine, for reformation, and for instruction in righteousness. In the Gospels, and especially in the Epistles, the text is furnished with ample expository views of the text, brought from the most judicious commentators; particularly from the late pious and evangelical Dr. GUYSE. To the whole is prefixed a most valuable Introduction, containing the principal proofs of the Divine Authenticity of the Old and New Testaments; useful for the more profitable perusal of the oracles of God; a connected scheme of the Hebrew laws, and their moral signification; an outline of the history of the world, as connected with prophecy and with our redemption by JESUS CHRIST; together with a large chronological index. These, sir, are some of the peculiarities of this invaluable work; and as you intend to print it accurately from the London Edition of 1791, by BENSLEY, we feel no difficulty in cordially recommending the work, and hope to see it execute it in such a manner, as will do credit to yourself, and by the divine blessing, much benefit to mankind.

Your's respectfully,

ROBERT SIMPSON.

A TABLE of OFFICES and CONDITIONS of MEN.

TRIARCHS, or Fathers of Families, such as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and his sons.
Judges, Temporary supreme Governors, immediately appointed by God over the children of Israel.
Kings, and they either of the whole nation, or after the falling of the ten tribes, of Judah or Israel.
Elders, Senators, the LXX, or Sanhedrim.
Officers, Provosts, Sheriffs, or Executioners.
Judges, Inferior Rulers, such as determine controversies in particular cities.
Israelites, Hebrews, descendants from Jacob.
An Hebrew of Hebrews, an Israelite by original extraction.
A Proselyte of the Covenant, who was circumcised, and submitted to the whole law.
A Proselyte of the Gate, or Stranger, who worshipped one God, but remained uncircumcised.

Officers under the Assyrian or Persian Monarchs:
Tirshatha, or Governor appointed by the kings of Assyria or Persia.
Heads of the Captivity, the Chief of each tribe or family, who exercised a precarious government during the captivity.

Under the Grecian Monarchs, Superior Officers.
Maccabees, the successors of Judas Maccabeus, high priests, who presided with kingly power.

Under the Roman Emperors.
Presidents, or Governors, sent from Rome with imperial power.
Tetrarchs, who had kingly power in four provinces.
Proconsuls, or Deputies of Provinces.

Inferior Officers.
Publicans, or Tax-gatherers.
Centurians, Captains of an hundred men.

Ecclesiastical Officers, or Sects of Men.
High Priests, who only might enter the Holy of Holies.
Second Priests, or Sagan, who supplied the high priest's office, in case he were disabled.
High Priests for the War, set apart for the occasion of an expedition.
Priests, Levites of the sons of Aaron, divided into twenty-four courses, each rank serving weekly in the temple.

Levites, of the tribe of Levi, but not of Aaron's family; of these were three orders, Gershonites, Koathites, Merarites, several sons of Levi.

Nethinims, inferior servants to the Priests and Levites, (not of their tribe) to draw water, and cleave wood, &c.

Prophets, anciently called Seers, who foretold future events, and denounced God's judgments.

Children of the Prophets, their disciples or scholars.

Wise Men, called so in imitation of the Eastern Magi, or Gentile Philosophers.

Scribes, Writers and Expounders of the law.

Disputers, that raised and determined questions out of the law.

Rabbies or Doctors, Teachers of Israel.

Libertines, Freed men of Rome, who, being Jews or Proselytes, had a synagogue or oratory for themselves.

Galileans or Galileans, who pretended it unlawful to obey any heathen magistrate.

Herodians, who shaped their religion to the times, and particularly flattered Herod.

Epicurians, who placed all happiness in pleasure.

Stoics, who denied the liberty of the will, and pretended all events were determined by fatal necessity.

Simon Magus, Author of the Heresy of the Gnostics, who taught that men, however vicious their practice was, should be saved by their knowledge.

Nicolaitans, the disciples of Nicolas, one of the first seven deacons, who taught the community of wives.

Nazarites, who under a vow abstained from wine, &c.

Nazarenes, Jews professing Christianity.

Zelots, Sicarii, or Murderers, who under pretence of the law, thought themselves authorized to commit any outrage.

Pharisees, Separatists, who, upon the opinion of their godliness, despised all others.

Sadducees, who denied the resurrection of the dead, angels, and spirits.

Samaritans, Mongrel professors, partly Heathen and partly Jews; the offspring of the Assyrians sent to Samaria.

Apostles, Missionaries, or persons sent; they who were sent by our Saviour, from their number, were called The Twelve.

Bishops, Successors of the Apostles in the government of the church.

Deacons, Officers chosen by the Apostles to take care of the poor.

TO THE READER.

NOT to depreciate the valuable commentaries of Pool, Patrick, Clark, Henry, Burkitt, Gill, Doddridge, &c. &c. but to exhibit their principal substance with all possible advantage, in a manner that might best comport with the ability and leisure of the poorer and labouring part of mankind; and especially to render the oracles of GOD their own interpreter, and enable every serious reader to judge himself what doctrines ought to be believed and what duties practised by the Christian, are the avowed aims of this publication.

In the copious INTRODUCTION, the principal PROOFS of the DIVINE AUTHORITY of the Old and New Testaments, and the reasons necessary to promote the profitable perusal of the oracles of GOD therein contained, are largely exhibited. The connected scheme of the HEBREW LAWS, and their evangelical signification,—and of the FATE of nations, narrated or predicted in scripture, as subservient to the glorious work of our redemption,—together with the large CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX,—form a summary of the most celebrated labours of the learned world on these diversified subjects. An accurate attention thereto will, through the blessing of GOD, greatly assist in searching the scriptures with success.

The CONTENTS of the sacred books, and their respective chapters, are an accurate, full, and explicatory, representation of the subject.—Properly attending to these, the reader must discern of whom, or of what, the HOLY GHOST there speaks, and understand every passage accordingly. He may easily fix in his mind a general, but distinct, view of the whole system of inspiration; and thus be enabled with the utmost readiness, to find out or compare whatever passages of scripture he may desire.

The EXPLANATORY NOTES are chiefly confined to the figurative, the prophetic, and the practical parts. Here the obscurity of scripture, or the importance of faith and holiness, chiefly required them.

In our SAVIOUR'S delightful discourses, and the epistles of his inspired messengers, our holy religion is most fully delineated; and the explication is peculiarly extensive, and attempts to exhibit the substance of many learned and expensive commentaries, in a manner which, attending to the beautiful connection, clearly unfolds the scope and meaning of the SPIRIT OF GOD.

A particular and lively application of divine truth to the heart, and an unspotted holiness of conversation, being the immediate end of GOD'S revelations to men, the contents of each chapter, which are often in an explicatory manner, are in the REFLECTIONS practically summed up, and directed home to the reader himself, for enlightening his understanding, awakening his conscience, warming his heart, and for directing and animating his practice.

An exact knowledge of the SEASONS in which the oracles of GOD were delivered, or the events mentioned in them took place, being of no small importance for obtaining a distinct perception of their meaning, the dates before and after our SAVIOUR'S incarnation have been adjusted from the best chronologers, and marked in the margin.

But, as every Protestant must allow the scripture itself to be its own best interpreter—as GOD, to oblige men to a diligent search of his word, comparing spiritual things with spiritual, has seldom fully unfolded any of his more important truths in one particular passage—the uncommon collection of PARALLEL SCRIPTURES, such as is not to be found any where else that I know of, has formed the most laborious, and will, to the diligent peruser, be found by far the most valuable, part of the work. Some of these are similar in phraseology, others in meaning, and, in fine, others in their scope and design. In these, and others which may be added, we have a delightful view of the HARMONY of the scripture, and multiplied PROOFS of every article of our Christian faith; we have a real CONCORDANCE, which may abundantly furnish preachers and others with their desired quotations; we have, in little room, a large COMMENTARY, infinitely more certain than any dictates of men; and of which the very words are, as nails and as goads, pointed and fastened by the great Master of assemblies. In a truly diligent comparison of them, many texts all at once explain, and are explained by, each other. Nor, unless at first, will the careful reader find much trouble in comparing the texts: but the mere view of the marginal quotations will direct his memory to that part of them which corresponds with the sentence to which they are annexed for explication. And, for his encouragement, I can only say, that my labour, in collecting the parallel texts in this work, has afforded me much more PLEASANT INSIGHT into the oracles of GOD than all the numerous commentaries which I ever perused.

Thus we may listen to and converse with GOD, and lay our consciences open to the inspired arrows of our all-conquering REDEEMER;—we find his words, and eat them, to the joy and health of our soul; we hide them in our heart, that we may not sin against him; we become mighty in the scriptures, and expert in handling this sword of the SPIRIT, in opposition to every enemy of our soul: in fine, we are made wise unto salvation; are reprov'd, corrected, and instructed in righteousness, and perfectly furnished for every good work. May the LORD himself prosper it for these ends!

THE RIGHT UNDERSTANDING OF THE ORACLES OF GOD.

CHAP. I.

Of the divine authority of the scriptures of the Old and New Testament.

NO man, who is an unbiassed free-thinker, can soberly hearken to the dictates of his natural reason, and seriously ponder the absurd and contradictory principles and practices which have been, or are, prevalent among mankind, without perceiving that the light, or even the law, of nature is altogether insufficient to direct us to true holiness, or lasting happiness, in our present lapsed condition. It can give us no plain, distinct, convincing, pleasant, powerful, and lasting, ideas of God. It cannot direct us in the right manner of worshipping him with due love, resignation, humility, self-denial, zeal, wisdom, sincerity, and fervent desire of the eternal enjoyment of him. It cannot shew us our true happiness, which is suited to our highest powers, which may always be enjoyed without shame, suspicion, fear, or dread of loss or danger, and which will in every situation support and comfort us. It can discover no true system of morality, perfect in its rules, means, and motives. It can discover no effectual incitements to virtue, drawn from the excellency and presence of God the lawgiver, from the authority of his law, or from his discovering a proper regard to it in rewarding virtue and punishing vice. It cannot manifest in a striking manner the certainty, excellence, pleasure, and allurements, of virtue or of future reward, nor carry us to that proper pitch of religion and virtue in our heart, which will ripen us for the full and immediate enjoyment of God. It cannot shew us one perfect example of virtue, either among learned or unlearned heathens; nor give us any promise of God's assisting us in the study of it. It can discover no certainty that God will pardon our sins,—no proper atonement,—no actually pardoned sinner,—no happy soul, praising God for his pardoning mercy,—no spiritual worship, appointed by God for rebellious sinners,—no purpose, promise, perfection, or name, of God, that can secure his pardon;—nor does it give us any hint that it could consist with his honour, or is intended in his patient bearing with sinners on earth;—nor does it afford any divine proclamation of pardon, nor even any incitement to us to forgive our injurers;—and, in fine, it cannot effectually sanctify our heart, nor produce that bent of will and affection, that inward peace with God, that sufficiency of light and strength from God, or that solid hope of eternal happiness, which is necessary to produce true holiness and virtue. It cannot support us under heavy and bitter afflictions, by shewing us God's fatherly care of us, his promises to us, or his making all things to work together for our good,—nor can it comfort us against death by certain views of his love to us, and providing everlasting life and happiness for us. While reason then plainly suggests the possibility, the desirableness, and the necessity, of a revelation from God, adapted to our circumstances, the books of the Old and New Testament manifest themselves reasonable, credible, and divinely inspired: It is their DIVINE INSPIRATION (which indeed supposes them reasonable and credible) that we now attempt to demonstrate. In what manner the influence, by which the penmen of the scriptures were directed, affected them, we pretend not fully to explain. It is enough for us to know, that thereby they were infallibly guided and determined to declare what they did not formerly know; to conceive properly of what they had formerly known; and to express their subject in terms absolutely just in themselves, and calculated to convey the truths represented to others. But so far as we may conclude, that, while the penmen exercised their own reason and judgment; Psal. xlv. 1; Mark xii. 36; Luke i. 3; Acts i. 1; 1 Pet. i. 11; the Holy Ghost (1) Effectually stirred them up to write; 2 Pet. i. 21. (2) Appointed to each his proper share or subject correspondent with his natural talents, and the necessities of the church in his time; 2 Pet. i. 21; Mat. xxv. 15. (3) Enlightened their minds and gave them a duly distinct view of the truths which they were to deliver; Jer. i. 11—16. and xiii. 9—14; Ezek. iv. 4—8; Dan. x. 1, 14; and ix. 22—27; and viii. 15—19; and xii. 8; Amos vii. 7, 8; and viii. 2; Zech. i. 19, 21; and iv. 11—14; and v. 6; 1 Pet. i. 10, 11; Eph. iii. 3, 4; John xvi. 13. Perhaps this illumination was given all at once to Paul, when caught up to the third heaven, but was bestowed gradually on the other apostles; Mark iv. 34; Luke xxiv. 17, 45; John xx. 22; Acts ii. 4; and x. 9—15, 28, 34. (4) He strengthened and refreshed their memories to recollect whatever they had seen or heard, which he judged proper to be inserted in their writings; John xiv. 26; Luke i. 3; Jer. xxxi. 3. (5) Amidst a multitude of facts, he directed them to write precisely what was proper for the edification of the church, and neither more nor less; John xx. 30, 31; and xxi. 25; Rom. xv. 4; 1 Cor. x. 6—11; Rom. iv. 23, 24. (6) He excited in their minds such images and ideas as had been treasured up in their memories, and directed them to other ends and purposes than themselves would ever have done of their own accord.—Thus, under inspiration, Amos draws his figures from herds, flocks, and fields; Paul makes use of his classical learning; Amos i—ix. Acts xvii. 28: 1 Cor. xv. 33; Tit. i. 12. (7) He immediately suggested and imprinted on their minds such things as could not be known by reason, observation, or information, but were matters of pure revelation; Isa. xlv. 9, 10; xli. 22, 23; and xlv. 21; whether they respected doctrines, 1 Tim. iii. 16; or facts past or future, Gen. i. ii. iii. Lev. xxvii. &c. (8) He so superintended every particular writer, as to render him infallible in his matter, words, and arrangement: and, by this superintending influence, made them all in connection so write, as to render the whole scripture, at any given period, a sufficient infallible rule to direct men to true holiness and everlasting happiness; Dent. viii. 4; Psal. xix. 7—11; cxix. and i. 2; John v. 39; Mat. xxii. 29; Luke xvi. 29, 31; Rom. xv. 4; 2 Tim. iii. 15—17. 2 Pet. i. 19. Many of the sentences recorded in scripture are not inspired in themselves, being the words of Satan or of wicked men; but the scripture report relative to these expressions is directed by divine inspiration. That our books of the Old and New Testament, the APOCRYPHAL TRACTS being excluded from both, are of an INFALLIBLE and DIVINE original, is thus evident:

I. The subject MATTER of them requires a divine inspiration. The history of the creation, and part of that of the flood, &c. therein related, were known only to God. Mysteries relative to the Trinity of persons in the Godhead; the covenant of grace; the incarnation of the Son of God; his undertaking, offices, and states, and our union with him; justification, adoption, sanctification, spiritual comfort, and eternal blessedness, in him; are therein declared;—which God only could comprehend or discover. The scheme of religion therein prescribed is so pure and benevolent, that God alone could devise or appoint it. While it represents the Most High as every where present, as infinitely perfect, powerful, wise, and good, holy, just, and true—an infinitely gracious lover of righteousness, and hater of iniquity,—as our bountiful Creator and Preserver, and as the infinitely merciful Redeemer of our souls, by the obedience and death of his only begotten Son,—it requires us to know, believe in, and revere, him with our whole heart, soul, mind, and strength as our Father, Friend, Husband, Saviour, and Portion, in Christ; and confidence to depend on him, and ask from him whatever we need in time or eternity; and to obey him in all that he commands, as children whom he hath begotten again to a lively hope, and established as the heirs of his everlasting inheritance. We are here taught how human nature may be truly improved and perfected, by our receiving Jesus Christ as made of God unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption,—as an effectual principle and root of true holiness;—and by our walking in him by faith, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously, and godly, patiently, contentedly, and cheerfully,—setting our affections upon things above, where Christ is, and through the Spirit mortifying every sinful and selfish inclination. We are taught to love our neighbours as ourselves,—perfectly fulfilling the particular duties of every relative station; and to lay aside all malice, envy, hatred, revenge, or other malevolent dispositions or passions; to love our enemies; to render good for evil, blessing for cursing; and to pray for them that despitefully use us. These laws of universal purity and benevolence are prescribed with an authority proper only to God, and extended to such a compass and degree as God alone can demand: and those sins are forbidden which God alone can observe or prohibit. The most powerful motives to duty, and dissuaves from vice, are here most wisely proposed, and powerfully urged; motives drawn from the nature, the promises, the threatenings, the mercies, and the judgments, of God; particularly from his kindness in the work of our redemption, and his new covenant relations to us in Christ; and from advantages or disadvantages, temporal, spiritual, and eternal. And, while the most excellent means of directing and exciting to, and of exercising, piety and virtue, are established in the most prudent forms and authoritative manner, the most perfect and engaging patterns of holiness and virtue are set before us in the example of Jesus Christ our Redeemer, and of God as reconciled in him, and reconciling the world to himself; Exod. xx. 1—17; Lev. xviii—xx. Dent. iv—xxv. Mat. v—vii. Rom. vi. xii—xv. Gal. v. vi. Eph. iv—vi. Col. iii. iv. 1 Thes. v. Tit. ii. James i—v. 1 Pet. i—v. 2 Pet. i. 1 John i—v. &c. &c.

II. The MANNER in which these subjects are exhibited in the scriptures is evidently divine;—wise, condescending, and yet majestic. The discoveries have been gradual, as men stood in need of them, or were in a proper condition to receive them; Gen. iii. ix. xii. xvii. &c. Heb. i. 1. The principal points; as of God's new covenant grant of himself to sinful men; his full satisfaction in and with Christ as our Mediator; and the law of the ten commandments; were declared from heaven with uncommon solemnity; Mat. iii. 17; and xvii. 5; Exod. xx. 1—18; &c.—And, while these and other similar truths are announced in a style the most plain and simple, there appears therein something astonishingly sublime and majestic.—While the dictates are authorized with a THUS SAITH THE LORD, the very style, particularly in scripture songs, Job, Psalms, Lamentations, and Isaiah, and in our Saviour's discourses, &c. is at once surprisingly suited to the dignity of the Author, the nature of the subject, and the condition of the persons addressed.

III. The manifest scope of the scriptures is to render sin loathsome and hated, and to promote holiness and virtue;—to humble men, and reform them from their beloved lusts and sinful practices, and to exalt and glorify God to the highest. No good angel nor man could dare to personate God in the manner of the scriptures: nor could bad angels or men publish, and so warmly inculcate, what is so remarkably contrary to their own vicious inclinations and honour. It therefore remains that God alone must be the author and inditer of them.

IV. Notwithstanding the dictates of scripture are so extremely contrary to the natural inclinations of mankind, and were published without any concert by various persons, of very different conditions, and in different ages and places, yet such is the marvellous HARMONY of all the parts, in their whole matter and scope, as irrefragably demonstrates that these penmen must all have been directed by the same Spirit of God. One part of our Bible is so connected with, and tends to the establishment of, another, that we cannot reasonably receive any part without receiving the whole. In the New Testament we have the historical narrative of the fulfilment of the typical and verbal predictions of the Old. In both Testaments the subsequent books, or subsequent parts of a book, are connected with that which went before, as a narrative of the execution of a scheme begun, or of the fulfilment of a prophecy declared. If we receive the history, we must also receive the prediction. If we admit the prediction, we must believe the history. To a diligent searcher of the scriptures, it cannot fail to occasion a most pleasant astonishment, to find every where the same facts supposed, related, or prepared for; the same doctrines of a gracious redemption through Jesus Christ exhibited, or supposed to be true; the same rules or exemplifications of piety and virtue, and motives thereto; the same promises of mercy, or threatenings of just misery, to persons, societies, or nations, exhibited without a single contradiction. When there is an appearance of contradiction, it will be found that the different passages do not respect the same thing or person, in the same respect, and in the same circumstances of time, place, or manner; and so there is no contradiction at all.

V. The manifest CHARACTER of the PENMEN further evinces the divine original of the scriptures. They every where discover the utmost candour and disinterestedness; they every where candidly publish the infirmities, or even faults, of themselves, their friends, and nation. None of them ever gained any thing in this world by their work but trouble and vexation of and, according to their own principles, they could obtain nothing in the next but everlasting destruction, if they indulged themselves in any imposture. The matter and manner of their work infinitely transcended their abilities. Setting their predictions aside for a moment, how could men of the best education, and especially men of no education, form such exalted schemes of sense, piety, and virtue; Or how could wicked men, inspired by Satan, publish and prosecute such a scheme of mystery, holiness, and morality! Such is the character of Jesus Christ, drawn by the four evangelists, with every mark of simplicity and candour, and in which ignominious suffering is made a leading article, that the delineation thereof, and that too by persons of no uncommon knowledge, without a real and exactly answerable model, would to every unbiassed free-thinker, appear more incredible and impossible than even the incarnation, obedience, and death, of the Son of God, therein attested, however astonishing.

VI. The providence of God has, in a most marvellous manner, PRESERVED the scriptures of the Old and New Testament from being lost or corrupted. While perhaps millions of other books, once of considerable fame in the world, and which no one sought to extirpate, are lost and forgotten, the scriptures, though more early written, and though Satan and his agents unnumbered have hated them, and sought to cause their memory to perish from among men, or to corrupt them, still remain, and remain in their purity. In great wisdom and kindness, God, for their preservation, ordered an original copy to be laid up in the holy of holies;

Deut. xxi. 26; and that every Hebrew king should write out a copy for himself; Deut. xvii. 18; and appointed the careful and frequent reading of them, both in private and public. With astonishing kindness and wisdom he made the contending parties who had access to the scriptures—such as the Jews and Israelites, the Jews and Samaritans, the Pharisees and Sadducees, the Jews and Christians, and the various parties of Christians—MUTUAL CHECKS upon each other for almost three thousand years past; that they might not be able either to extirpate or to corrupt any part of them. When the Christians had almost utterly lost the knowledge of the Hebrew originals, God, by his providence, stirred up the Jewish rabbins to an uncommon labour for preserving them in their purity, by marking the number of letters, and how often each was repeated, in their Masoras. By what tremendous judgments did he restrain and punish Antiochus Epiphanes the Syro-grecian king, Dioclesian the Roman emperor, and others, who attempted to destroy the copies of scripture, in order to extirpate the Jewish or Christian religion! And he has bestowed amazing support and consolation on such as have risked or parted with their lives rather than deny the dictates of scripture, or in the least contribute to their extirpation or misinterpretation. By quickly multiplying the copies or the readers of the scriptures, he rendered it impossible to corrupt them in any thing important, without causing the corruption all at once to start up into every copy dispersed through the world, and into the memories of almost every reader;—than which nothing could be more absurd to suppose. Nay, it is observable that, of all the thousands of various readings which the learned have collected, not one in the least enervates any point of our faith or duty towards God or man.

VII. Multitudes of MIRACLES, which only the infinite power of God could effect, have been wrought for the confirmation of the doctrines and facts mentioned in the scriptures, and for evincing the divine mission of the principal publishers thereof. The wisdom and goodness of God required him, especially when, in the days of Moses and Christ, he was establishing a new form of worship, to mark the important declarations of his will with some distinguishing characteristics, awakening to consideration. Nothing appears more proper for this end than a series of uncontrolled miracles, which no power could check, and which supported nothing but what was agreeable to reason, so far as it could conceive of it. Neither reason nor experience can admit that the infinite wisdom and goodness of God could permit one, much less multitudes, of uncontrolled miracles to be wrought for the confirmation of falsehood. But the miracles wrought in confirmation of the scriptures have every favourable circumstance that could be wished. Their number was almost beyond reckoning, and all of them calculated to answer some great and benevolent end. According to the nature of the broken law, many of those, wrought by Moses, Elijah, and Elisha, were tremendous and dreadful. According to the nature of the gospel which they published, the miracles wrought by Jesus Christ and his apostles were generally of a benevolent nature and tendency. Moreover, most of the miracles mentioned in scripture were performed in so public a manner, that both friends and foes had the fullest access to a thorough examination of their nature and certainty. Most of them were wrought when the concurrent circumstances of Providence loudly called mankind to observe and examine them.—Most of them—as the passage of the Hebrews through the Red Sea and through Jordan; the forty years' sustenance of the people in the Arabian desert, by manna from heaven and water from a rock; the stoppage or retrograde motion of the sun; the feeding of thousands with a few loaves and fishes; and the raising of dead persons—were of such a nature, that nothing less than absurdity itself can suppose the senses of the witnesses to have been deceived, or that any power less than divine could have produced them. Besides, all these miracles were wrought in confirmation of a religion the most holy, pure and benevolent; and most of them by persons who were eminent patterns of virtue. And that such miracles were wrought, is in part attested by the inveterate enemies thereof, whether Jews or heathens.

VIII. THE PROJECT of reforming mankind by the scriptures, and the manifest success thereof, is a continued miraculous proof of their divine original. What, but a certain evidence of his divine commission, could have made Moses risk his character—that, on the sixth day of the week, the whole Hebrew nation in the wilderness should always find manna sufficient for two days, and that the sixth year should always produce a double crop; and, on that supposition, enact a standing law, that they should never attempt to gather manna on the seventh day, or to cultivate their fields on the seventh year. Without certain assurance of divine protection from their inveterate enemies on every hand, on those occasions, could he ever have required that all their males, able to walk, should, three times every year, leave their homes, and assemble to keep the sacred festivals near the middle of their country? Without manifest warrant from God, could he ever have hoped that there would be a sufficiency of males in Aaron's family to execute the priesthood for all Israel, free from all those blemishes which he marks out as excluding from that office? Without this, could he ever have hoped that the small country of Canaan could afford sustenance for his numerous nation, while they were debarred from so many kinds of eatables, and were required to give yearly so much of the product to the Lord?—THE PROJECT of Christianity, and its success, are still more astonishing. Nothing less than a certain warrant and almighty influence from God could effect the one or the other. How is it possible that a few men, weak or villanous, without the smallest assistance from worldly influence, could ever form a scheme to reform the whole world from principles and practices, deep-rooted in their inclination, and firmly established by extensive custom, by long confirmed laws, and the high and universal authority of nations,—by mere declarations of what they thought true?—nay, by what they knew to be falsehood if they were impostors! How could villains, or even the weakest, choose for their hero One who had been always condemned, and had lately been crucified between thieves as a noted malefactor, by the common consent of his own countrymen!—One who, if he was not God in our nature, had abused his disciples' confidence, and decoyed them into a train of temporal and eternal miseries!—One who had never encouraged them to hope for any thing in this world, in following him, but crosses, hatred, reproach, imprisonment, tortures, and death;—nor, if they indulged themselves in a fraudulent prosecution of their cause, for any thing in the future state but everlasting destruction! How stupendous, and absolutely incredible, that a few villanous projectors of reformation should begin their work, a few weeks after, in the very place where, among the very multitude by whom Jesus their hero had been ignominiously crucified;—and should in the most public and undaunted manner, in the face of danger and death, avow him to be the Son of God; and to have risen from the dead, ascended to heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God;—that, amidst the deepest poverty, cruel hatred, calumnious reproach, and inhuman persecution from enemies, they should, with unwearied zeal and cheerfulness, carry on their project, never appearing to covet any outward honour or wealth;—and that they should form a system of doctrines and morals, infinitely superior, in sense and dignity, to all the productions of Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, and other renowned doctors of the heathen world! How astonishing is it, that these few preachers, without the smallest encouragement from earthly powers, should so triumph over the craft, the rage, and power, of the infuriated Jews; triumph over the pride, the policy, and power, of the Roman empire, when at its full strength and maturest sagacity;—over the pride of learning, and the obstinacy of ignorance, hatred, prejudice, and lust;—over the hardened inclinations, deep-rooted customs, and long-fixed laws, of Jews and heathens;—and that, contrary to every temptation from outward advantage, nay, notwithstanding every conceivable form of opposition, the gospel should, within a few years after Christ's ascension, be preached in almost every corner of the Roman empire and the countries adjacent;—and that multitudes, at the hazard of every temporal loss or punishment from men, should readily believe, constantly adhere to, and cheerfully and strictly practise, the same! And it is equally astonishing that, for more than seventeen hundred years, notwithstanding innumerable persecutions, together with the wickedness of professors, and the inconceivable villanies or base indifference of the clergy, this project has been more or less successful in reforming the hearts and lives of multitudes in almost every nation of importance under heaven.

IX. Nothing more clearly demonstrates the divine authority of the scriptures than the exact fulfilment of the typical and verbal predictions therein exhibited, in the most circumstantial manner, hundreds or thousands of years before that fulfilment took place, or there was the smallest appearance of it. Predictions (especially as above circumstantiated) necessarily imply a looking with certainty through an infinity of possible events, and seeing and determining what shall certainly happen and what not. Such foresight and determination can only take place in the omniscient and almighty Governor of the world, who alone can declare the end from the beginning. To mark the all-seeing JEHOVAH, the author of scripture, its pages are crowded with predictions, the exact fulfilment of which is recorded in the inspired and other histories written since the events took place. Almost every historical passage in our bible is a narrative of something antecedently foretold. The New Testament is little else than a representation of the fulfilment of the types and predictions of the Old, relative to Jesus Christ and his gospel church. Nay, the histories of churches and nations, from the beginning to the end of the world, do, to a judicious observer, represent little more than the fulfilment of scripture predictions, as to the families of Adam and Noah; the Canaanites, Amalekites, Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Egyptians, Ethiopians, Syrians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Tartars, including Goths, Huns, and Turks; and especially the Jews, Jesus Christ, the New Testament Church, and Antichrist; as shall be hereafter manifested. This proof, drawn from the fulfilment of predictions, increases in evidence more and more as that fulfilment takes place and is observed. The dispersion and misery of the Jewish nation, so long continued, or so often repeated; the progress and continuance of the gospel among the Gentiles; the long-continued dominion of the popes, and the partial revolt from it at the reformation; the past and present condition of the Turkish empire; the present state of Assyria, Chaldea, Arabia, Phenicia, Canaan, Egypt, &c. in exact correspondence to scripture predictions, are standing testimonies of the divine original of our bibles, no less conclusive and striking than if we had miracles wrought every day.

X. Though the above arguments are sufficient to silence gainsayers, and to produce a rational conviction that the scriptures are of divine original and authority, it is only the effectual application of them to our mind, conscience, and heart, in their SELF-EVIDENCING DIVINE LIGHT and POWER, which can produce a cordial and saving persuasion that they are indeed the word of God. But, when thus applied, this word brings along with it such light, such authority, and such sanctifying and comforting power, that there is no shutting our eyes nor hardening our hearts against it; no possibility of continuing stupid and unconcerned under it: but the whole faculties of our soul are necessarily affected with it, as indeed marked with divine evidence, and attended with almighty power; 1 Thes. i. 5; and ii. 13; John vi. 63.

CHAPTER. II.

Of rules for understanding the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments.

I. LET us labour, in much fervent prayer and supplication, for the powerful influence and habitation of the Holy Ghost, (who perfectly understands the scriptures, and indited and appointed them for our spiritual edification), that he may effectually interpret and apply them to our heart. He is the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Christ; He it is who searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God:—He is the anointing, that is Truth, and teacheth all things. He can enlighten our eyes, and make us to know the things freely given us of God, and to see wondrous things out of God's law; can make us, by the scriptures, wiser than our teachers—wise unto salvation; Eph. i. 17, 18; and iii. 16—19; 1 Cor. ii. 10, 12; 1 John ii. 20, 27; Ps. cxix. 18, 96—108; 2 Tim. iii. 15—17.

II. Being renewed in the spirit of our minds, and having in us the mind of Christ, we ought, under a deep sense of God's presence and authority in the scripture, earnestly, and with much self-denial, to search the scriptures, by much serious reading and meditation thereon; chiefly that we may spiritually know the mind, behold the glory, and feel the effectual power, of God therein, in order to our faith in and obedience to them. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: it is the man who feareth God to whom he will teach his way, and reveal the secrets of his covenant:—it is the man who hath the Spirit of Christ, the mind of Christ—who hath seen the Lord; and tasted that he is gracious—the man who hath had his eyes open, that can discern, judge of, and understand, the matter or manner of scripture revelations; 1 John ii. 20, 27; Ps. xxv. 12, 14; 1 Cor. ii. 14—16; John xiv. 21—23; Luke xxiv. 45; Ps. cxix. 18. A deep sense of our ignorance, and of our absolute need of scripture influence, must animate us to the earnest study of knowledge. He, who thinks that of himself he knows divine things to any purpose, knoweth nothing as he ought to know—only with the lowly is wisdom. God, who resisteth the proud, giveth grace to the humble: the meek will he guide in judgment: the meek will he teach his way. The mysteries of the kingdom he hides from the self-conceited, wise, and prudent; and reveals them unto babes; 1 Cor. viii. 2; Prov. xi. 2; James iv. 6; Ps. xxv. 9; Mat. xiii. 11; and xi. 25. Scarcely can any thing tend more effectually to blind the mind, and harden the heart, than the searching of the scriptures in a philosophical manner, regarding merely or chiefly the rational sense of the passage. Hence multitudes of preachers, who daily study the scriptures for the sake of their external performances, are of all men the most ignorant how Christ's words are spirit and life. The god of this world blinds their minds; so that, hearing many things, they never open their eyes, and seeing many things, they never behold one truth, or the subject thereof, in its glory; Isa. lvi. 10 vi. 9, 10; and xlii. 18, 19; 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

III. We must earnestly study to reduce all our scriptural knowledge to practice. Not any number of the best rules can make an apprentice to understand his business so much as a considerable practice therein. When serious contemplation of scripture and experimental feeling and practice of it meet together, true scriptural knowledge must needs be greatly enlarged and sweetened. The man that doth Christ's will, he shall know of his doctrine whether it be of God. If God's commandments be ever with us, and be kept by us, they will render us wiser than our enemies, wiser than the ancients, or even our teachers; John vii. 16, 17; Ps. cxix. 98, 100.

IV. In searching the scriptures, we must proceed in an orderly manner; beginning with that which is most plain and practical; and afterwards study that which is more difficult and obscure. To recommend this method, the FIRST PART of both Testaments is chiefly HISTORICAL, plainly declaring what things had been done; and intermingled with plain directions how the more necessary duties ought to be done. Of this kind are the books of the Old Testament from GENESIS to ESTHER inclusively, and the first five books of the New. These ought carefully to be studied, as there are manifold references and allusions to that which is contained in them in the other books. Nay, even in the subsequent histories, there is frequent mention of, or allusion to, the creation, flood; deliverance from Egypt; captivity in Babylon; birth, life, and death, of Christ. The SECOND PART of both Testaments, i. e. from JOB to the SONG of SOLOMON inclusively in the Old, and all the EPISTLES in the New, consist chiefly of DOCTRINAL declarations of the nature, perfections, purposes, and works, of God: of the person and mediation of Jesus Christ, and the way of salvation through him; and of man in his innocent, fallen, recovered, and eternal, state;—mingled with commands and directions how to behave answerably to the relations and providences of God towards us;—together with manifold hints of the conduct of God, and the cases of his people. The LAST PART in both Testaments is chiefly PROPHETICAL, declaring before-hand the mercies and judgments which should take place all along, till the end of the world;—but intermingled with manifold charges of guilt, as the cause of the judgments threatened;—and with historical hints of the circumstances or fulfilment of the predictions; and directions how to behave aright. This part, generally relating to things then future, is naturally most obscure. It is even necessary that it should be so that the persons concerned might be induced to a careful expectation of, and preparation for, the events; and that men might be the less able to counterfeit or to attempt preventing some of them.

V. It is of great use to form in our mind a brief collection of the most plain and important histories, doctrines, laws, and predictions, of scripture, which may serve as a kind of standard and criterion for understanding of others. Thus a fixed view of the creation; the fall of man; the flood; the calling of Abraham; the fate of Joseph; the Israelites' entrance into, and deliverance from, Egypt; their travels in the wilderness; settlement in Canaan; change of their government by judges into that by kings; division of their kingdom into two; their captivities into Assyria and Babylon;—and of the birth, life, death, and resurrection, of Jesus Christ; and of the spread of the gospel, which followed by means of the remarkable effusion of the Holy Ghost;—will greatly contribute towards our right understanding of other historical points, and even of many predictions. We should endeavour to obtain a compendious view of the nature of God, as a Spirit, infinite, eternal, unchangeable, in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth; subsisting in three distinct persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; and who has, in his eternal decree, fore-ordained whatsoever comes to pass; and, in execution of that decree, forms all things into being in creation, and preserves and governs them therein by his providence:—And of man, who, being created perfectly holy, and admitted into a covenant of friendship with his Maker, did, by disobedience to God, render himself, and all his natural posterity, sinful and miserable: that they, being utterly incapable, as well as unwilling, to recover themselves, God, of his mere and unbounded grace and mercy, formed a new covenant, in which his own Son was made their Mediator, Surety, Saviour, and Redeemer! their Prophet, to instruct them; their Priest, to offer sacrifice and intercede for them; and their King, to subdue, rule, and defend, them;—that, in consequence of his obedience, suffering, and glorification, they may, by his Spirit, be effectually called, justified, adopted, sanctified, comforted, and glorified;—And of the ten commandments, or of Christ's summary of them; Mat. xxii. 37, 38; and vii. 12.—Or those scriptures commonly annexed to the Assembly's Shorter Catechism may serve as a criterion for understanding the doctrines and laws of scripture.—Such a brief summary of divine truth is the analogy or proportion of faith; Rom. xii. 6; is the delineation, draught, platform, pattern, or form, of sound words, which ought to be held fast in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus; Rom. vi. 17; 2 Tim. ii. 13.—By attention to it we may immediately discern when texts are plain or when they are figurative. Thus, if bodily members be ascribed to God, it will teach us to understand them as representing his spiritual excellencies, since God himself is a Spirit. If God be said to deceive men, or to harden them in sin, it will teach us to understand those texts only of his permitting men to be deceived and hardened by Satan and their own lusts—since God is infinitely holy. If the sacramental elements be called Christ's body and blood, it will teach us to understand them as signs and seals of his person and righteousness; but not as transubstantiated into his material body and blood—since the heavens contain him till the end of the world; Acts iii. 21. If the scriptures represent saints as exposed to punishments for sin, or as obtaining rewards by their gracious tempers and good works, it will teach us to consider both in that form in which saints meet with them, i. e. as purchased for them by the blood of Christ, as bestowed by God's redeeming love, and suited to their state as persons indissolubly married to Christ, and adopted into the family of God; &c.

VI. Not only must every text be understood in harmony with the analogy of faith, or general plan of revealed truth, but also in agreement with the plain scope and tendency of the passage, chapter, or book, where it lies. This plain scope must therefore be earnestly searched out and observed in an accurate observance of the contents of each book or chapter. Thus the scope of the historical books of the Old Testament is to represent the fate of his Hebrew people; and therefore every text thereof ought to be understood in agreement with this. The scope of the Psalms is to express the saints' exercises, and to acknowledge God as blessed in himself, and the author of all blessedness to men; and in reference to these ought every text therein to be understood. The scope of the Proverbs is to teach men wisdom and discretion; of Ecclesiastes, to point out the insufficiency of all created enjoyments to render men happy; of the Song of Solomon, to exhibit the kind and familiar fellowship between Christ and his people: and therefore, in agreement with this scope, ought the several texts in each of them to be understood. The scope of the prophetic parts, in both Testaments, is to warn the church of her dangers on account of sins, and to encourage her hopes of preservation under, and deliverance from, the greatest tribulations. The scope of the gospels, by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, is to exhibit Jesus Christ as the Son of God and promised Messiah, that we might believe in him to the saving of our soul. The general scope of the Epistles is to point out our need of a Saviour, and the blessings which we receive through him; and to direct us how to improve these aright in our personal practice, relative duties, and ecclesiastical fellowship. More particularly, the scope of the Epistles to the Romans and Galatians is to establish the doctrine of justification by the imputed righteousness of Christ, and to teach us how to improve it. The scope of those to the Corinthians is to redress contentions and disorders among church members:—of those to Timothy and Titus, to direct church officers:—of that to the Hebrews, to manifest Christ's headship over the church, and his fulfilment and wise abolition of the typical ceremonies:—of James, to shew the vanity of pretending faith without exercising good works:—of Peter and Jude, to warn their Jewish brethren of the approaching ruin of their nation, and of their duty with respect to it:—of John, to comfort them in their distress, and enable them to examine themselves fully. The particular texts ought therefore always to be understood in reference to the manifest scope of each Epistle, and the particular passage of it.

VII. The various texts which are similar, either in words or in signification, or even which represent a similar subject, ought to be carefully compared. On almost every subject a multitude of phrases will be found, which, when compared, do amazingly illustrate, and, as it were, support one another. The truth, which is more darkly represented in one passage, is represented more clearly in others.—Part of the attributes or circumstances of persons or things is so represented in one text, and part of them in another, that only by searching the several scriptures, and connecting them together in our view, can we obtain a true or just apprehension of them. In particular, the types of the Old Testament must be compared with their antitypes in the New. The predictions must be compared with the history of their fulfilment. And the passage, in which the point is purposely handled, ought to be chiefly attended to in the comparison; as Gen. i. on creation; Rom. iii. iv. v. on justification, &c.—To carry this comparison of scripture texts one with another, to a due extent, or a due degree of exactness, will perhaps appear very difficult; but, the more it is practised, it will become the more easy and pleasant. The inexpressible advantage which attends it will infinitely more than compensate the toil.—Herein the serious inquirer has the Spirit of God for his director, the lively oracles of God for his commentary. He has the pleasure of discovering the truth for himself in God's own light. And the discovery which he thus makes, by humbly searching the scriptures, is inexpressibly more agreeable than merely to have met with it at random in some commentator. Being acquired by care and labour, it generally fixes itself much more firmly in the mind. And, while we are thus occupied in comparing the several texts, we may humbly expect that the Holy Ghost will illuminate all with his glory, and apply all to the heart.

VIII. We ought never to content ourselves with a general view of any text, or of the words of it, abstractly considered; but should search out what is therein chiefly and emphatically intended by the Spirit of God as it stands in such a particular connection.—Thus thousands of unexpected beauties will appear to our view. Never are the oracles or the truths of God seen in their real and manifold glory but when they are viewed in their proper connections. The glory of redeeming grace is never justly conceived of unless it be viewed as abounding where sin had abounded—as reigning unto eternal life where sin had reigned unto death; Ps. cvi. Ezek. xvi. xx. Rom. iii. v. Eph. ii. Men's wickedness is never justly perceived without viewing it in connection with that God against whom, and that goodness against which, it is committed; Deut. xxxii. Rom. ii. 4. Gospel holiness is never rightly understood but when viewed in connection with that state of salvation in which, the gracious principles and motives from which, the manner in which, and the end to which, it is performed. The history of typical persons or events, and the form of typical ordinances, are never properly understood but in connection with their antitypes.—Never can we discern the sovereignty of the grace, or the seasonableness of the mercies or judgments, of God without carefully observing the connection, when, where, and after what, the mercy or judgment happened. Nay, never are the oracles of God rightly received but when viewed in their proper connection with Jesus Christ, as the author matter, and end, of them. This connection of the sacred oracles is often contained in a small particle; AND, THEN, THEREFORE, BECAUSE, IN, BY, TO, THROUGH, &c.; and sometimes we are left to collect it from the station in which one thing is placed with another. We ought therefore not only to weigh every word of the Holy Ghost, but carefully to mark how things stand joined one with another. Thus, by observing the context, 1 Pet. iv. 18, we learn that the saving of the righteous with difficulty relates to their escaping when the Jewish nation was destroyed, not to their spiritual salvation: and that the eating doubtingly, Rom. xiv. 23, relates immediately to the partaking of common meats, not to the receiving of the Lord's supper.

IX. Christ Jesus being the great subject and end of scripture revelation, we ought every where to search if we can find him. The scriptures testify of him; John v. 39. To him give all the prophets witness; Acts x. 43. In Moses, in the Psalms, and in the prophets, there are things concerning him; Luke xxiv. 27, 44. His name is the Word of God; and the scripture is but the testimony of Jesus; Rev. xix. 10, 13. It is but a gradual revelation of him, answerable to the counsels of God as a God of order,—answerable to the growing state of the church, and of every saint on earth. Scripture history does but exhibit men's need of Christ, and God's preparation of the world for him. Scripture genealogies do but direct to the line of Christ, and thus mark him out as the promised Messiah. Scripture chronology does but mark the seasons of Christ, the times of promise, and days of power. He is the end and fulfilment of all scripture laws; Rom. x. 4; Gal. iv. 24. Gospel declarations are but the exhibitions of him as the light and life of the world. In Christ all the promises are yea and amen; 2 Cor. i. 20. What then can be more absurd, more unchristian, than to overlook, or to evade the discerning of, Jesus Christ; especially when the description and work cannot agree to another; But, after all, we must take heed to discern him only in the manner he is really represented by the Holy Ghost, and no other. To fix spiritual meanings upon phrases which were never immediately intended by the Holy Spirit in them, is to profane the scripture, and expose it to contempt. But, where Jesus Christ and his fulness are immediately exhibited, we must conceive of them as thus exhibited. Where he is but indirectly exhibited, it is only in that manner we must apprehend him there. Where he is represented in a type, we must discern him through that type as a medium.

X. As to the infinite mind of the Holy Ghost every subject and every event are at once perfectly in view, his words in scripture ought always to be understood in the fullest latitude of signification that the analogy of faith and of the context can admit. Historical hints must be understood as relating to every thing similar preceding the date, unless the context restrict them. God's nourishing and bringing up children, Is. i. 2, includes all the favours he had done for the Jewish nation from the call of Abraham, Gen. xii. to the date of the prophecy. Their rebelling against God must include all their wickedness in, and after their deliverance from, Egypt till Isaiah uttered these words. Sometimes a phrase does not only relate to both church and state, but at once represents the sinful crime and the wrathful punishment thereof. Thus, Isa. i. 5, The whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint, &c. may at once denote the sinfulness of the church and nation among all ranks, high and low, and in every person; and likewise the miserable state of both under Ahaz, &c. Figures relating to the church, as in the Song of Solomon, &c. and manifold promises relating to it, ought to be applied to it as the visible mystical body of Christ; and also to every particular member of it. And these figures and promises ought to be understood in one manner when applied to the church, and in another manner when applied to a particular soul.—The same promises or threatenings frequently relate to both church and state; in which case they are to be understood in one view when applied to the former, and in another view when applied to the latter. Thus most of the promises and threatenings, which respect the Jewish nation, are to be understood in both these views. The predictions which we have in Rev. vi. viii. relate to the Christian church and to the Roman state. The predictions we have in Rev. ix. 1—11, relate to the power of the popes in the west, and of the Mahometans in the east.—Predictions ought to be considered as fulfilled in every event posterior to their date which can correspond with their terms and context. Types, so far as they prefigure things future, must be understood in the same latitude. Thus most of the Old Testament histories are again verified in antitypes, with respect to their antitypical fulfilment. And thus the predictions relative to David, Solomon, the Jewish nation, &c. beside their immediate fulfilment on these objects, have an antitypical accomplishment in Christ and his gospel church.—The prediction of the enmity between Jesus Christ and his people on the one hand, and the devil and his subjects on the other, Gen. iii. 15, has its fulfilment, in all the contentions between these parties, from the fall of man till the end of the world, whether in a single person or a social capacity. The prediction of trouble to mankind, particularly women, Gen. iii. 16—19, has its accomplishment in all the painful conceptions, child-birth, nursing, &c. of women;—in all their subjection to, and ill usage by, men;—and in all the troubles of persons, families, or nations;—in all the storms, earthquakes, bad seasons, scanty crops, &c. which happen. The prediction of Noah, concerning the fate of his sons, Gen. ix. 25—27, has had its accomplishment in the fate of mankind ever since. The prediction of men's being blessed in Abraham or in his seed, Gen. xii. 3, and xxii. 18, has been fulfilled in his and his posterity's usefulness to render men pious or happy; but chiefly in the Gentiles' salvation through Jesus Christ; and even in the outward happiness of nations where the gospel has been received. The predictions of God's giving Canaan to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and their seed, Gen. xii. 7, and xiii. 15, &c. was not only fulfilled in God's bringing the Hebrews into, and continuing them for many ages in, that country, but also in his bringing multitudes of chosen men into a new covenant state, the gospel church, and the heavenly glory. The predictions of Moses, in Lev. xxvi. Deut. xxviii.—xxxiii. not only had their fulfilment in the diversified sinning and repenting, and in the mercies and judgments which have or shall befall the Jewish nation, but in whatever similar hath or shall befall the gospel church and the members thereof; nay, in the eternal happiness of saints and ruin of sinners. The predictions of destruction to their enemies of Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, &c. not only have had their fulfilment in the diversified disasters of these nations, but perhaps also an antitypical fulfilment in the disasters of Antichrist and other enemies of the gospel church.—The predictions of distress or prosperity, announced to the Jews by Amos, Micah, Isaiah, &c. before the Assyrian invasion, had different steps of fulfilment. (1) In the invasion under Hezekiah, and the merciful deliverance therefrom, and the reformation and prosperity which followed. (2) In the invasion of their kingdom under Manasseh, and the deliverance therefrom, and the reformation and prosperity under Josiah. (3) In their captivity in Babylon, and deliverance therefrom, and the prosperity which ensued. (4) In their harassments under the Syro-grecians and the Romans, and the present long dispersion and the future deliverance therefrom. (5) In the erection of the gospel church. (6) In the entrance into, and happiness of, the thousand years' reign of the saints. And (7) In the happiness of the church in the eternal state. The like prophecies, by Isaiah, Micah, Zephaniah, Obadiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, after the Assyrian invasion, had their fulfilment in the oppressive captivity of Babylon, and deliverance therefrom, and the prosperity which ensued; and in the other four subsequent steps already mentioned. Those by Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, related only to what followed the deliverance from Babylon. The predictions of Daniel, ch. ii. vii. ix. xi. xii. had, or shall have, their fulfilment in the rise, management, and ruin, of those respective empires. The majestic coming of Jesus Christ, predicted by himself, Mat. xxiv. Luke xx. and by the prophets, had, has, or will have, its accomplishment in his destruction of the Jewish nation—of the heathen empire of Rome—of Antichrist—and in the final judgment of the world; in order to the erection or glorification of his church in these different periods. The predictions of the wickedness of the Antichristians or Papists, 2 Thes. ii. 2—11. 1 Tim. iv. 1—4. 2 Tim. iii. 1—6, &c. have their fulfilment in whatever similar happens in any period of Antichrist's progress or reign. The predictions of the church's happiness, in Rev. vii. xi. xix. xx. xxi. xxii. shall have their fulfilment, not only in the glorious millennium, but chiefly in the eternal state.—So many events being thus narrated, and especially foretold, in the same passage, it cannot reasonably be thought strange that the prophetic terms do not exactly agree to any one of the particular events or steps of fulfilment; they will nevertheless all agree to the whole fulfilment conjunctly taken. And the terms, which appeared too high or too low for one step of fulfilment, will appear exactly answerable to another step. What did not answer to the predictions, literally understood, will be found to have corresponded to them in a figurative and spiritual sense.

XI. The language of scripture, especially in the poetical and predictory parts, abounding with figures, it is necessary to have the knowledge of the principal of these fixed in our mind. The most remarkable figures of scripture language are (1) The name of ONE THING IS GIVEN TO ANOTHER, because of some connection with it, as its cause or effect, or as its subject or adjunct. Thus the temple is called Lebanon, because built of cedar wood from Lebanon; Zech. xi. 1. A heavenly frame is called the spirit, because produced by him; Rev. i. 10. The name of parents, Jacob, Israel, Moab, &c. is given to their posterity; Isa. xliii. 22; and xv. 1, 2, 5. A testimony is called the mouth; Deut. xvii. 6. Speech is called the tongue; Prov. xxv. 15. The benefits which God bestows are called his love or grace, because they proceed from it; 1 John iii. 1; John i. 16. The name of the effect is given to the cause: thus the gospel is called the power of God; Rom. i. 16. Esau's taking Canaanitish wives is called a grief, i. e. the cause of it; Gen. xxvii. 35. Faith is called victory over the world, i. e. the cause of it; 1 John v. 4. Samaria is called the transgression of Israel, and Jerusalem the high places of Judah, i. e. the cause thereof; Mic. i. 5. Wisdom and knowledge are called stability, because they are means of it; Isa. xxxiii. 6. The name of an act is given to its object: so God is called the fear, hope, trust, &c. of his people; Gen. xxxi. 53; Joel iii. 16. The name of what contains any thing is given to the thing contained: thus the inhabitants are called by the name of the city, the country, the world, &c. Jer. iv. 4, 14, 29; Gen. vi. 11. The liquor is called a cup; 1 Cor. xi. 25: and hence cup denotes a portion of mercy or judgment; Psal. xvi. 5; and xxiii. 4. Pullets are called a nest; Deut. xxii. 11. The dispositions, thoughts, desires, &c. are called the heart; Jer. xvii. 9; Ps. lxxii. 8.—What belongs to a person is called by his name: thus Christ's people are called Christ; 1 Cor. xii. 12. The Lord's oblations are called the Lord; Deut. x. 9; with Num. xviii. 8—31.—The name of the sign is given to the thing signified; as when the supreme authority is called a sceptre; Gen. xlix. 10; Zech. x. 11:—or of the thing signified to the sign: as when the elements in the Lord's Supper are called Christ's body and blood; 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25; or of a quality to that in which it is found: as when a crimson or scarlet coloured thing is called crimson and scarlet; or a field containing springs is called the upper and nether springs; Isa. i. 18; Josh. xv. 19.—The name is put for the person or thing named: thus the name of God, name of Christ, signify God himself, Christ himself; Deut. xxviii. 58; Acts iv. 12.—Sometimes also persons and things are named according as they appear, not as they really are: thus angels, appearing as men, are called men; Gen. xviii. xix. &c. The devil, resembling Samuel, is called Samuel; 1 Sam. xxviii. 14—20. Error is called a gospel, as it pretended to be one; Gal. i. 6. (2) By taking persons or things together, MORE UNIVERSAL TERMS ARE USED FOR MORE RESTRICTED ONES;—AS ALL for many, for all kinds, for some of every sort, for the greater or better part; Mat. iii. 5; and xix. 28. The world, earth, or whole world, for the Roman empire, for the Gentiles, for the wicked, for the Antichristians, for many; Luke ii. 1; Rom. i. 8; 1 John ii. 2; and v. 18; Rev. xiii. 3, 8; for Canaan; Rom. ix. 13. EVERY CREATURE for men, or many of them; Mark xvi. 15; Col. i. 23. NORTH is put for Chaldea, a country north-east of Jerusalem; Jer. i. 13, 15; Zech. vi. 8. BEFORE for the east side, RIGHT HAND for south side, &c. Isa. ix. 12. FOR EVER is put for a long time; Dan. ii. 4; Gen. xvii. 8, 13. Christ is said to die, be buried, rise again, &c. when it was only his body that died, &c. John xix. 29, 42.—Or more restricted terms are used for more universal ones; as one for all of the kind; Ps. i. 1. YESTERDAY for time past; Heb. xiii. 8. THRICE, SEVEN TIMES, TEN TIMES, for often, very often; 2 Cor. xii. 8; Ps. cxix. 169; Num. xiv. 22. A THOUSAND for very many; Isa. xxx. 17; Deut. xxxii. 30.—A part for the whole, as souls for persons; Acts ii. 43; Christ's resurrection for his whole appearance on earth, particularly after his death; Acts i. 22. AN HOUR, or DAY, for a period of time; John xiv. 23; and v. 25; Ps. xxxvii. 13. (3) THE EXPRESSION APPEARS TO MEAN MUCH LESS OR MUCH MORE THAN IS REALLY MEANT: thus in the ten commandments, especially those negatively delivered, and in most of the negative injunctions, much less is expressed than is really meant; Exod. xx. 3—17.—The Hebrew spies are represented as grasshoppers, i. e. very little; Numb. xiii. 33. The tops of towers or walls are represented as reaching up to heaven, when very high; Gen. xi. 4; Deut. ix. 1. Men are represented as the sand on the shore, as a sea, as the dust, as the dew, as the grass, the vapours of a cloud, &c. when very many; Gen. xiii. 16; 1 Sam. xiii. 5; Ps. cx. 3; and lxxii. 16. Plenty of a thing is represented as rivers of it; Job xxix. 6; Exod. iii. 8. Saul and Jonathan as swifter than eagles and stronger than lions; 2 Sam. i. 23. (4) Some expressions, being uttered with a DERISIVE AIR, have a signification directly contrary to their natural meaning; as Deut. xxxii. 38; 2 Sam. vi. 20; 1 Kings xviii. 27; and xxii. 15; Ps. xxii. 8; Eccl. xi. 9; Zech. xi. 13; Matt. xxvi. 45. (5) But no figure more abounds in scripture than METAPHOR, by which the names, qualities, or actions, proper to one person or thing, are attributed to another, because of some likeness between them. By this figure, and in order to accommodate to our weakness, almost the whole visible creation of God is formed into a representation of things spiritual and divine. By it Jehovah, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit; angels and men, in their different classes of good and bad; nations, churches, &c. are likened to human persons, in their parts, members, characters, stations; and even to animals, &c.—God's purposes, providence, covenants, word, law, gospel, ordinances, and blessings;—so also graces, sins, prosperity, adversity, life, death, resurrection, last judgment, and this world, heaven, hell, &c. are likened to things material, &c.—And, that we may have emblematical instructors ever before us, metaphors are drawn from God himself, and from angels, but chiefly from human persons; from animals and vegetables; from the celestial luminaries or airy meteors; from substances, fiery, liquid, or earthy; from means of human accommodation, houses, food, raiment, &c.; from times, typical institutions, &c. See SCRIPTURE METAPHORS. Two things are necessary to be always observed with respect to this figure:

(1) That the likening of any thing to another naturally produces a likening of the acts, relations, and attributes, of the thing compared, to the acts, attributes, and relations, of the thing to which it is compared; nay, the relations and acts themselves, of the persons or things compared, receive a correspondent figurative representation. Thus, when God or Christ is figuratively represented as a MAN, his attributes are consequently represented as hands, feet, eyes, ears, mouth, nostrils, bowels; and he is represented as thinking, speaking, walking, writing, sitting, standing, riding, flying, sleeping, &c. Ps. xx. 6; Isa. lx. 13; Heb. iv. 13; Ps. xxx. 2; Isa. i. 20; Ps. xviii. 8, &c.;—and as a father, master, husband, king, warrior, husbandman, builder, &c.; Mal. i. 6; Isa. lxiii. 16; liv. 5; xxxiii. 22;

and lxiii. 1; John xv. 1; Mat. xvi. 18. These again introduce other correspondent figurative representations. Under the notion of a FATHER, he is represented as begetting, adopting, teaching, loving, pitying, and providing for, and giving an inheritance to, his people; 1 Pet. i. 3; Eph. i. 5; Ps. xxxii. 8; and ciii. 13, &c. Under the notion of a MASTER, he is represented as having an house, chamber, servants; and the favours he bestows in consequence of obedience are called a reward; John xiv. 2; Song i. 4; Rev. xxii. 3, 12. Under the notion of an HUSBAND, he is represented as betrothing, affectionately loving, dwelling with, and providing for, his people; who are represented as his bride, spouse, bringing forth children, and the like; and their apostasy from him by idolatry, or other indulged iniquity, is called whoredom, and themselves represented as harlots; Jer. iii. Hos. ii. iii. Ezek. xvi. xxiii. Under the notion of a KING, he is represented as having subjects, armies, laws, sceptre, crown, throne, palace; Psal. cxlvi. xlv. cx. &c.—Under the notion of a WARRIOR, or CAPTAIN, he is represented as having armour, sword, bow, arrows, spear, helmet, &c. fighting with, and routing, his opposers; Hab. iii. Psal. xviii. xxxv. vii. Isa. lix. lxiii. and angels, clouds, &c. are represented as his horses or chariots. Under the notion of an HUSBANDMAN, he is represented as hiring labourers, and as plowing, planting, sowing, reaping, winnowing: churches or nations, as his fields, vineyard, garden, and corn; and the days of remarkable judgment are the harvest, vintage; Mat. xx. If he is represented as a FOWL, eagle, hen, &c. his perfections and providences are represented as wings, feathers; Psal. xci. 4; Mat. xxiii. 37. Under the figure of a RAVENOUS BEAST, lion, bear, leopard, he is represented as roaring, tearing, swallowing up, waiting to destroy, &c. Amos i. 2; Hos. v. 14; and xiii. 7, 8.—When the church in general is represented as a WOMAN, Christ is her head; young converts rooted in him her heirs; ministers, her eyes, neck, feet; divine oracles and ordinances, her breasts and ornaments; church members, her children or daughters: blameless ones, virgins; scandalous and apostate ones, harlots. But, when a particular saint is represented as a WOMAN, hope is the head; good works, the hair or feet; spiritual knowledge and faith, the eyes or ears; faith, the neck and hand; faith and love, the breasts; praise, prayer, and holy converse, the mouth or lips; love, the bowels; the affections and conversation, the feet; Christ's righteousness, implanted graces, bestowed gifts, and holy exercises, their robes and ornaments; Song i—viii. Psal. xlv. When the church is compared to a VISIBLE WORLD, Christ, or God in him, or his word, is the light, the sun; ministers, the stars; ordinances, the moon and clouds; divine doctrines and influences, the refreshing wind, rain, dew, wells, rivers; persecution and distress, the storms, winter, night, scorching noon; saints, the corn, green grass, fruitful shrubs or trees; and their works or rewards are their fruit; Song i. ii. iv. vi—viii. &c.—When nations are represented as a visible world, laws, rulers, and great men or idols, are figured out as the sun, moon, stars, mountains, principal trees or boughs, on which the subjects grow as berries, or sit as birds; and those of lower stations as the earth, air, sea, rivers, grass, stubble; and fearful judgments are the storms, earthquakes, eclipses, night, thunderings, lightnings, harvest vintage; Rev. vi. vii. viii. xiv. xvi. Isa. xxiv. Ezek. xxxi.—When nations are represented as a FAMILY, the country or chief city is the mother, the lesser ones the daughters; and if flourishing, or never taken, they are called virgins, and magistrates are the parents; Isa. xxiii. xlvii. Jer. xl—li. Ezek. xvi. xxiii.—When nations or armies are represented as FLOCKS and HERDS, their governors are the shepherds; great or valiant men the rams, bulls, he goats, fat ones, &c. Ezek. xxxiv. Jer. xxv.

(2) That in fixing the sense exhibited by a metaphor, the comparison ought never to be run too far, or into any thing which cannot be properly applied to the person or thing represented. And that which appears chiefly intended by the Spirit of God, and which is obviously figured out to us in the nature, form, or use, of the thing from which the metaphor is taken, ought to be chiefly attended to.—Thus, in metaphorical language, the term GOD represents angels, prophets, and magistrates, as God's deputies, and like him in dignity, glory, &c. Psalm xvii. 7.

Exod. xvii. 1; Psal. lxxxii. 1; but denotes devils, idols, or our belly, as worshipped and served instead of God; 2 Cor. iv. 4; Phil. iii. 19. ANGEL represents Christ, ministers, or magistrates, as bearers of God's message, or active performers of his work; Rev. ii. iii. viii. ix. xvi. xvii.—MAN, in what pertains to and is done by him, represents God in his excellencies and glorious works;—eyes denote his knowledge and pity; ears his knowledge or attention; mouth or lips, his word or authority; arms, hands, fingers, his power; heart, his purpose or love; bowels, his mercy; feet, his providential work; his face, his essential glory, or providential manifestation of himself, &c. Psalm xxxiv. 15, 16; Isa. i. 20; and xxv. 11, &c.—The frequent representation of God, by this emblem, at once exhibits JEHOVAH, in his new covenant relations and appearances, in the most endearing manner; and suggests the marvellous and everlasting inhabitation of his Son in our nature. But indwelling grace and corruption are represented as men, to denote their residence in our whole nature, and having in them what is similar to our several powers; Eph. iv. 22, 24. WOMEN represent what is comely, kind; or what is weak and dispirited; Song i. 8; Nah. iii. 13. VIRGINS represent professors or churches, as beautiful in their conversation, ordinances, or form: or cities and countries, glorious, prosperous, or never destroyed; Mat. xxv. Rev. xiv. Isa. xxiii. Jer. xvi. WIVES often figure out saints and churches, as united to Christ; rendered fruitful by him; or adulterously departing from him; Song i—viii. Jer. iii. Ezek. xvi. xxiii. TRAVELLING WOMEN represent God and Christ, as powerfully accomplishing remarkable events; Isa. xlii. 14; and liii. 10; but represent wicked men, as earnestly working mischief, or as rendered suddenly miserable; Psalm vii. 14; Isa. xiii. 8. USEFUL ANIMALS, as sheep, oxen, doves, represent Christ and his people, as social, patient, pure, peaceable, and as acceptable sacrifices to God; Mat. xxii. 4; John xxi. 17: but figure out wicked men, as stupid, thoughtless, worthless, and as miserable sacrifices to the vengeance of God; Isa. liii. 6; and xxxiv. 6. RAVENOUS ANIMALS, as eagles, lions, &c. represent God, Christ, and the saints, as courageous, powerful, active, or terrible; Hos. xiii. 8; Rev. v. 5; Prov. xxviii. 1; Isa. xl. 31: but figure out wicked men as crafty, malicious, mischievous, destructive; Psal. x. 9; and xxii. 20, 21:—and their claws, teeth, horns, denote their power and means of doing mischief; and so horns become emblems of kings, kingdoms, oppressors; Dan. vii. viii. Zech. i. 18. Animal flesh denotes spiritual or temporal blessings, as nourishing and strengthening; Isa. xxv. 6; Rev. xix. 21: indwelling grace denotes grace, as sensible, and easily impressed by God's influences; Ezek. xxxvi. 26: and indwelling corruption refers to it, as conveyed by natural generation, and as base, polluted, and putrifying; Gal. v. 17, 24. The CELESTIAL LUMINARIES, as lofty, illuminating, or refreshing, represent God, Christ, or his word, ordinances, ministers, people; Isa. lx. 19; Rev. viii. 12: but as scorching or blasting, they represent afflictions, distress, persecutions; Rev. vii. 16; and xvi. 8. VEGETABLES, plants, trees, corn, grass, flowers, represent Christ and his people, as divinely formed and influenced, comely, lively, fruitful, and useful; Song ii. iv. vi. vii.: but figure out wicked men as, in different stations, fruitful in wickedness, quickly blasted and destroyed by the wrath of God; Ezek. xxxi and xv. STONES figure out Christ and his people as prepared of God, precious, durable, firm, and useful in building the church; 1 Pet. ii. 4—6; Rev. xxi: but represent wicked men as insensible, obstinate, hurtful; Zech. vii. 12. MOUNTAINS represent Christ, his church, or ordinances, as lofty, openly exhibited, firmly fixed, and in their protecting, supporting, and satisfying, fulness; Isa. xxxii. 2; Job iii. 18: but also figure out difficulties opposition, and enemies, states, or cities; Rev. viii. xvii. WATER, rivers, seas, depths, floods, rain, dew, wind, fire, as pure, purifying, pleasant, or useful, denote Christ, his Spirit, word, ordinances; Isa. xxxii. 2; and xlv. 3, 4; Ezek. xxxvii. 9; Mat. iii. 11:—but, as ruinous or terrible, they denote fearful judgments, opposition, affliction; Psalm lxxix. 1, 2; Jer. iv. 11. Or COLOURS white represents purity, glory, freedom, priesthood, peace, victory: Rev. iii. 4: black or pale, terribleness, calamity, death, grief, filthiness; Rev. vi. 5, 8: green, comeliness, growth, fruitfulness, freshness; Song i. 16: red, scarlet, &c. what is terrible, bloody, murderous; Rev. vi. 4; Isa. i. 18.

XII. Where scriptures at first sight seem to contradict one another, we must, by a serious consideration of them, labour to discover their harmony. But, if we should not be able to reconcile them, we ought not to pronounce them irreconcilable, but rather attribute a deficiency to our own understandings. There can be no real contradiction, but when the different passages mean precisely the same person or thing, and precisely in the same respect and circumstance: no such contradiction is to be found in scripture. But, where there seems to be one, either (1) The same terms are used in a different sense in the different texts. Thus Paul directs to work out our salvation with fear and trembling, i. e. filial fear and holy awe; Phil. ii. 12. John says, there is no fear in love;—perfect love casteth out fear; i. e. slavish fear; 1 John iv. 18. The Samaritans feared the Lord; i. e. with a slavish dread;—and yet feared not the Lord; i. e. with a child-like, sincere, and holy, awe of him, or a right worshipping of him; 2 Kings xvii. 32—34. It is appointed for men once to die, i. e. a temporal death; Heb. ix. 27: and yet, if any one keep Christ's sayings, he shall never see death, i. e. eternal death; John viii. 51. A man is justified, i. e. before God, in his person and state, by faith, without the deeds of the law; Rom. iii. 28: and yet by works a man is justified, i. e. before men, and not by faith only; James ii. 24. Hatred of others is very sinful; Tit. iii. 3: and yet to hate our nearest relations, i. e. to love them less than we do Christ, is our duty; Luke xiv. 26. Or (2) The seemingly opposite texts really treat of different subjects. Thus the spirit of truth guided the apostles into all truth, i. e. in their doctrine; John xvi. 13: and yet Peter erred, and was to be blamed, i. e. in his practice; Gal. ii. 11—18. John Baptist was not Elias, i. e. not the prophet who lived under Ahab; John i. 21: and yet was the Elias foretold by Malachi, i. e. one in the spirit and power of the ancient Elijah; Mat. xi. 11, 12, 14, 18; Mark ix. 11—15; Luke i. 17; Mal. iv. 5. Or (3) In the seemingly opposite texts the same subject is considered in different parts or respects. Thus believers in Christ their Head, as justified in his righteousness, and in respect of their new nature, and what they aim at and shall quickly obtain, are all fair without spot; Song iv. 7; Jer. i. 20; Num. xxiii. 21; 1 John iii. 9; and v. 18: and yet in themselves, and with respect to remaining corruption in them, are all as an unclean thing,—carnal, sold under sin; Isa. lxiv. 6: Rom. vii. 14. In respect of his divine nature, Christ and his Father are one; John x. 30; 1 John v. 7. In respect of his divine person, he is his Father's equal and fellow; Phil. ii. 6; Zech. xiii. 7. But, in respect of his manhood and mediatory office, his Father is greater than he; John xiv. 28: is his Master; Isa. xlix. 3: his Head; 1 Cor. xi. 3: his God; Eph. i. iii.; John xx. 17: his Creator; Jer. xxxi. 22: his Portion; Psalm xvi. 5, 6. In respect of his divine nature, Christ is the Lord from heaven; 1 Cor. xv. 47: God over all; Rom. ix. 5. In his human nature, he is the fruit of the earth; Isa. iv. 2: the child born; Isa. ix. 6. Or (4) The seemingly opposite texts respect different times and places. Thus, during Christ's humiliation, the Spirit was not, i. e. was not remarkably poured out; John vii. 39: and yet after Christ's ascension he was poured out; Acts ii. 1 Thess. i. 5. Circumcision, and other Jewish ceremonies, were long necessary duties; Gen. xvii. 9, 10; Rom. iii. 1, 2. But, after their abolition, by the incarnation, obedience, death, and resurrection, of Christ, they became sinful rites; Gal. v. 2; and iv. 9—11; Isa. lxvi. 3.

Most of the seeming contradictions in scripture are found in the historical parts, where their connection with the great subject or scope of scripture is less considerable, and where the blunder of a transcriber, or of a printer, in a few letters, might be easily admitted, without really detracting from the honour of the oracles of God.—The apparent contradictions in the history appear owing to the same person's having different names, or the deed being done by different persons; to the one of which it is ascribed in one text, and to another in the other text; or deeds similar being really different. Reckoning of time is sometimes from one period, and sometimes from another; especially when some kings had, for some years, a conjunct reign with their father, and then a separate reign by themselves. Round numbers of hundreds or thousands, are put for such as differed but little from them. What is not included in one reckoning is included in another, &c. Thus the sojourning of the Hebrews, from the Call of Abraham to leave his native country; Gen. xii. 1; to the Deliverance from Egypt, was 430 years; Exod. xii. 40, 41; Gal. iii. 17; but, from the birth of Isaac to that Deliverance, were but 400 years; Gen. xv. 13. Jacob and his descendants, at their going down into Egypt, were in all seventy persons; Gen. xlvii. 26, 27; Deut. x. 22: but, excluding Joseph and his two sons, who were in Egypt before, and including eight of Jacob's daughters-in-law, they made seventy-five souls; Acts vii. 14. David by Abishai and his army, slew 18,000 Edonites, who came to assist the Syrians; or 18,000 Syrians, and also 18,000 Edonites: Joab assisted in killing 12,000 of these, or killed 12,000 besides; 2 Sam. viii. 13; 1 Chron. xviii. 12; Psalm lx. title. The Ammonites hired 32,000 Syrians, besides the 1000 from Maachah; 33,000 in all; 2 Sam. ix. 6; 1 Chron. xix. 6, 7.—Of the Syrian army were slain 7000, who fought in 700 chariots, and 40,000 horsemen, and as many footmen, or 40,000 horsemen who dismounted and fought on foot; 2 Sam. x. 18; 1 Chron. xix. 17. Adino, or Jashobeam, might slay in one battle 800, and in another 300; 2 Sam. xxiii. 8. 1 Chron. xi. 11. When David numbered the people, the men of Judah amounted to 470,000, who, with the 30,000 under their thirty mighties, made 500,000. The men of Israel amounted to 800,000, exclusive of the 288,000 standing troops, which, put together, make almost 1,100,000; 2 Sam. xxiv. 9; 1 Chron. xxi. 5; and xxvii. 1—15. No more than three years of famine were threatened for David's numbering the people; 1 Chron. xxi. 12: but, had these been added to the three preceding years of famine for Saul's murdering the Gibeonites, they, together with the year of release, would have made seven; 2 Sam. xxiv. 13. David gave to Araunah, or Ornan, fifty shekels of silver for the threshing floor, and the oxen then sacrificed; 2 Sam. xxiv. 24: and afterwards bought the whole farm for six hundred shekels of gold, for the temple to be built on; 1 Chron. xxi. 25. Solomon had 4000 stables, in which were 40,000 stalls, ten in each; or he had 4000 stalls at Jerusalem, and 40,000 in all; 1 Kings iv. 26; 2 Chron. ix. 25. Hiram got 20 measures of oil for his family; 1 Kings v. 11: and 20,000 baths of oil for his artificers besides; 2 Chron. ii. 10. Solomon's workmen had 3300 subordinate overseers, and over these 300 more, in all 3600: 1 Kings v. 16; 2 Chron. ii. 18.—The temple was founded in the 480th year of the deliverance from Egypt; 1 Kings vi. 1: therefore the 450 years, mentioned Acts xiii. 20, must either mark the time from the birth of Isaac to the settlement in Canaan, or the years of oppression, mentioned in the book of Judges, must be included in the rests; or some of the latter judges must have been contemporary.—Each of the brazen pillars, at the entrance of the tabernacle, was almost eighteen cubits, which, being joined together, made thirty-five cubits for both; 1 Kings vii. 15; 2 Kings xxv. 17; Jer. lii. 21; 2 Chron. ii. 15. The brazen sea had ordinarily no more than two thousand baths of water in it; 1 Kings vii. 26: but, if filled to the brim, it could have held 3000; 2 Chron. iv. 5. Solomon's fleet brought him from Ophir four hundred and fifty talents in all, of which 420 were clear gain, or they brought him 420 talents at one voyage, and 450 in another; 1 Kings ix. 28; 2 Chron. viii. 18. At least in Solomon's time, there was nothing in the ark but the two tables of the law; 1 Kings viii. 9; 2 Chron. v. 10: but the pot of manna and Aaron's budding rod were once in it, or rather placed in the fore-side of it; Heb. ix. 4.—King Ahaziah began his reign in the twenty-second year of his age; 2 Kings viii. 26: and in the forty-second year of the royalty of his mother's family, to which he was so like in his conduct; 2 Chron. xxii. 2.—The vessels of gold and silver were not made till after the temple itself was repaired; 2 Kings xii. 10, 14: but were afterwards formed of what metal remained; 2 Chron. xxiv. 11, 14.—Jehoiachin's release was appointed on the 25th day of the month; Jer. lii. 31: but not executed till the 27th; 2 Kings xxv. 27.—Of the two lists of the returning captives, in Ezra ii. and Neh. vii. the one may mark the numbers enrolled in order to return, and the other the numbers which actually returned.—To reconcile the apparent inconsistencies in the four Gospels, nothing more is necessary but to place the passages in their proper order, as is attempted in the subsequent CHRONOLOGY.

XIII. To obtain an exact knowledge of the scripture, especially in its historical and prophetic parts, it is of great use to understand the GEOGRAPHY, which marks the situation of the places where the events mentioned took place,—to understand the CHRONOLOGY, which marks the time when the events happened,—and to understand the HISTORY of the nations, the fate of which the scripture narrates or foretells. Without this knowledge, our understanding of the histories, or predictions of scripture, must be extremely scanty and confused, as we cannot perceive the events in their proper circumstances and connections. To assist the reader with what is most necessary on these heads is the aim of the two last chapters of this Introduction.

XIV. To be capable of perusing the oracles of God, in their originals, with HUMILITY of mind, will open to our view, especially in the Old Testament, a scene of emphasis and glory, in thousands of instances, which cannot be exhibited in any translation whatsoever, and which no commentator observes.

CHAPTER III.

Of the JEWISH LAWS and TYPES.

For many ages mankind seem to have had no other form of government, either civil or sacred, but that of the patriarchal kind. Fathers were at once kings and priests to their numerous descendants.—When God thought proper to form a nation for himself, and separated them from the rest of the world, they appear, for the first four hundred years, to have had no other government of their own. While they were in Egypt they had elders: but these appear to have been nothing more than the wisest and gravest among them, or the heads of their tribes, who had no power of civil judicature; Exod. iii. 16; with xviii. 13, 18. Their officers were nothing but overseers of their tasks; Exod. v. 14.

When they came out of Egypt, God, who formerly stood related to them as their Creator and covenant God, became a kind of national King to them. In correspondence to this threefold character, he gave them laws, moral, ceremonial, and civil. As their King, he gave them laws concerning servants, retaliations, damages, inheritances, marriages, borrowing of money, wars, punishments, admission into places of power and trust, or even into the camp or congregation, &c. Exod. xxi—xxiii. xviii. Lev. xviii. xix. xx. xxv. Num. v. 1, 2. xxvii. xxxiv. xxxv. xxxvi. Deut. xix—xxv. As their King, he directed the form of their encampment and marching in the wilderness; Exod. xiii. xiv. Num. i—iv. ix. x.; directed their wars with the Amalekites, Midianites, and Canaanites; Exod. xviii. 1 Sam. xv. Num. xxxi. Deut. xx. Josh. vi. viii.; and appointed their officers; Exod. iii. iv. Num. i. xi. Many things, which in another view were religious ceremonies, seem in some respect to have pertained to the form of the Jewish theocracy. The tabernacle, or temple, was the palace of their king; the oblations were his revenues or civil list; the priests and Levites, his courtiers and officers. Nor do I know but many of them were civil judges as well as ecclesiastical officers; even as our ruling elders in the church may lawfully be magistrates in the state.

To maintain the true religion constantly among them, and to prevent idolatry, which is at once so dishonourable to God and so destructive to the morals of mankind, and for securing their internal peace and happiness, he formed them into a nation uncommonly separated from the nations around. He even prohibited them to imitate their neighbours in the customs which they had observed in their false worship; as planting trees near altars; boiling kids in their mothers' milk; and perhaps sundry others; the unreasonableness of which we cannot now so clearly perceive. Idolatry and witchcraft, being at once the most presumptuous rebellion against the God of nature, and high treason against him as the King of Israel, were justly declared punishable by death in every Israelite or sojourning proselyte.—To render their constitution firm, and to prevent their oppressing one another, he appointed the country which he gave them to be divided into 601,730 shares; to each warrior a share of about twelve acres of ground: and by the return of inheritances, once every fifty years, at the jubilee, he fixed these shares in their respective families. This secured a numerous body of freeholders, always ready to defend their country against every invader.—And, while the Levites were dispersed through the nation for its religious instruction, their forty-eight cities and suburbs, which they held by divine right, at once accommodated them, and secured their persons and families as hostages for their good behaviour. Every tribe being independent in itself, their princes were captains in war and magistrates in time of peace.

After their settlement in Canaan, every city had its particular judges, who held their courts, at least some of them, in the gates; Deut. xvi. 19; Judg. xi. 5, 6; Zech. viii. 16. Every tribe had its supreme and subordinate rulers, according to the plan of Jethro the Midianite; Exod. xviii. Deut. i. The chief rulers were called princes, or heads of thousands; Num. xxiii. 2; Josh. ix. 15; and xvii. 4; Num. x. 4. Perhaps the seventy elders, mentioned Num. xi. were the sixty rulers of ten thousands, together with the twelve princes of the tribes; Num. i. vii.—Of these, some think the Jewish sanhedrim or parliament was first constituted, and afterwards continued. But the utter silence of the Old Testament about any such court, when there was no king nor judge to govern the people; Judg. xvii—xxi.; and when the people generally followed their kings, either in idolatry or reformation, makes the existence of any such court in those times extremely doubtful. Whether most of their fifteen judges, after effecting the several national deliverances for which God raised them up, retired to a private life, as before, is not altogether evident.

The Hebrews' request of a king is represented as a rejection of their theocratical form of government; 1 Sam. viii. 7; and xii. 17, 19.—Under their kings, especially after the division of the kingdom, we find but small vestiges of it. Nay, except by David and Solomon, who were also prophets, we find scarcely any thing good done by any of them, in which any sovereign on earth may not imitate them on proper occasions. Even when they were appointed by God to the government, they were called to their office by the people, as much as our British kings. They were installed in it by unction, at least where their title seemed dubious; 1 Sam. x. 1; and xvi. 1; 1 Kings i. 30; 2 Kings xi. 12; and xxiii. 3. They were crowned with a crown, somewhat like the high priest's mitre; 2 Sam. i. 10; Psalm xxi. 3; 2 Kings xi. 12. The principal subjects tendered them a kiss, importing allegiance; Psalm ii. 12: and the people by loud acclamations testified their subjection; 1 Sam. x. 24; 1 Kings i. 39. According to law, none but a native Israelite could be king. Every king was to transcribe, for his own use, a copy of the Mosaic laws. He was to govern with equity and lenity. He was not to multiply to himself wives, horses, silver, or gold, but to depend on the assistance and protection of God in all his undertakings; Deut. xvi. 18, 19, 20; and xvii. 14—20. Their great council, in which the supreme magistrate or his representative presided, had only power to enact regulations for executing the laws prescribed by God himself: nor, according to these rules, do they seem to have had any power of levying taxes.—Till the reign of Saul, the Hebrews had never any standing troops; but the 601,730 freeholders were obliged, on a proper call, to bear arms against the enemy at their own expense; Judg. iii. vi. xx. 1 Sam. xi. Saul had but a few thousand standing forces; 1 Sam. xiii. 2; and xxvi. 2: but David increased their number to 288,000; 1 Chron. xxvii. 4—15. Jehoshaphat increased those of Judah to 1,160,000; 2 Chron. xvii. 14—19.

It only remains to take notice of some of the CLASSES or SECTS mentioned in the scripture history of the Jewish nation. As (1) The SCRIBES. The most honourable of these were the secretaries of state and war; 2 Sam. viii. 17; 2 Kings xviii. 18; xxii. 3; and xxv. 19. The inferior scribes were much like our writers to the signet, &c. 1 Chron. ii. 55. Many of the Simeonites, it is said, being scattered amongst the other tribes, kept public schools, and were scribes of the lowest form; Gen. xlix. 7. There appears to have been another kind of ecclesiastical scribes, who were preaching clergy, and expounded the law of Moses in their own way; Luke v. 17, 21; and xi. 44. (2) RABBINS. The title of RABBI, in the earlier ages, only denoted such as were of superior rank and station; Job xxxii. 9;

Esther i. 8; Jer. xxxix. 3; and xli. 1. But, some ages before our Saviour's incarnation, the self-conceited doctors of learning began to assume it as a badge of literary honour; Mat. xxiii. 7, 8. (3) The PHARISEES were a very numerous sect. They pretended that the traditions of the elders were of at least equal authority with the written word of God. They affected to discover an uncommon sanctity in many painful austerities and trifling shews of devotion. They enlarged the fringes on the corners of their garments, and marked their foreheads with scrolls of parchment, called phylacteries, on which were inscribed some noted sentences of the law; Mat. vi. xxiii. (4) The SADDUCEES. They seem to have acknowledged the divine authority of, at least, the books of Moses; but denied the existence of separate spirits, and the resurrection of the dead. They denied the decrees of God, and pretended that men were absolute masters of their own actions without any supernatural influence. Many of the rich and powerful were of this sect: Acts xxiii. 8; and v. 17: but we never hear of one of them converted to the Christian faith. (5) The SAMARITANS were the offspring of those heathens whom the kings of Assyria brought from the east, and planted in the country of the ten tribes. Their religion was a motley mixture of the heathen and Jewish. They and the Jews generally hated one another to an uncommon degree; and in the days of our Saviour the Jews thought them all possessed by the devil; 2 Kings xvii. 24—34; Ezra iv. v. Neh. ii. iii. iv. vi. John iv. and viii. 48; Luke ix. 52, 53. (6) The GALILEANS were a party headed by one Judas, who refused to submit to the Romans, or to pay them any tribute; Acts v. 37; Luke xiii. 1. (7) The HERODIANS were the flatterers of Herod the tetrarch of Galilee, who were ready to comply with whatever heathenish customs he introduced, in order to please his Roman friends; Mat. xxii. 16; Mark viii. 15.

The knowledge of the TYPICAL REPRESENTATIONS under the Old Testament dispensation is of much more importance; the whole of it being intended by God as a proper mean of ushering his son into our world and into his subsequent glory: every religious rite, every noted person and event, observable therein, may justly be considered as an emblem of what is spiritual, and as a TYPE, a FIGURE, a SUBSTANTIAL PREDICTION, of good things to come. This idea is strongly supported by the apostle's calling the Jewish ordinances shadows of good things to come, the body of which is Christ; Col. ii. 17: and by most of his Epistle to the Hebrews. To view the noted PERSONS, EVENTS, and RITUAL INSTITUTIONS, in relation to Jesus Christ and his New Testament and heavenly church, is indeed to apprehend them in a most amiable and engaging point of light. In this view we discern all the prophets bearing witness to our glorious and worthy Redeemer.—Among these shadows of good things to come we may rank,

I. TYPICAL PERSONS, who, in their distinguished origin, their amiable qualities, their honourable stations, their peculiar work or call to it, their wise and faithful performance thereof and remarkable success therein, represent Jesus, the Mediator of the New Testament and Saviour of men. In this light we may consider (1) ADAM, in his immediate formation by God, his perfect likeness to God, his distinguished form, in which the spiritual and material substances of creation were connected; in his lordship over this sublunary world, his divine marriage, and in his parental and federal relation to mankind; Gen. i—v. Rom. v. 12—19; 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. (2) ABEL, in the debasement of his name, the righteousness of his life, the excellency and acceptableness of his sacrifice; in his brother's hatred and murder of him, and the fearful punishment which ensued; Gen. iv. 1—16. Heb. xi. 4; and xii. 24; 1 John iii. 12. (3) ENOCH, in his self-dedication to God, upright walking with him, clear prediction of the last judgment, and embodied translation to heaven; Gen. v. 22—24; Heb. xi. 5; Jude 14, 15. (4) NOAH, as the comforter of his friends, the upright favourite of his God, the erector of the ark, the saviour of his family and animals, the acceptable sacrificer to God, the covenant head of those who repopled the new world, and the predictor of their different fates; Gen. v—x. Heb. xi. 6; 1 Pet. iii. 19, 20. (5) MELCHIZEDEK, in the secrecy of his genealogy; in his immediately divine instalment in the priesthood; in his relation to an accursed people as their priest and king; in his having no official successor; in his superiority to, and blessing of, Abraham; and in his generous refreshment of the victorious but weary troops; Gen. xiv. 18—20; Ps. cx. 4; Heb. vii. 1—11. (6) ABRAHAM, in his divine call to leave his native country; in his firm trust in, ready obedience to, and high favour with, God; in his meekness, his kindness, and his boldness, in favour of Lot, his injurious friend; in his perfect equity and extensive usefulness to his neighbours; in his covenant headship over his long promised and marvellously produced seed; and in the extraordinary oblations whereby he confirmed it; and in the distinguished tempers and fate of those born in his house; Gen. xii—xxv. Heb. xi. 8—19; Ps. cv. 6—15; Acts vii. 2—8; Rom. iv. Gal. iii. 6—18; and iv. 22—31. (7) ISAAC, in his long predicted, much desired, and marvellous, birth; in his early enduring of persecution; in his voluntary oblation of himself to God, a source of great blessings to himself and his seed; in his happy marriage to his Gentile kinswoman; and in the long-desired birth, different tempers, and states, of his children; Gen. xxi—xxvii. Gal. iv. 26—29. (8) JACOB, in his noted uprightness; his acquirement of the birthright and blessing; his manifold troubles, and divine support and comfort under the same; his prevalent wrestling and powerful prayers; his numerous offspring, and the extensive blessings he left them; Gen. xxv—xxxv. xlii—l. Hos. xii. 3; and iv. 12. (9) JOSEPH, as a darling son, marked with princely apparel: a hated, but prudent and affectionate, brother; a trusty, wise, and successful, servant; an inspired interpreter and prophet; a resolute resister of temptation; a patient sufferer of trials unnumbered, and through them highly exalted and singularly blessed; and, in fine, as the preserver of nations, the advancer of his master's kingdom, and nourisher of his father's family; Gen. xxx. 22—24; xxxvii. xxxix—l. Ps. cv. 16—22; Acts vii. 9—18. (10) JOB, in his remarkable piety, integrity, humility, and usefulness; in his original happiness and wealth; in his sudden and sovereign reduction to depths of misery and woe; in his manifold and grievous sufferings from every quarter, hell, earth, and heaven; his remarkable patience under them; and his restoration at last to redoubled glory and wealth; Job i—xlii. Ezek. xiv. 14; James v. 11. (11) MOSES, in his honourable but hazardous birth, his marvellous preservation, his manifold trials and patience under them; in his solemn call to his extensive office of deliverer, mediator, extraordinary priest, unparalleled prophet, honoured lawgiver, and king in Jeshurun; in his incomparable intimacy with God; and in his meekness, disinterestedness, fidelity, and zeal, in the discharge of his work; Exod. ii. to Deut. xxxiv. Ps. cv. 2^c 2ⁿ, and xxvii. 20; Acts vii. 20—40; Heb. xi. 23—29. (12) AARON, as a renowned saint, an eloquent orator, an holy prophet, a great high priest, a covenant head and common parent of priests unnumbered; in his solemn call to, and investiture in, his office of priesthood, and the confirmation thereof by miracles of mercy and wrath; in his laborious, faithful, and affectionate, discharge thereof; and at last in his voluntary death on mount Hor, leaving his sacred vestments to his son; Exod. iv. 14—16; viii—x. xxviii. xxix. Lev. viii. ix. x. Num. xvi. xvii. xx. (13, 14) BEZALEEL and AHOIAB, as the divinely called, singularly qualified, faithful, laborious, and successful, framers of a tabernacle for the symbolic residence of God; Exod. xxxi. xxxvi—xl. (15) PHINEHAS, in his divinely directed, though uncommon, zeal for God and his nation; in his honourable reward of victory, peace, and everlasting priesthood; and in his covenant headship over his priestly posterity; Num. xxv. xxxi. Ps. cvi. 30, 31. (16) JOSHUA, in his name, pregnant with salvation; his education under Moses the lawgiver; his solemn call and repeated encouragement from God to his work, and his diligence therein; his miraculous assistance, diversified exploits, marvellous conquests, and wise distribution of the promised Canaan to God's chosen people, and in his zeal and care to establish among them the true worship and service of God; Exod. xvii. 10, 13; Num. xiii. 13, 16; and xiv. 6—10, 30; and xxvii. 15—23; Deut. xxxi. 1—8; Josh. i—xxiv. Acts vii. 45; Heb. iv. 8. (17) GIDEON, in his original meanness; his lovely humility and meekness; his clearly divine, solemn, and miraculously attested, call to deliver Israel; his amazing success by unlikely instruments; his care to reform his nation, maintain peace with his friends, and punish his contemners; Judg. vi—viii. 1 Sam. xii. 11; Heb. xi. 32—34. (18) SAMSON, in his preternatural birth, his solemn separation to the service of God, his marvellous exploits, the men of Judah's betrayal of him into the hand of his enemies; and, in fine, his voluntary death for the ruin of his people's destroyers; Judg. xiii—xvi. Heb. xi. 32—34. (19) BOAZ the Bethlehemite, in his abundant wealth, his humble and affectionate mind, his divinely-directed and honourable marriage to a destitute Gentile widow, and the happy issue thereof; Ruth i—iv. (20) SAMUEL, in his marvellous birth, his early dedication to God, his solemn call to and faithful service of God, as the prophet and deliverer of Israel, and in the remarkable vengeance which overtook the nation for rejecting him; 1 Sam. i—xxx. Heb. xi. 32—34. (21) DAVID, in his fidelity, patience, meekness, zeal, eminent devotion, firm faith in, and high favour, and familiarity with, God, and in his triple unction and call to his office; in which he was at once the Psalmist, prophet, and monarch, of Israel, and a head to the heathen around; in his covenant headship over his royal posterity; in his unnumbered and grievous afflictions from every side, and his holy resignation thereto; in his marvellous exploits, and almost ever-successful wars with the enemies of his nation; in his astonishing care to order the church, and his expensive preparations for building the temple of God; 1 Sam. xvi—xxx. 2 Sam. i—xxiv. 1 Kings i. ii. 1 Chron. iii. xi—xxix. Ps. ii—cl. Acts xiii. 22. (22) SOLOMON, in his dearness to God; in his early and solemn enthronement; his charge from, and benediction by, his father; in his astonishing wisdom, wealth, and renown; in the extent, order, peace, and happiness, of his kingdom; in his expensive, skilful, and laborious, erection of a magnificent temple for God, and in his solemn dedication thereof by sacrifices and prayer; 2 Sam. xii. 25; and vii. 12—16; 1 Chron. xvii. 11—15; and xxii. xxviii. 1 Kings i—x. 2 Chron. i—ix. Psal. lxxii. cxxxii. (23) ELIJAH, in his debased appearances, fervent zeal, effectual prayers, discriminating sacrifice, miracles of mercy and judgment, power over the nations, embodied translation to heaven, and the fearful vengeance which overtook his opposers of the family of Ahab, according to his predictions; 1 Kings xvii—xix. xxi. 2 Kings i. ii. 2 Chron. xxi. 12—15; Luke iv. 25, 26; James v. 17, 18. (24) ELISHA, in his solemn call to his prophetic function, and ready compliance therewith; his plentiful endowment with the Spirit of God, numerous miracles of mercy and judgment, usefulness to his nation, the manifold injuries he received, and the fearful resentments thereof by his God; 1 Kings xix. 19—21; 2 Kings ii—ix; and xiii. 14—21; Luke iv. 27. (25) JONAH, in his exposure to the raging storm and billows, his burial alive in the whale's belly, and resurrection therefrom on the third day; and in the success which attended his subsequent ministration among the Gentiles; 2 Kings xiv. 25; Jonah i—iv. Mat. xii. 39—41. (26) ELIAKIM, in his succession to a traitor in office; his distinguished authority and faithful exercise thereof, for the honour of his master and advantage of his nation; Is. xxii. 20—24. (27) DANIEL, in his renowned piety and uprightness; his high favour with God, his distinguished wisdom, and uncommon revelations of God's purposes: his powerful prayers; his advancement to high honours, through exile, debasement, and trouble; and in the terrible vengeance which overtook his malicious persecutors; Dan. i—xii. Ezek. xiv. 14; and xxviii. 3. (28) ZERUBBABEL, in his dearness to God; his leading his people from Babylon to Canaan; and in his rebuilding the temple by weak means, and notwithstanding much opposition; Hag. i. 14; and ii. 23; Zech. iv. 6—10; Ezra i—vi. (29) JOSHUA the high priest, in the resistance he received from Satan: the divine changing of his apparel; in the contempt which he and his fellows endured; and in their subsequent crowns of honour, and their fellowship with angels; Zech. iii. vi. Ezra v. 2. (30) JOHN BAPTIST, in his divinely predicted, preternatural, and gladdening, birth; his early and eminent sanctity of nature and life; and in his solemn call to his work of reformation; his zeal, fidelity, and success, therein; and in his martyrdom in the cause of truth; Luke i. iii. Mat. iii. xiv. John i. iii.—These did all prefigure Jesus Christ in every thing, in his person, state or conduct correspondent with these things.

II. TYPICAL CLASSES, or ORDERS, of men, which prefigured Jesus Christ, and his gospel ministers or people, in their stations, endowments, work, and reward. Thus (1) The ISRAELITES IN GENERAL, in the meanness of their extract; the supernatural manner of their production from Abraham; their long-continued paucity and weakness; their obstinacy and wickedness, and frequent murmurings and rebellions; their manifold distresses, wanderings, and enemies;—and especially in God's federal betrothing of them to himself in their progenitors; marking them with his sign of circumcision; separating them to himself as his peculiar people, children, and servants; bestowing upon them his peculiar protection, provision, direction, laws, ordinances, promises, and country; and his increasing them into a multitude of nations;—were figures of the saints, particularly in the gospel church; Heb. xi. 11, 12; Exod. i. ii. xiii. xiv. xvi. xvii. xix. Num. i—xxxvi. Deut. iv—ix. and xxvi. 5—9; Rom. ix. 4, 5, &c. (2) The FIRST-BORN HEBREW MALES, as memorials of an accomplished redemption from Egypt; as the beginning of their fathers' strength, and preservers of their honourable name; as heirs to a double portion of their inheritance and their principal blessing; as heads (if not priests before the law) to their brethren; as the honour of their families, and means of sanctifying them to God and procuring his blessing thereon; prefigured Jesus Christ, and were emblems of his chosen saints; Exod. xiii. 2, 11—16; xxii. 29; and xxxiv. 19; Num. iii. 45—51; and viii. 16; Deut. xxi. 16, 17. (3) The KINSMAN-REDEEMERS; in their necessary nearness of kin, that the right of redemption might be theirs; in their recovering their friend's inheritance, if mortgaged; redeeming his person, if enslaved; avenging his blood, if he had been murdered; and in marrying his widow, and raising him up an honourable seed, if he died childless; prefigured Jesus Christ in our nature, purchasing our happiness, avenging our blood upon Satan and our lusts, redeeming our persons; and, by union and communion with them, rendering us fruitful in good works; Lev. xxv. 25; Num. xxxv. 19—28; Ruth iv. 1—10. (4) The YOUNGER UNMARRIED BROTHERS of an Hebrew who died childless, in their obligation to espouse their brother's widow, and raise him up an heir to his estate, and their exposure to contempt, if they refused,—represent ministers and professors of the Christian church, who, by communion with the church, must either raise up a spiritual seed to Jesus, their departed Brother, or expose themselves to everlasting shame and contempt; Deut. xxv. 5—10. (5) The VOLUNTARY BOND-SERVANTS, who, from love to their master and family, refused to go free at the end of their term, and had their ear fastened to his door-post, in token of their engagement to perpetual service,—figured out Jesus Christ, as, from love to God and his people, voluntarily engaging himself in the perpetual work of our salvation,—and his people, as constrained by his love to perpetual obedience; Exod. xxi. 5, 6; Deut. xv. 16, 17. (6) The SOJOURNING STRANGERS, not Canaanites, in the tender care taken of them; in their free access to the oracles and ordinances of God, and to the cities of refuge; represented the free and abundant access of the Gentiles to the gospel church, and their high privileges therein; Exod. xxii. 21; and xii. 48, 49; Lev. xix. 10; Num. xv. 4; xix. 10; and xxxv. 15; &c. The HANGED MALEFACTORS of Israel, in their accursed death and speedy burial, figured out our Redeemer, as clothed with our guilt and curse; crucified for the expiation of our crimes; and decently interred, without delay, to mark that the law was satisfied for our sin; Deut. xxi. 22, 23. (8) The HEBREW JUDGES, in their solemn call to deliver their people from that misery which their sins had procured; in their divine qualification for their work, and success therein; prefigured Jesus, our necessary, divinely called, well qualified, and successful, Deliverer; Judg. ii—xvi. 1 Sam. i—vii. and xii. 11; Neh. ix. 27. (9) The HEBREW KINGS of David's family, as introduced by the Israelites' rejection of God's immediate government; as taken from among their brethren; as divinely called to, and secured in, power by a perpetual covenant; as installed by unction, coronation, kisses, and shouts of subjection; as copying out the law of God for themselves, and constantly attending to it as the rule of their administrations; as charged not to trust on carnal supports nor wallow in fleshly pleasures; as sitting on the Lord's throne, and ruling the Lord's people, but never exalting their heart above them; and as fighting the Lord's battles, and extirpating his accursed enemies; represented Jesus Christ, as the mediatorial King of his church; and his saints, as made kings unto God; 1 Sam. viii. xiii. xv. and xvi. 1—13; 2 Chron. xi. xii. 1 Kings i. 39; 2 Kings xi. xii. and xxiii. 30. (10) The HOLY PROPHETS, in their divine mission to, furniture for, and direction in, their work; and in their diligence, fidelity, and zeal in it; explaining God's laws, attesting his truths, revealing his purposes, announcing his promises and threatenings, and directing his people; in being often signs and wonders to men; and in suffering much abuse and persecution from them, and in God's fearful resentment thereof; represented Jesus Christ, and his gospel ministers and saints; Is. vi. Jer. i. Ezek. i—xi. Heb. i. Is. i. to Mal. iv. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15—17; Mat. xxiii. 34, 35. (11) The NAZARITES, in their voluntary separation from others and solemn dedication to God; in the honourable length of their hair; in their abstinence from every thing intoxicating and polluting; in their exact fulfilment and solemn finishing of their vow; figured out Jesus, his ministers, and his people, as solemnly, and yet voluntarily, set apart to their sacred work; as constant and increasing in their manifested subjection to God; making known their moderation to all men; and as, amidst debasement and troubles, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord; and at last finishing their course in a manner thankful, solemn, and highly honourable to God; Num. vi. Judg. xiii. (12) The NETHINIMS, i. e. given ones, which consisted of the Gibeonites, and such others as were devoted to the lower services of the tabernacle or temple, in drawing water to wash the sacrifices, or hewing wood to burn them; in their voluntary subjection, their mean employment, and yet distinguished nearness to God; represented our devoted, condescending, and debased, Redeemer, approaching to, and enjoying remarkable fellowship with God, in the service of his church, and his ministers and saints; Josh. ix. 22—27; 1 Chron. ix. 2; Ezra ii. 58. (13) The LEVITES, in their honourable separation to the service of God, as a reward of their zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf; in their standing in the room of the first-born Israelites; in their being appointed to their work for preventing plagues on the Hebrew nation; in their early enrolment in the sacred lists, from a month old; in their solemn instalment in their office, by washing, waving, and diversified oblations; in their extensive labour, watching and bearing the tabernacle and its furniture assisting the priests in the sacrifices, teaching the people, &c. during the vigour of life, and then retiring to an honourable rest; and in their large allotment of cities and incomes, though by far the smallest of the Hebrew tribes; prefigured Jesus, as the solemnly installed, the once debased, but faithful, servant of his Father, in all the concerns of his church; and were emblems of his ministers and saints, in their labours of love and their ample reward; Exod. xxxii. 27—29; Deut. xxxiii. 8—11; Mal. ii. 5, 6; Num. iii. iv. viii. xviii. and xxxv. 1—8; Deut. xii. 11—19; xiv. 27—29; and xviii. 6—8; 2 Chron. xvii. 8, 9; xix. 8; and xxix—xxxi. Neh. viii. (14) The AARONIC PRIESTS, in their attested descent from Aaron: their unblemished bodies; their separation from their brethren; their temperate diet, moderate mourning, and honourable marriage; their plain, but pure and sacred, apparel; their divine call, and solemn attestation thereof by miracles of mercy and wrath; their solemn consecration to their office, by washing, enrobing, oblations, unctions, and feasting; and in their extensive work of rearing and unrearing the tabernacle in the wilderness, taking care of the sacred furniture, offering all the gifts and sacrifices of their nation, burning the incense, placing and removing the shew-bread, lighting and dressing the sacred lamps, blowing the silver trumpets, teaching and blessing the people, judging of their leprosy, purifying the unclean, encouraging the people in their battles; and, in fine, in their plentiful and sacred reward; prefigured Jesus, in his honourable pedigree, perfect purity, absolute fitness for his work, solemn call to it, and instalment therein, and his faithful and complete discharge thereof, issuing in a glorious, abundant, and everlasting reward;—and they were also emblems of his ministers and saints; Heb. v. 1; Ezra ii. 62, 63; Lev. xxi. xxii. 1—13; xxiv. 5—9; and i—x. xii—xv. Exod. xxix. and xxviii. 40—43; 2 Chron. xiii. 10, 11; Num. iv. 5—16; vi. 23—26; viii. 2, 3; x. 1—10; and xv—xviii. xxviii. xxix. Deut. xvii. 8—13; xviii. 1—5; and xx. 1—4. (15) The HIGH PRIEST, in his peculiar dignity; his government of the other priests; in his double suit of sacred vestments, the simple and golden; his plentiful unction; his never defiling himself, nor leaving the sanctuary; his espousing none but an honourable virgin; his performing the whole work of the annual expiation, purifying the sanctuary and its furniture, entering within the veil and returning to bless the people; prefigured Jesus, the sole High Priest of our profession, in his unparalleled excellency, dignity, and purity; his Headship over his people; his robes of manhood, mediatorial office, and righteousness; his divine call to, and full preparation for, his work, by the abundant influences of the Holy Ghost; his perfect attachment to, and attendance on, that work; his communion with chosen and sanctified persons and pure churches; his making a full atonement for our sins, and bringing in an everlasting righteousness; and his entering into heaven by his own blood, that he might thence return to bless men in the gospel dispensation, and last judgment; Exod. xxviii. 1—39; and xxix. 6; Lev. xxi. 10—12; and viii. ix. xvi.

III. TYPICAL EVENTS, or transient things, which prefigured Jesus, and the great events of our redemption by him. (1) NOAH'S ARK, in its divine contrivance, appointment and plan; in its firmness, strength, and fitness to swim through swelling floods, and to protect from deluging rains; in its capacious and regular stories, rooms, and entrance; in its illumination only from above; in its being the sole means of saving a few persons and animals from the overflowing deluge; in its saving the cargo which God directed into it, by the exposure of itself; and, in fine, firmly settling on its lofty rest; represented Jesus in his diversified offices and states, as the sole means of saving an elect world, committed to him by God, from the overflowing deluge of infinite wrath; and is a figure of his body the church, without the limits of which none can be saved; Gen. vi—viii. Heb. xi. 7; 1 Pet. iii. 20, 21. (2) JACOB'S LADDER, erected in the wilderness, and reaching from Jacob on earth to a promising JEHOVAH in heaven, and occupied by angels ascending and descending thereon; represented Jesus, as the son of Jacob in his manhood, and of JEHOVAH in his divine person:—in his different states of debasement and exaltation, as the Mediator between God and men, ministered to by angels himself, and in whom they minister to us; Gen. xxvii. 11—15; John i. 51. (3) MOSES' BUSH; low, earthy, and combustible; burning, but not consumed; represented Jesus' manhood; low and weak in itself, inhabited by his fulness of Godhead, and exposed to the fierceness of his Father's wrath, but not consumed;—and his church, under fiery tribulations, but not destroyed, because inhabited by a promising God; Exod. iii. 2—10; Acts vii. 30—34. (4) The PILLAR OF CLOUD AND FIRE, which conducted the Hebrews in the wilderness, in its form; its seasonable origin; its hovering over the erected tabernacle; in its bedewing, enlightening, protecting, and directing influence; and in many oracular instructions received from thence; marked out Jesus Christ and his gospel ordinances; Exod. xiii. 20—22; xiv. 20; and xl. 34—38; Num. ix. 15—23; and x. 33, 34; Neh. ix. 14, 19; Psal. cv. 39; 1 Cor. x. 2. (5) The TREE discovered by God, and cast by Moses into the bitter waters of Marah for sweetening them, represented Jesus, found out by God, made under the law, and crucified for us, sweetening every thing awful, bitter, and troublesome; Exod. xv. 22—25. (6) The MANNA, divinely formed, marvellous in virtue; given freely, seasonably, plentifully, daily, early, and abundantly, to ill-deserving and even contemning murmurers, ready to perish; and gathered by all, daily and early; shared equally: carefully prepared; speedily and regularly eaten; a golden potful of which was preserved for a lasting memorial in the holy of holies; represented Jesus as the bread of life; given to sinners of mankind in the gospel, and gathered and eaten by a true faith; and of which there is a plentiful memorial contained in gospel ordinances; Exod. xvi. Num. xi. 4—9; 31—33; and xxi. 5, 6; Neh. ix. 15, 20; John vi. 32—57. (7) The ROCKS of Rephidim and Kadesh, as smitten by Moses' rod, and emitting streams of water sufficient for all the Hebrew millions, and following them in their way through the wilderness, represented Jesus, as obeying and suffering under Moses' law, that there might issue forth streams of redeeming love, blood, spirit, and truth, for the life and comfort of sinners of mankind; Exod. xvii. 1—7; Num. xx. 1—11; Neh. ix. 15—20; Ps. lxxviii. 15, 16; cv. 41; and cxiv. 8; 1 Cor. x. 4. (8) The WELL dug by the nobles of Israel on the border of Moab, at Moses' direction, represented Christ as the fountain opened in the gospel, by the prophets and apostles, for the purification and comfort of his people in this world; Num. xxi. 16—18. (9) The CLUSTER OF GRAPES, brought by Caleb and Joshua from Eschcol, might figure out his unnumbered excellencies, blessings, promises, gifts, and graces, brought near in the gospel, and exhibited to men as evidences of the plenty which is to be enjoyed in the Canaan above; Num. xiii. 23, 24. (10) While AARON'S BUDDING ROD, laid up in the fore-side of the ark, marked the divine appointment, the constant succession, and ever useful labours, of the Aaronic priests, it represented Jesus, the ever flourishing and fruitful branch of the Lord; and the gospel rod of his strength, as the demonstrative evidence of his call to his high priesthood; Num. xvii. Ps. cx. 2. (11) The BRAZEN SERPENT, appointed by God, framed by Moses, and lifted up on a pole, that the serpent-bitten Israelites might be healed by looking to it, represented the Almighty Jesus, in the likeness of sinful flesh, fulfilling Moses' law, and lifted up on the cross and in the gospel, as the divinely appointed, the easy, the accessible, the universal, and infallible, Saviour and medicine of sinful men, who look to him by faith; Num. xxi. 4—9; John iii. 14—17. (12, 13) The POOLS OF BETHESDA and SILEAM, occasionally noted for their healing virtue, might figure him out as the miraculous healer of maimed, withered, lame, diseased, and blind, sinners; John v. 1—4; and ix. 6, 7; Zech. xiii. 1; Is. viii. 6. (14, 15) The DELIVERANCE of the Hebrews from Egypt and Babylon, in the time and manner fixed by God's promise, and notwithstanding much opposition, prefigured Jesus' promised, seasonable, marvellous, all-powerful, deliverance of the nations from their misery under heathenism or popery, through his erection or re-establishment of his gospel church; and are emblems of men's deliverance from an unregenerate state; Exod. xiv. Ps. lxxviii. cv. Ezra i. ii. (16) The TRAVELS of the Hebrews in the wilderness, amidst sins, judgments, trials, mercies, and revelations, unnumbered, and their marvellous ENTRANCE into Canaan, were typical of the diversified fates of the gospel church, and her marvellous entrance into her millennial and eternal rest; Exod. xv. to Deut. xxxiv. Neh. ix. 15—23; Ps. lxxviii. 14—54; cv. 39—43; and cvi. 14—33; Josh. i—v. (17) Their divinely directed and wonderfully successful WARS, in the conquest or preservation of Canaan, were typical of the manifold struggles of the gospel church to extend her boundaries or maintain her privileges; and emblematical of the saints' spiritual warfare on earth; Exod. xvii. 8—16; Num. xxi. 1—3; 21—35; Josh. vi—xii. Judg. i—xvi. 2 Sam. v. viii. x. &c.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS ORDINANCES, many, if not most, of which pertained to their civil as well as to their ceremonial system. These in general directed them to live as a people separated to the Lord, and who in all things, even the most minute, were zealous for his honour. (1) To mark them Abraham's seed, distinguished from all others; to seal with them the covenant of grace, and their peculiar relation to God; to prefigure Jesus Christ, as shedding his blood for his people; and to represent our spiritual regeneration and mortification; every man child was, under pain of death, to be CIRCUMCISED on the eighth day; Gen. xvii. (2) To mark that nothing should be rashly, or in an improper condition, given to the Lord, no animal, however clean, was to be offered till it was at least seven days old; Exod. xxii. 30. The fruit of trees was held polluted for the first three years, and only on the fourth year given to the Lord, after which it was the lawful property of its owner; Lev. xix. 23—25. The price of a dog, or the hire of an harlot, or any thing else unlawfully gotten, was never to be offered to the Lord; Deut. xxiii. 18; Isa. lxi. 8. A bond woman defiled, having nothing of her own, was to bring no trespass-offering, but to be scourged for her fault; Lev. xix. 20—22. (3) To mark a regard to the Lord's oblations, and to Jesus' death, thereby represented, none might eat of any blood, or of the fat of any cattle, sheep, or goats; Lev. xvii. 6; and vii. 23—27. (4) To excite the Jews to the utmost purity in all manner of conversation, none might eat of clean beasts which had been torn, or had died of themselves; Lev. xvii. 15; Deut. xiv. 21: and every one was to ease nature at a proper distance, and cover the excrements; Deut. xxiii. 12—14. (5) To prevent symbolizing with heathenish and inhuman superstition, and to animate to the most tender compassion, none might cut his flesh, or make himself bald, in mourning for diseased friends; Lev. xix. 27, 28; Deut. xiv. 1. None might boil an animal in its mother's milk, or slay the dam along with her young; Exod. xxiii. 19; and xxxiv. 26; Deut. xiv. 21: and xxii. 6, 7; Lev. xxii. 28. Nor was the mouth of an ox, while treading out the corn, to be muzzled; Deut. xxv. 4. (6) To teach them the hurtfulness of improper mixtures of persons in societies; or of works and grace; or of ordinances of God and inventions of men; no eunuchs, bastards, Ammonites, or Moabites, were to be admitted into any share of the Hebrew government; Deut. xxiii. 1—8. No Israelite might wear a garment proper to the other sex; Deut. xxii. 5. None might wear a garment of woollen and linen; Deut. xxii. 11. None might sow his field with a mixture of divers seeds; Deut. xxii. 9. None might plow with an ox and an ass yoked together; Deut. xxii. 10: nor gender his cattle with divers kinds; Lev. xix. 19. (7) To mark the most disinterested love and tender compassion towards mankind, and to figure out the rich abundance of Jesus' redeeming grace, no servant, who had fled from a hard master, was to be delivered back to him; Deut. xxiii. 15. No captive maid was to be married, till she had remained a month to prepare herself and bewail the loss of her parents; Deut. xxi. 10—14. No man betrothed or newly married, or who had newly built a house or planted a vineyard, was required to attend in war; Deut. xx. 5—7: and xxiv. 5. None might lend money upon usury to a poor Hebrew, if to any Hebrew at all; or render him a bond-servant; Lev. xxv. 36, 37; Deut. xxiii. 19. None might reap the corners of his field, nor glean those of his vineyard; nor shake his fruit trees a second time; nor bring home a sheaf which he had once forgotten in the field; but all was to be left to the poor, to the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow; Lev. xix. 9, 10. (8) Not only to deter from every indulgence of fleshly lust, but to mark the fearful end of those who hypocritically join themselves to the church, or who dishonour Jesus by their scandalous and continued outbreaks, the woman who falsely imposed herself upon an husband as a virgin was to be publicly stoned; Deut. xxii. 21; and a priest's daughter who played the harlot was to be burnt; Lev. xxi. 9. (9) To animate them to a constant gratitude for mercies received, and a regard to the commandments of God, every Hebrew's upper garment was marked with a blue fringe, commemorative of the redemption from Egypt, and of his obligation to obey the law of Moses; Num. xv. 37—41.

V. TYPICAL PLACES, which were ceremonially holy, but in different degrees. Canaan was only in the lowest degree, the cities of refuge in the second, Jerusalem in the third, mount Zion in the fourth, and the tabernacle and temple in the highest. In the more sacred places God symbolically dwelt: thither his offerings were brought, there his festivals were kept, and thence his oracles were to be sought; Deut. xii. 5—7; Psal. lxxxvii. cxxii. cxxxii. (1) CANAAN, as the wonted residence of ejected sinners; as a land divinely chosen for God's favourites; long promised, freely bestowed, and graciously inspected by the eye of God; a land orderly allotted to God's chosen people, brought thither by miracles unnumbered; a land singularly nourished by the influences of heaven, and fruitful in every thing necessary for subsistence and delight; and, to crown all, the sacred residence of JEHOVAH, and of the ordinances of his grace;—(but how despised, and come short of, through unbelief!)—prefigured the state of the New Testament church, and of the celestial happiness: and was an emblem of our new covenant state of union to, and fellowship with Jesus Christ; Gen. xv. 18—21; Exod. iii. 8, 17: and vi. 8; Num. xiv. 7, 8, Deut. vi. 10, 11; viii. 7—10; and xi. 9—12; Neh. ix. 25, 35; Ezek. xx. 6, 15; Ps. cvi. 24; Heb. iii. 19. (2) THE CITIES OF REFUGE, in their names; and as being near to the borders of the heathen, and easily accessible to every man-slayer; as Levitical cities of instruction; as perpetually having their gates open, with excellent roads leading to them; and in the protection and peace which they secured for the refugees who remained in them till the death of the high priest; represented Jesus Christ, as the all-renowned, near, accessible, completely furnished, and everlasting refuge, of sinful men, Jews and Gentiles, in which they receive spiritual light, life, liberty, peace and safety; Num. xxxv. 6—34; Deut. iv. 41—43; Josh. xx. xxi. (3) JERUSALEM, in its name marking peace and perfection discerned and possessed; in its stable foundation, compact form, beautiful appearance, and strong, fortifications; and as a city chosen of God, holy, healthy, rich, renowned, royal, populous, and privileged; prefigured the gospel church below and the heavenly Jerusalem above; Psal. cxv. 2; cxvii. 2—9; lxxvi. 2; and xlviii. 1—4; Josh. xv. 63. (4) MOUNT ZION, in its beautiful situation; its extensive and pleasant prospect; its unshaken stability; its joyous dwellings: its protection by, and dearness to, God, as the peculiar residence of himself and his chosen kings of David's family; was also an emblem of our fixed and glorious new covenant state, and a figure of the gospel church and of the heavenly glory; 2 Sam. v. Psal. xlviii. 2—4; lxxvi. 1; lxxii. 68, 69; and cxv. 1. (5) THE TABERNACLE, appointed for God's peculiar residence, was thus formed: a court 61 yards long, and about half as much in breadth, was enclosed by a linen hanging, perhaps of net work, about nine feet in height, suspended by silver hooks on fifty-six brazen pillars, fixed at bottom in large sockets of the same metal. The sole entrance from the east was twelve yards wide, but hung over with a fine veil of embroidered linen suspended on four pillars; here, under the sky, stood the brazen altar and laver, at a small distance from the entrance of the sanctuary: hither every clean Hebrew, or proselyte, might come with his oblations. At the west end of this court stood the tabernacle, which was a close tent in form of a house, standing from east to west: its length was about 54½ feet, its breadth 18½, and its height as much: it was erected by forty-eight strong boards of shittim wood, overlaid with gold, fixed at bottom in ninety-six large sockets of silver, and bound together by five cross bars of shittim wood overlaid with gold; over these was spread a fourfold covering, of embroidered linen, of hair cloth, of strong leather, and of rams' skins died red, all properly connected by clasps or buttons. Its whole east end served for an entrance, and was hung with a veil of embroidered linen, suspended by golden hooks on five pillars of shittim wood overlaid with gold. This tent was divided into two apartments: the first, called the sanctuary or holy place, was in length 36½ feet, and in breadth or height half as much. Into this only the clean priests might enter; and in the west or inner end of it stood the golden candlestick, altar of incense, and table of shew-bread. Beyond, and separated from this by another veil of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars of shittim wood overlaid with gold, and fixed in sockets of silver, was the ORACLE, or MOST HOLY PLACE; a square room of 18½ feet into which only the high priest might enter on the day of expiation; and where the ark, with its furniture, and the cloud of glory overshadowing it, had their residence. The tabernacle was solemnly consecrated at its erection, and every year was sanctified anew on the day of expiation. After it had been long carried from place to place, all that was important of it was lodged in Solomon's temple. It represented Jesus Christ, the free, but altogether pure and precious, gift of God, in his marvellous form, but much unseen excellencies; in the order and connection of his offices, states, and every thing else; as having in himself all fulness of atoning, purifying, enlightening, interceding, nourishing, law-magnifying, virtue; as well-pleasing to God; and as being the sole Mediator, in whom God and his people have fellowship one with another. It also represented the church in her divine plan, her pure and precious materials, connected by the wisdom of God; in her different states, filled with all the fulness of Christ, consecrated by his blood and Spirit, and formed for his service; and, at last, in all her true members and important concerns, fixed in the heavenly temple; Exod. xxv—xxvii. xxx. 26—29; xxxvi—xl. Num. iii. iv. Josh. xviii. 1. (6) THE TEMPLE stood on mount Moriah, towards the south-east of Jerusalem, in a large court, surrounded by a high wall, and divided into two parts; the INNER for the priests and Levites, and the OUTER for the clean Israelites. Its plan was divine, and the preparations for it were immense. It was a very magnificent structure. The wall of it consisted of alternate rows of cedar wood and hewn stone, probably polished marble. The whole inside, floor, walls, and roof, was overlaid with gold, and curiously marked with figures of cherubims and palm trees. On the outside of the wall were reared, in three stories, ninety chambers for accommodating the attending priests. Just before the entrance, or east end, stood the brazen altar, 36 feet square, and 18 feet high, with a large brazen sea, and ten lavers, for washing the priests and sacrifices. The entrance was a porch of 36 feet from north to south, 18 from east to west, and 219 high, in the form of a steeple. On each side of the porch was a magnificent pillar, almost 33 feet high, and curiously adorned with chapters and figured pomegranates. Beyond this porch was the sanctuary, an apartment of 73 feet in length, 36½ in breadth, and 54½ in height. Here, at the west end, stood ten, if not eleven, golden candlesticks, each with seven branches; as many tables of shew-bread, with twelve loaves on each; and a large altar of incense between the two rows of candlesticks and tables. To the westward of this apartment, and separated from it by a fine partition and veil, was the HOLY OF HOLIES, a square room of 36½ feet in length and breadth, and 54½ in height. Here, amidst thick darkness, stood the ark with its furniture; to which Solomon added two new cherubims of olive tree, the wings of which stretched the whole breadth of the house over it. It also was solemnly dedicated by sacrifices and prayer; and was annually purified on the great day of expiation. It prefigured Jesus Christ and his church in their more glorious and exalted state. It typified his manhood, as the divinely planned, curious, pure, and glorious, residence of his Godhead;—typified his person, as the glorious, fixed, and lasting, means of our fellowship with God;—typified the church, as formed by manifold oracles, ordinances, and members, to be the residence of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;—and typified heaven itself, in its glorious fulness of redemption, and as the honoured mansion of complete and immediate fellowship with God:—and it was an emblem of every particular saint, whose soul and body are, by Jesus, built up and consecrated as temples to God; 1 Chron. xxii—xxvi. and xxix. 1—9; 1 Kings vi—viii. 2 Chron. iii—vi.

VI. THE TYPICAL OR SACRED UTENSILS were, (1) THE ARK. It was a chest made of shittim wood, very fine, and almost incorruptible, overlaid with gold; 4 feet 7 inches in length, 2 feet 9 inches in breadth, and as much in height. At the top it had a golden cornice round about its lid, called the mercy seat, because the symbol of the divine presence rested on it, which was of pure gold. Out of the ends of this lid were hammered two golden cherubims, which, with their expanded wings, covered the whole mercy-seat, while they seemed to pore upon it. Within this ark were reposed the two tables of the moral law; and in some other place of it the golden pot full of manna, Aaron's budding rod, and a copy of Moses' law. Being consecrated by an unction of blood and oil, it ordinarily stood on the floor at the very west end of the Holy of Holies. But in the wilderness, and even afterwards, it was, when necessary, carried about by means of staves fixed in its golden rings. None but priests might see it, under pain of death. By means of it the Israelites' passage through Jordan was opened, the lofty walls of Jericho were brought down, the Philistines and their idol were plagued, the curious Bethshemites were slain, and the family of Obed-edom were blessed. It represented Jesus Christ Godman, to the astonishment of angels and men, fulfilling all righteousness, glorifying and delighting his Father to the highest, and containing in him every memorial of JESUS' kindness; every thing necessary for the instruction, confirmation, and nourishment, of his people; and who, being consecrated to his work, and carried about in the gospel, directs their journeys, blesses those who sincerely receive him, overcomes their enemies, opens their passage into their promised rest, and punishes such as profanely abuse him; Exod. xxv. 10—22; xxxvii. 1—9; xl. 9, 35; and xvi. 33, 34; Num. xvii. 10; Deut. x. 3—5; Lev. xvi. 2; Josh. iii. 11—17; and vi. 14—20; 1 Sam. v. and vi. 19; 2 Sam. vi. 11; 1 Kings viii. 4—12. (2) THE TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD was formed of shittim wood overlaid with gold. It was 3 feet 8 inches in length, half as much in breadth, and 2 feet 9 inches in height; and had at top a double cornice of gold, to preserve the loaves from falling off.

When necessary, it was carried by staves of shittim wood fixed in rings of gold. It had the same form of consecration as the ark. It stood in the north-west corner of the sanctuary. Upon it stood, in two rows, twelve loaves of shew-bread, one for each Hebrew tribe, with some frankincense on them. The old ones were removed every sabbath, and given to the priests for food, and new ones put in their place. Solomon made ten new golden tables; five of which were placed on each side of the golden altar, on each of which were placed twelve loaves. This table and its furniture prefigured Jesus Christ presenting all his chosen tribes, in every generation, before God in his intercession; or the gospel, as presenting him and his fullness to his people, chiefly on the weekly sabbath; Exod. xxv. 23—30; xxix. 31; xxx. 27; xxxvii. 10—16; and xl. 22; Heb. ix. 2, 21; Lev. xxiv. 5—9; and viii. 31; Mat. xii. 4; 2 Chron. iv. 8; 1 Kings vii. 45. (3) THE ALTAR OF INCENSE, so called, because frankincense was daily burnt thereon while the burnt-offerings were consumed by sacred fire on the brazen altar, was formed of shittim wood overlaid with gold. It was four-square, almost 22 inches in length and breadth, and twice as much in height. Whether its top was a golden grate I know not: it is certain it was surrounded with a golden cornice, which prevented the falling of any incense from it. It had spires or horns at the four corners of it; and was portable by staves of shittim wood fixed in its golden rings. It was consecrated by an unction of blood and oil; and had its horns annually tipt with the blood of the general expiation. Solomon seems to have made a new one of cedar wood, perhaps larger than that of Moses. It stood in the middle at the west end of the sanctuary, over against the mercy-seat. It represented Jesus Christ appearing before God in our nature in his intercession, and presenting our services to him; Exod. xxx. 1—10, 27, 34—38; and xxxvii. 25—29; 1 Kings vi. 20; Rev. viii. 3, 4. (4) THE GOLDEN CANDLESTICK consisted of almost 114 pounds weight of gold, beaten out into seven branches, adorned with knobs and flowers. It stood on the south side of the golden altar; and, being daily supplied with sacred oil, and its lamps lighted and trimmed by the priests, was the sole illuminator of the sanctuary. Solomon made ten golden candlesticks, and placed five of them on each side of the sanctuary. It represented Jesus Christ, who hath the seven spirits of God, as the sole enlightener of his church; and his church as the enlightener of this dark world; Exod. xxv. 31—40; and xl. 22—25; Lev. xxiv. 1—4; Num. viii. 1—4; 1 Sam. iii. 3; 1 Kings vii. 49; 2 Chron. iv. 7. (5) THE BRAZEN LAVER was a large vessel, holding water for the priests to wash their hands or feet, or the sacrifices, while they were occupied in their work at the tabernacle or temple. It stood near to the entrance of the sanctuary. Solomon formed ten new lavers, each capable of containing about 307 gallons five pints English wine measure; five of which he placed on each side of the entrance to the sanctuary upon bases of curious workmanship. He also formed a still larger vessel, called the BRAZEN SEA, which upon occasion could hold 23,029 gallons five pints, which he placed upon 12 brazen oxen, three looking towards each quarter. This represented Jesus Christ as the fountain opened for the purification of his people, exhibited in the gospel by the twelve patient, pure, and laborious, apostles, and other ministers; Exod. xxx. 17—21; and xxxviii. 8; Lev. viii. 10, 11; Heb. ix. 21; 1 Kings vii. 23—40; 2 Chron. iv. 2—6, 14, 15. (6) THE ALTAR, upon which the Lord's part of the sacrifices and meat-offerings was burnt.—Before the flood we read of no altars at all. Before the erection of the tabernacle the altars appear to have been formed of earth, or unhewn stones; and such were afterwards used on some particular occasions. They represented Jesus in his debased state, but capable of enduring the flames of his Father's wrath.—That which Moses formed consisted of shittim wood overlaid with brass. It was about 9 feet square, and 5½ feet high. Its top was a brazen grate, through which the ashes of the oblation fell into a pan below. At each corner it had a brazen spire, or horn, which protected man-slayers. It was carried about, when necessary, on staves of shittim wood, overlaid with brass. The new altar, which Solomon built for the temple, was 36½ square, and its height 18½ feet. It had an easy access on the east side. After the captivity, a large pile of stones appears to have supplied the place of it. This altar was consecrated by an unction of blood and oil. It represented Jesus Christ, in his debased state, as our infinitely valuable Mediator, all-sufficient atonement, and never-failing refuge from God's wrath;—through whom we have access to, and nourishment from, God; and our persons and services are rendered acceptable in his sight; Exod. xxvii. 1—4; xxix. 36, 37; and xxxviii. 1—7; 2 Chron. iv. 1; 1 Kings vii. 50; Ezra iii. 3. with Gen. viii. 20; xii. 7; and xxxv. 1, 3; Exod. xx. 24, 25; Num. xix. 3; Deut. xxi. 4; Josh. viii. 30—35; Judg. vi. 24; 1 Sam. vii. 6; 2 Sam. xxiv. 25; 1 Kings viii. 63, 64; and xviii. 30, 32. (7) For calling together the Hebrew assemblies, for announcing their journeys in the wilderness, for encouraging them in their battles, for proclaiming their festivals, or for triumphing on them by a solemn sound over the sacrifices, Moses made two SILVER TRUMPETS for the priests. Solomon increased the number to 120. These represented the gospel, by the preaching of which sinners are gathered to Jesus, animated to their spiritual pilgrimage, encouraged in their Christian warfare, and have their liberties and spiritual feasts announced:—and of which the great subject is Christ and him crucified; Num. x. 1—10; 2 Chron. v. 12; Psal. lxxxix. 1, 2; and lxxxix. 15. (8) THE STANDARDS of weight and measure, kept in the sanctuary, might represent CHRIST's word and his perfect pattern; Ezek. xlv. 9—12; Exod. xxx. 13.

VII. TYPICAL OBLATIONS. Immediately after the fall God appears to have instituted sacrifices. With the skins of sacrificed animals our first parents were clothed by him; Gen. x. iii. 21. Abel's offering of a sheep, Noah's oblations of animals and fowls, Abraham's oblation of a ram instead of Isaac; Gen. iv. 4; viii. 20; and xxii. 13: Job's offerings for his children, and his friend's oblation for themselves; Job i. 5; and xlii. 8: are the most noted sacrifices we read of during the first 2513 years of the world. Never, till in the federal transaction between God and Israel; Exod. xxiv. do we read of any sacrifices besides burnt-offerings. (1) God having separated the Hebrews for a people to himself, exceedingly extended, and expressly inculcated, the law of typical oblations; including SACRIFICES, in which there was a destruction of the animal life to the honour of God; and GIFTS, in which no life was destroyed; as in meat-offerings, drink-offerings, soul ransom money, tithes, &c. While these oblations were intended as an acknowledgment that the Hebrews held all their property from God, they were typical of Jesus Christ, offered to God, and useful to men; and generally represented the moral duties of ministers and people. The animals, as living, eatable, clean, tame, social, valuable, male, and in the prime of life, &c. and the fine flour, marked out the necessary excellency in Jesus Christ and his people, and their services.—The voluntary manner in which they were offered represented the willing and cheerful obedience of Christ and his people. The presentation thereof, at the door of the tabernacle, imported dedication to God, and acceptableness, through Christ's person and mediation. The laying on of the offerer's hands, imported the transferring of guilt on the sacrifice, and the devoting it to God. The slaughter of the animals represented the death of Christ, that the offerer ought thus to have suffered, and our surrender of our life to his service. The sprinkling of the blood round about the altar, or towards the mercy seat, &c. marked the divine virtue of Christ's blood to satisfy an offended God and purify the whole church. The washing of the sacrifice, or any part of it, marked the perfect purity of Christ,—in which his people ought to imitate him. The burning of the whole, or part of the oblation, represented the sufferings of Christ and his people. The holy fire, denoted the wrath of God preying upon Christ, and holy love flaming in Christ and in his people. The pasting of the oblations between God and the priests, or, in some cases, also the people, imported that the obedience and suffering of Christ, and even of his people, at once glorify God, and bring advantage to men.—These oblations were (1) BURNT-OFFERINGS, so called, because the flesh was wholly burnt. These were the most dignified, as well as the most ancient and the most frequent, being offered on eight or nine stated times, and as many particular occasions; nay, repeatedly offered every day. Except when poverty obliged a man to offer birds, they were always to be of male cattle, sheep, or kids. Being presented at the door of the tabernacle, and by the laying on of hands charged with the offender's guilt, they were slain; and the flesh, being rendered all pure, burnt on the altar; the blood was sprinkled round about it; and the skin given to the priest.—A meat-offering and drink-offering always attended them.—They represented Jesus Christ, by the complete sacrifice of himself, honouring all his Father's perfections, that his people might obtain spiritual clothing, nourishment, and comfort; Lev. i. ii. 13; vi. 8—13; vii. 8; and xxii. 19—27; Num. xv. 1—16; and xxviii. xxix. (2) The SIN and TRESPASS-OFFERINGS were never merely voluntary. Their matter was regulated according to the station, crime, or ability, of the offerer. A bullock was offered for a priest, or for the congregation, or for their rulers; the fat was burnt on the altar; the rest of the animal burnt without the camp; and the blood partly sprinkled on the golden altar, or towards the mercy seat; and the rest poured at the bottom of the brazen altar. In other cases, the priest had the flesh for his share, and the blood, except of the expiation goat and leper's trespass-offering, was sprinkled on the horns, and round about the bottom of the brazen altar; but a very poor man offered an omer of fine flour, and a suspected adulteress an handful of barley meal, without any frankincense.—They represented Jesus Christ, divinely charged with our sins, and dying in our stead for the satisfaction of God's justice, and for advancing his own and his people's happiness; Lev. iv. v. vi. 1—7, 24—30; vii. 1—11; and xvi. Num. xv. 22—31. (3) PEACE-OFFERINGS thanked God for mercies received, and obtained mercies desired, or paid vows. They might be either of a male or female of the herd or flock, as the offerer pleased. The fat was burnt to the Lord; the right breast and shoulder, cheeks, and maw, belonged to the priests; and the rest was returned to the offerer, to make a feast thereof with his friends; which, if a thank-offering, it behoved them to eat the same day; and, in other cases, on that and the next day. These offerings represented Jesus Christ as purchasing for us everlasting peace and prosperity, to the honour of his Father, the joy of ministers, and the speedy comfort of saved men; Lev. iii. and vii. 11—21, 28, 34; Deut. xviii. 3. (4) The MEAT-OFFERINGS, whether offered separately by themselves, or as appendages to burnt-offerings, peace-offerings, trespass-offerings, or to the kid and lamb sin-offerings, consisted of fine flour, frankincense, oil, and salt. Whether they were baked or fried, or not, a part thereof was burnt on the altar to the Lord, and the rest belonged to the priests. They represented Jesus Christ, the most excellent fruit of the earth, prepared by dolorous sufferings to be the everlasting joy of JEHOVAH, and delightful nourishment of his chosen people; Lev. ii. vi. 14—23; and vii. 9, 10; Num. xv. 1—16; and xviii. 9, 10. (5) The DRINK-OFFERINGS of wine were scarcely ever used alone, but attended the meat-offerings. Part of the wine was poured out to the Lord on the altar, and the rest was given to the priests.—They represented that fulness of consolation which flows from Jesus' offering of himself for us, and our feeding on him by faith; Exod. xxix. 40; Num. xv. 1—16; and xxviii. xxix. (6) The HOLY ANOINTING OIL was formed by pounding together myrrh, cinnamon, cassia, calamus, and olive oil. By an unction of it the priests and holy utensils were consecrated to their sacred work; and on nothing else might it be put, or any ointment made like unto it, under pain of death. It represented the Holy Ghost in his manifold precious virtues, by whom Jesus Christ, his ministers, people, and ordinances, are consecrated to, and fitted for, their respective uses; Exod. xxx. 22—33. (7) The SOUL RANSOM MONEY, of which every man, poor or rich, was to give half a shekel when the congregation was numbered, if not once every year, that there might be no plague among them, represented Jesus Christ as a ransom, equally given for both poor and rich, to prevent the infliction of God's wrath on his people; Exod. xxx. 11—16; and xxxviii. 25, 26. (8) The FIRST-FRUIITS of animals, vegetables, dough, wool, &c. which were partly assigned to the Lord, and partly to the priests, represented Jesus Christ as the great honourer of God and the sanctifying Head of his people; and represented his people as the glory and preservers of nations and churches; Exod. xiii. 12—16; and xxii. 29, 30; Lev. xxii. 27; Num. xviii. 12—18; and xv. 17—21. (9) To commemorate the Israelites' living in the wilderness on tenth deals of manna, their limited meat-offerings were all proportioned by tenth deals; Num. xv. 1—16. For the same reason the share, which the Lord demanded of their crop, was measured by TENTHS or TITHES. One tenth of their whole income from their fields, &c. was assigned to the Levites in general, who gave a TENTH part thereof to the priests. A second TENTH of their incomes was appointed to be spent in feasting the poor, &c. at the sacred festivals. At least every third year, ANOTHER TENTH, or perhaps the SECOND TENTH, was to be given to the Levites and the poor at their homes.—These TITHES figured out Jesus Christ as the abundant provision of his people; and his people as the abundant means of his satisfaction and delight. They represented the duty of our devoting a considerable part of our incomes to the Lord, and of maintaining his faithful ministers in a decent manner; Num. xviii. 20—32; Deut. xiv. 22—29. (10) DEVOTED things or persons, assigned to the Lord by voluntary vow, more or less solemn.—Nothing belonging to the Lord by an antecedent claim, as first-fruits, tithes, &c. might be devoted. Nothing devoted might be redeemed back, without paying a fifth part more than the priests' estimation of its worth. And nothing devoted under a curse could be redeemed at all.—These gifts represented Jesus Christ and his saints, voluntarily, deliberately, and irrevocably, devoted to the service of God; Lev. xxvii.

The WAVE and HEAVE-OFFERINGS were not different from what we have mentioned, but were either less sacred oblations, or but a part of the more sacred.—Thus the right shoulder and breast, fat, kidneys, &c. of the priest's ram of consecration, with the loaf, the cake of oiled bread, and wafer of unleavened bread, which attended it; Exod. xxix. 22—26; Lev. viii. 25—29: the right shoulder and breast, and perhaps the fat, of all peace-offerings, with the leavened loaf of the thank-offering; Lev. vii. 30; and x. 15: the lepers' trespass-offering, with its attendant log of oil; Lev. xiv. 12, 24: the jealousy-offering; Num. v. 25: the sheaf or omer of ripe ears at the feast of unleavened bread; Lev. xxiii. 15: the two loaves at Pentecost, and their attendant peace-offering; Lev. xxiii. 19, 20: the first of the dough; Num. xv. 19, 21: the tithes; Num. xviii. 24—30: the Lord's tribute of the spoil of Midian; Num. xxxi. 29, 41: were heaved up towards heaven, or waved towards the four winds, in acknowledgment of their coming from God, and in token of devoting them to his service, who is the Most High and every where present JEHOVAH.

More abundantly to represent Jesus Christ in his person, his righteousness, and the virtue of them, two or more of the simple sacrifices were often joined together. Thus, for the consecration of the Levites, for the purification of a defiled Nazarite, for the purification of a woman polluted by child-birth, for the purification of one cured of a running issue, and for a congregational sin of ignorance or bird expiation, a burnt-offering and a sin-offering were connected; Num. viii. 12; and vi. 11; Lev. v. 7; xii. 6, 8; and xv. 14, 30; Num. xv. 24. For the consecration of priests, a sin-offering, burnt-offering, and ram of consecration: i. e. a kind of peace-offering; Exod. xxix. Lev. viii. ix. For a Nazarite, after finishing his vow, a sin-offering, burnt-offering, and peace-offering; Num. vi. 14. For the purification of a healed leper, a bird-offering, a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and a trespass-offering; Lev. xiv. 6—20. For dedicating the Mosaic altar, burnt-offerings, sin-offerings, peace-offerings, twelve days repeated; Num. vii. For dedicating Solomon's temple, large burnt-offerings and peace-offerings; 1 Kings viii. 63, 64. For dedicating Zerubbabel's temple, burnt-offerings, sin-offerings, and peace-offerings; Ezra vi. 16. At Pentecost, a burnt-offering, sin-offering, and peace-offering; Num. xxviii. 26—31; Lev. xxiii. 15—21. At the other monthly and annual festivals, a burnt-offering and sin-offering; Lev. xxiii. Num. xxviii. xxix.

VIII. TYPICAL OF SACRED SEASONS. (1) To be a constant mean of Israel's fellowship with God, and to represent Jesus Christ as predestinated before the foundation of the world, and in these last times offered for all the elect, to be the constant nourishment of their souls, and daily mean of their access to God and familiar intimacy with him—a lamb, bought with the public money, and charged with the guilt of all the tribes, by the laying on of the hands of the stationary men who represented them, was offered for the nation every morning about nine o'clock, while the incense was burnt on the golden altar, and the people prayed in the court; and another in the afternoon; with their respective meat-offerings and drink-offerings; Exod. xxix. 38—45; Lev. vi. 9, 12; Num. xxviii. 1—8, &c. (2) To prefigure the evangelical and celestial rest, and more abundant manifestation of Jesus Christ therein not only was every SABBATH to be observed as a day of rest from all manner of work, and used in the exercises of devotion, but thereon the morning and evening sacrifices were doubled; Ezek. xxi. 12—17; and xxxv. 2, 3; Num. xv. 32—35; and xxviii. 9, 10. (3) To thank God for the merciful alterations of the moon, and changing of the seasons; to expiate the sins; and make grateful acknowledgment of the mercies, of the finished month, and to supplicate the continuance of these favours; and to represent the renovation of all things to infinite advantage by Jesus' incarnation and mediation, and the happy and extensive discovery and virtue of himself and his work in the evangelical and eternal state; the DAY OF THE NEW MOON'S APPEARANCE was celebrated by abstinence from the servile labours of ploughing, sowing, &c.; and a large burnt-offering of two bullocks, one ram, and seven lambs—and a sin-offering of one kid was offered for the congregation; over which sacrifice the priests blew with the silver trumpets; Amos viii. 5; 2 Kings iv. 22; Num. xxviii. 11—15; and x. 10; Psal. lxxxi. 1, 2. (4) To commemorate the Hebrews' deliverance from Egypt; to seal the covenant of grace with the genuine seed of Abraham; to prefigure our redemption through the slaughter of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, in the end of the world, by the rulers and people of Judah at this very season of the year; and to represent our safe and delightful feeding on him by faith and with godly sorrow; the PASSOVER was yearly observed on the 14th day of that month, in which they came out of Egypt; which, for commemoration of that deliverance, was appointed to begin their sacred year, and answered nearly to our month of March. A male lamb or kid of a year old, was taken, sacrificed, or at least slain; its blood sprinkled on the door-posts and upper lintel, as a means of preservation from the angel who destroyed the first-born of the Egyptians: and the flesh of it being roasted, without breaking a bone thereof, was eaten that same night by about twelve or twenty in a company, with unleavened bread, bitter herbs, and pious conference.—Such as could not observe it that very day did it on that same day in the following month; Exod. xii.; Lev. xxiii. 5; Josh. v. 10; Deut. xvi. 1—7; Num. xxviii. 16; and ix. 9—14; 2 Chron. xxx. 1—20; and xxxv. 1—18. (5) To commemorate the Israelites' affliction and coarse fare in Egypt, and their sudden deliverance therefrom; to commemorate their seven days' travels before they got through the Red Sea; to prefigure the low and afflicted, but devout, life of our Redeemer and of his saints on earth; and to prefigure the fate of his gospel church; the FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAD was observed on the seven days which followed the passover; on the first and last of which no servile work of ploughing, sowing, or the like, was transacted. No bread, but unleavened, was eaten upon any of the seven. On each of them two bullocks, one ram, and seven lambs, were offered for a burnt-offering—and a kid for a sin-offering for the congregation. The silver trumpets were blown over the burnt-offering while it lay on the altar; Exod. xii. 17—20; xiii. 4—10; xxiii. 14—17; and xxxiv. 18; Lev. xxiii. 6—8; Deut. xvi. 8; Num. xxviii. 17—25. To sanctify the approaching harvest, and prefigure the resurrection of Jesus Christ, our great sacrifice, from the dead on that very day of the year, and the effectual spread of the gospel which followed it, a sheaf of barley was publicly reaped, threshed, and winnowed: an omer of the meal or ears, being waved and heaved along with frankincense and oil, part of it was burnt on the altar along with a lamb for burnt-offering and part of its double meat-offering; Lev. xxiii. 9—14. (6) To give thanks for their quiet possession of Canaan, and for the mercies of the finished harvest; to commemorate the publication of the law from mount Sinai; to prefigure the effusion of the Holy Ghost after our Saviour's ascension, and the amazing spread and influence of the gospel by means thereof; was the festival of PENTECOST observed; i. e. of the fiftieth day after the passover, about our Whitsuntide. No servile work was done thereon. Besides the ordinary festival sacrifice of two bullocks, two rams, and seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering, another sacrifice was offered of one bullock, two rams, and seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, a kid for a sin-offering, and two lambs for a peace-offering,—along with two leavened loaves, each containing a tenth deal of fine flour; as the first fruits of their finished wheat harvest. In presenting this oblation, they made a solemn acknowledgment of the original meanness of their nation, and of God's gracious fulfilment of his promises to them; Num. xxviii. 26—31; Lev. xxiii. 15—21; Deut. xvi. 9—12, and xxvi. 1—11; Exod. xxiii. 14—17; and xxxiv. 22, 23. (7) To commemorate the creation of all things at this season; to thank God for the mercies of the finished civil year, and to obtain mercies for the year now commencing; to prepare the people for the great day of atonement; and especially to prefigure the joyful and efficacious spread of the gospel of our crucified Redeemer; was the FEAST OF TRUMPETS observed on the first day of the first civil, but seventh sacred, month. No servile work was done thereon. To the new moon offering above mentioned was added another sacrifice of one bullock, one ram, and seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering. The silver trumpets, or others of rams' horns, were blown over the burning sacrifices from morning till night; Num. xxix. 1—6; and x. 10. (8) Perhaps to commemorate the fall of man on this day of the year; or to commemorate God's reconciliation to Israel after they had worshipped the golden calf or contemned Canaan; but chiefly for expiating the sins of the preceding year, and to prefigure Jesus' debased and laborious course of obedience and suffering as the sole mean of atonement for a guilty world before God; the ANNUAL EXPIATION was observed on the 10th day of this month. No manner of work was to be done thereon more than on the sabbath. All the Hebrews observed it in solemn fasting and affliction of their souls. After the daily sacrifice of a lamb for a burnt-offering, and the festival sacrifice of one bullock, one ram, seven lambs, for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a sin-offering, were finished, the high priest, washed in water, and mostly dressed in his plain garments, performed the whole work of sacrificing peculiar to that day. For himself and his fellow priests he offered a bullock for a sin-offering. Having carried some incense into the Holy of Holies, and kindled it before, perhaps on the west side of, the ark, he carried in part of the bullock's blood, and sprinkled it amidst the smoke of the incense, once towards the top, and seven times towards the foreside, of the ark. Of the two goats for a sin-offering for the whole nation, one chosen by lot was offered: part of its blood was carried into the most holy place, and sprinkled once towards the top, and seven times towards the front, of the mercy seat, to make atonement for the oracle and sanctuary, which was ceremonially polluted by the sins of the worshippers who attended at it. The rest of the blood of the goat, mingled with part of the blood of the bullock, was sprinkled towards both sides of the sanctuary. The horns of the golden, and I suppose also of the brazen, altar were tipt therewith seven times. The other goat, after being charged with the guilt of the nation, confessed to God over his head, was dismissed by a fit person into the wilderness. Two rams, one for the priests, and another for the people, were then offered for burnt-offerings, along with the fat of the bullock and goat of the sin-offerings; the flesh of which was burnt without the camp. The high priest then solemnly blessed the people; Num. xxix. 7—11; Lev. xxiii. 26—32; and xvi.—(9) To commemorate the Israelites' safe dwelling in their tents for forty years in the Arabian wilderness; to shew their thankfulness to God for their happy enjoyment of their fruitful country; to prefigure Jesus' tabernacling in our nature, and through his whole life solemnly offering up himself an infinitely valuable sacrifice to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of his people; to prefigure the state of the gospel church, the abundant manifestation and virtue of a crucified Redeemer therein, and the noted rest and joy of the apostolic and millennial periods; and to represent the believers' pilgrimage on earth, and at last happy entrance into heaven; was the FEAST OF TABERNACLES celebrated by all the Israelites, at the place where God's tabernacle or temple stood, on the 15th and seven following days of the seventh sacred and first civil month. The first and last days thereof were solemn convocations, on which no servile work was done: the people dwelt in booths for seven of olive branches, &c. and sin-offerings, and large, but constantly decreasing, burnt-sacrifices, were offered on each of the days for the Israelitish nation; Lev. xxiii. 33—43; Deut. xvi. 13—15; and xxxi. 10; Neh. viii. 13—18; Num. xxix. 12—38. The law was read with peculiar solemnity at the feast of tabernacles, &c. and it was only at THIS FEAST, the PASSOVER or feast of unleavened bread, and PENTECOST, that all the males of Israel, capable of travelling, were obliged to attend; Exod. xxiii. 14—17; and xxxiv. 22, 23; Deut. xvi. 16. (10) For securing solemn instruction to the Hebrew nation; for relief of the poor, especially such as were in debt; and to mark Canaan the Lord's peculiar and rightful property; to manifest that not its fruitful soil, but God's providence, was their security for a supply; and to prefigure our spiritual redemption, liberty, and rest, through Jesus Christ, particularly in the New Testament church and heavenly state; the SEVENTH YEAR, beginning with the seventh sacred month, when the fields were quite clear of their crop, was observed as a sabbath.—The fields lay uncultivated; their spontaneous growth was common property, but chiefly belonged to the poor. And the debt which one Israelite owed to another was foreborne, if not remitted. Lev. xxv. 2—7; Deut. xv. 1—18; and xxxi. 10. (11) To keep the property of their respective shares of Canaan fixed in the Hebrew families, and to keep their genealogies clear till Christ should come; to prevent perpetual oppression, poverty, and bondage, or even undue hastening to be rich; but chiefly to prefigure our redemption by Jesus Christ in the evangelical and celestial state of the church; that year, which, beginning on the 10th day of the seventh sacred month, i. e. the fast of expiation consisted partly of the 49th, and partly of the 50th, year, was observed as a JUBILEE of rest. It was proclaimed by sound of trumpet through the whole country: perhaps most of the inhabitants joined in the solemn sound. The fields lay uncultivated. The spontaneous growth belonged chiefly to the poor. Every debt which one Israelite or proselyte of the covenant owed to another was absolutely and finally remitted. Slaves and prisoners were set free. Estates, which had been sold, reverted to their original proprietors; and hence the nearer to the approaching jubilee a sale took place, the price of lands was so much the lower; Lev. xxv. 8—55.

IX. TYPICAL PURIFICATIONS. If an Hebrew, under ceremonial uncleanness, ate of the sacred oblations; if he ate any blood, or any fat of sacrificeable animals; if he contemned the ordinance of circumcision, the passover, or water of separation; or if he were chargeable with murder, adultery, or any other presumptuous sin; no means of purification or of atonement were left him.—An awful hint to presumptuous contemners of Jesus Christ, or his oracles and ordinances; that for them was reserved nothing but everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; Num. xv. 30, 31; 1 Sam. iii. 14. But, (1) If a wife were suspected of adultery, the case was cleared by a solemn adjuration of her before God by the priest; a coarse offering of barley-meal, to bring sin to remembrance; and a drinking of holy water, impregnated with dust of the sanctuary, and with ink which had marked the curse due to adultery. If she were guilty, this draught made her thighs to rot and her belly to swell: if she were innocent, it rendered her healthy and fruitful.—An awful token of God's detestation of adultery, and every approach thereto or ill-grounded suspicion thereof! and that, by the effect of Jesus' death and word, and of afflictive providences on their hearts, the hypocrisy or sincerity of professors is much tried in this life; and that dreadful shall be the trial and punishment of hypocrites at last; Num. v. (2) Not only was the general pollution of the Hebrew nation, and of the tabernacle, temple, and ordinances, which they had infected, annually purged by the GREAT EXPIATION already mentioned; but when murder was committed, and the murderer unknown, an unyoked heifer, brought by the nearest magistrates, was slain in a rough valley over running water. The magistrates, washing their hands over the slain heifer, solemnly protested their innocence of the crime, and their ignorance of the criminal; and the priests present supplicated forgiveness.—A figure this of our redemption through the death of Jesus Christ, the Seed of the woman, in the rough valley of this world, and the influence of his pure and purifying Spirit as connected therewith; Deut. xxi. (3) In DEFILEMENT contracted from HOLY THINGS, the high priest, who offered the goat of the GREAT ANNUAL EXPIATION, and sprinkled its blood; he who led the scape goat into the wilderness; or who burnt the flesh of sin-offerings for priests or the congregation; was purified by a simple washing in water; Lev. iv. and xvi. 24—28. The brazen pot, in which the flesh of other sin-offerings was boiled, was purified by washing and rinsing; but, if it were an earthen vessel, it could not be cleansed at all; Lev. vi. 28. The priest, who killed the red heifer; and he who cast the cedar wood, hyssop, and scarlet wool, into the fire, with her flesh; he that burnt her flesh; he that carried her ashes, and laid them up in a clean place; he who sprinkled the water of separation, or even touched it; had to wash himself or clothes, if not both, and remain unclean until the even; Num. xix. 7, 8, 10, 21, 22. (4) In DEFILEMENT contracted from UNCLEAN ANIMALS, which were emblems of wicked persons, he who touched their carcase was unclean until the even; and he who bore their carcase, or ate thereof, had to wash his clothes and remain unclean until the even; Lev. xi. Deut. xiv. (5) While circumcision ceremonially purged the original defilement of the child; Gen. xvii. 9—14; Josh. v. 2—8; the DEFILEMENT contracted by the mother in CHILD-BIRTH, after remaining therein for a time, and twice as long in the case of a female child as in that of a male, was removed by a burnt-offering and a sin-offering; Lev. xii. (6) In purging the DEFILEMENT contracted by LEPROSY, which required so much circumspection in the priest's judging of it, and which represented sinful corruption reigning or raging in persons, families, or nations, the leper was seven times sprinkled with a mixture of water and of the blood of the slain bird: he shaved off all the hair of his flesh, and washed his body and clothes; and, though admitted to the camp, was for seven days restrained from entering his own house: on the seventh day he again shaved off all the hair on his flesh, and washed his body and clothes: on the eighth day he offered a trespass-offering, a sin-offering, a burnt-offering, and a log of oil. The priest touched the extremities of the leper's body with part of the blood of the trespass-offering. After sprinkling part of the oil seven times towards the tabernacle, he, in like manner, touched the extremities of the body of the healed leper therewith, and poured another part of it on his head. Thus his purification not a little resembled the consecration of the high priest.—The leprous house was purified by a sevenfold sprinkling of bird's blood mingled with running water; Lev. xiii. xiv. And if a man had but a scab suspected for a leprosy, he had to wash his clothes; Lev. xiii. 6. (7) In DEFILEMENT contracted from RUNNING ISSUES, which represented the scandalous eruptions of indwelling lusts, which are extremely infectious, the person, when healed, continued seven days in his purification; he washed his body and clothes in running water; and on the eighth offered two turtle doves or two young pigeons, the one for a sin-offering and the other for a burnt-offering. He, who touched the flesh or the bed of the person who had the issue, or had sat on his seat, or been spit upon by him, had to wash his body and clothes, and remain unclean until the even. He who but touched what had been under the unclean person had to remain unclean until the even, if not also to bathe himself and wash his clothes. The vessel of earth, which had been touched by the unclean person, was to be broken, and that of wood to be rinsed in water; Lev. xv. (8) To purge out the DEFILEMENT contracted from DEAD BODIES, which represented a heart dead in sin and a fallen covenant head, a red unyoked heifer was to be slain without the camp, even for the next in dignity to the high priest.—Her blood was seven times sprinkled towards the tabernacle. Her flesh, and the rest of her blood, and even her excrements, were burnt, together with cedar wood, hyssop, and scarlet wool; and the ashes were laid up in a clean place without the camp. Of these ashes, mingled with running water, the water of purification was formed. He who touched a dead body, or any part of it, or a grave, remained seven days in his uncleanness. He was to be sprinkled with the water of purification on the third and seventh day, by a clean person, with a bunch of hyssop: on the seventh day he had to wash himself and his clothes. The house or tent in which a person had died, and all the vessels in it, remained unclean seven days, and were purged by the sprinkled water of purification: and even he, who touched any thing which the unclean person had touched, was rendered unclean until the even; Num. xix. These PURIFICATIONS represented our spiritual cleansing from the sin of our holy exercises;—the sin of our fellowship with wicked men;—the sin of our original corruption, or natural actions; the sin of our indwelling lusts, or infectious outbreaks;—by the sacrifice, blood, and Spirit of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, and Seed of the woman, continually applied to our conscience, heart, and practice, while we live in this world.

CHAPTER IV.

A short view of the GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY of nations; necessary for the right understanding of the historical, and especially the prophetic, parts of scriptures; the correspondent texts of which are, all along, generally quoted, and ought to be carefully compared.

CHALDEA and CANAAN are the countries on earth, the situations of which claim our particular regard; and to these the respective bearings of other countries hath somewhat peculiarly important. CHALDEA was situated mostly to the westward of the river Euphrates, between the 31st and 35th degree of north latitude, and in the 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, and 49th, of east longitude, from London. It had Northern Arabia on the west, Persia on the east, Assyria on the north east, and Mesopotamia on the north-west. Through these territories ran south-eastward into the Persian gulf the famed rivers of Euphrates and Hiddekel, or Tigris. Here, about the 32d degree of north latitude, God created man, and planted the garden of Eden, upon the banks of the united stream of the rivers just mentioned; and which, a little below, was divided into the two rivers of Pison on the west and Gihon on the east; Gen. ii. 8—14; 2 Kings xix. 12, 13; Ezek. xxvii. 21. The spot was not only extremely delightful in itself, but adapted for the spread of mankind from thence into the rest of the world. From the wood of which Noah built his ark, one is tempted to think that it was formed in this country. Not long after the flood we find the bulk of mankind in the plain of Shinar, and building the tower of Babylon; which could scarcely be 150 miles to the north-westward of Eden; Gen. xi. 1—9. Here Nimrod erected the first kingdom that we know of on earth. Not long after, Ashur, a descendant of Shem, erected another at Nineveh, about 150 miles to the north-east, on the river Hiddekel; Gen. x. 9—12.

From Babel, the posterity of Noah gradually dispersed themselves into the different quarters of the world. The descendants of JAPHETH, who became by far the most numerous, removed northward, and peopled the northern half of Asia.—Thence the descendants of Javan and Gomer moved to the north-west, and peopled Europe. No doubt the descendants of Magog, or others, moved from Eastern Tary into America, and peopled a great part of that country. The posterity of SHEM peopled the southern part of Asia, Assyria, Mesopotamia, Syria, Arabia, Chaldea, Persia, Judea, and perhaps China. But, in later times, by the invasions of the Greeks, Romans, Tartars, and Turks, and by the European settlements in the East Indies, most of what once pertained to the descendants of Shem is now subjected to those of Japheth. Of the posterity of HAM, the Canaanites took up their dwelling in that pleasant country which hath been since called by their name, and which God had marked out for the residence of his peculiar people. It lies in the 32d, 33d, and 34th, degrees of north latitude, and the 36th and 37th of east longitude, from London, about four hundred miles westward of Babylon. It has Arabia on the east and south; Egypt on the south-west; the Mediterranean sea on the west; Mount Lebanon and Syria on the north; and shall hereafter be more particularly described. The rest of Ham's offspring, after part of them had continued for some generations in Asia, removed south-westward to Africa, and peopled it. No doubt some of them from thence, by means of tempests, or otherwise, crossed the ocean into South America and the islands adjacent. Distinguished estrangement from the knowledge of the true God, miserable bondage to Satan and to their fellows of mankind, have in every age been the general characteristics of the descendants of Ham, particularly of those by Canaan. Never, that we know of, did they form themselves into any extensive and lasting empire. Never, except for a short time, and in a very restricted extent, have they been able to rule over the descendants of Shem or Japheth; Gen. x. and ix. 25—27. But a more particular account of these descendants of Noah, mentioned in scripture, is necessary.

I. Not long after God had frustrated the attempt of mankind at Babel, and confounded their language, the CANAANITES, descended from Ham's youngest son, in seven principal nations of Amorites, Hittites, Jebusites, Girgashites, Perizzites, Hivites, &c. took possession of CANAAN, and formed themselves into almost as many kingdoms as they had cities; Gen. x. 15—19; xii. 6; xiii. 7; xiv. 2, 5—7; and xv. 19—21; Exod. iii. 8; and xxiii. 23; Josh. xii. Judg. i. 7. Notwithstanding all that Melchizedek, one of their kings, could do to reform them, they quickly became monsters in wickedness: and God punished them with terrible ravage and reduction by Chedorlaomer, king of Elam; Gen. xiii. 13; xiv. and ix. 25, 26. About sixteen years after, A. M. 2107, their kingdoms of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, were, for their unnatural lewdness, consumed with fire and brimstone from heaven; and the country turned into a dead and poisonous lake, into which the river Jordan hath since run, without any visible outlet; Gen. xviii. xix. Job xviii. 11—21; Is. i. 9, 10; and xiii. 19; Ezek. xvi. 49, 50; Amos iv. 11; Zeph. ii. 9; 2 Pet. ii. 6; Jude 7. The rest of the Canaanites were relieved about 440 years longer, till God had prepared the Hebrew nation to take possession of their country; Gen. xv. 16. And, for some time before the Hebrews invaded Canaan, God had weakened the natives, by pestilence, swarms of insects, civil wars, and the like; Exod. xxiii. 28; Deut. vii. 20; Josh. xxiv. 12; Num. xiii. 32; Judg. i. 7. Within about seven years, Moses conquered two powerful kingdoms on the east, and Joshua thirty-one lesser kingdoms on the west, of Jordan; and gave their land to the Israelites; Gen. xv. 18—21; Exod. iii. 8; xxiii. 23; and xxxiv. 11; Num. xxi. 21—35; and xxxii. xxxiv. Deut. ii. 26—37; and iii. 1—20; Josh. vi—xxi. Such Canaanites as were left in the land (many of them being made tributaries), having seduced the Israelites into a compliance with their idolatries, retained or recovered a considerable part of the strongest places of the country. They even formed themselves into a mighty kingdom in Western Galilee; which, governed by Jabin, did for twenty years terribly oppress the Israelites. But their army was defeated, and, it is probable, their empire unhinged, by Barak; Psal. cvi. 34—40; Ezra ix. 11, 12; Deut. vii. Num. xxxiii. 55, 56; Josh. xxiii. 11—16; Judg. i—iv. Such as still remained, we may suppose, assisted the Midianites, and especially the Philistines, to oppress the Israelites; Judg. vi. x. xiii. 1 Sam. iv. xiii. xxxi. But king David and Solomon reduced them all as slaves to their people. The latter employed 153,000 of them in the most servile parts of his work, in building his temple, palace, &c.; 2 Sam. v. 6—9; 1 Chron. xi. 4—8; 1 Kings v. 15, 16; and ix. 20, 21; 2 Chron. ii. 17, 18; and viii. 7, 8; Gen. ix. 25, 26. While part of the Canaanites continued among the Israelites till after their captivity, tempting them to idolatry, others joined their Gibeonite brethren, dedicating themselves to the servile work of God's temple, under the name of Nethinims; Ezra ix. x. Neh. xiii. Ezra ii. 55, 58; Neh. ii. 3; 1 Chron. ix. 2.

Such Canaanites as had formed themselves into the kingdoms of Zidon and Tyre, on the north-west of Canaan, not only escaped the sword of the Jewish conquerors, but, for many ages, carried on a most flourishing trade, especially by sea.—Scarcely was there a coast or isle, adapted to trade, in the Mediterranean, to which they did not send forth their colonies. No doubt, multitudes, who fled from the sword of Joshua, Barak, or David, took refuge among them, while others retired to Greece, North of Africa, &c. and there formed themselves into powerful states. The Tyrians entered into a brotherly covenant of friendship with the Israelites, under David and Solomon; 2 Sam. v. 1 Kings v. ix. Amos i. 9. But this they grossly violated in joining the grand alliance against Jehoshaphat; Psal. lxxxiii. 7; and in delivering up Jewish refugees to the Edomites in the days of Jehoram and Ahaz, or in selling them to the Grecians for slaves; Joel iii. 4—6; Amos i. 9.—To punish this, and their other abounding impieties, Shalmaneser, king of Assyria.

about A. M. 3282, ravaged their country, took multitudes prisoners, and sold them to the Arabs for slaves; Is. xxiii. Amos i. 9, 10; Joel iii. 4—8. But the Tyrians, having defeated his fleet, obliged his troops, who had besieged their capital for five years, to retire. They then pushed their traffic with more assiduity and vigour than ever. There was scarcely a nation in the west of Asia, north of Africa, or south of Europe, with which they had not some trading. The whole strength of Phenicia was employed in their fleets and armies; Is. xxiii. 17. Ezek. xxvii.—Provoked with their attempts to assist Zedekiah, king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, after he had sacked Jerusalem, A. M. 3416, marched his troops into Phenicia; and, marking his motions with terrible ravage and bloodshed, multitudes were slain, or taken prisoners and sold for slaves. The merchants fled away to Cilicia, Spain, Carthage, &c. By fire and sword he rendered their once glorious country almost utterly desolate. Ethbaal, their haughty monarch, was ignominiously slain. And, after a siege of thirteen years, Tyre was taken, A. M. 3432; but the inhabitants had removed themselves, and their valuable effects, to a neighbouring island about seventy paces from the shore. Disappointed of the rich booty which they expected, as the reward of their inexpressible fatigues, the Chaldeans raged like infernal spirits; abusing and murdering the few weak or sickly Tyrians whom they could find; burning the city, and hurling the ashes thereof into the sea. That Nebuchadnezzar in his fury pursued the fugitive Tyrians into the north of Africa, the Mediterranean isles, or south-west of Spain, as some writers pretend, is scarcely probable. It is more likely that those in the island pacified his rage by a partial submission. But, to the inexpressible grief and vexation of not only the Phenicians themselves, but of the merchants who traded with them, much of the Tyrian wealth was lost in the sea, or otherwise destroyed; and never, while the Chaldean monarchy continued, did they recover their power or traffic; Joel iii. 4—8; Amos i. 9, 10; Is. xxiii. Jer. xxv. 9, 22; xxvii. 3—8; and xlvi. 4; Ezek. xxvi—xxviii.

But, just seventy years after the Chaldeans had destroyed their city on the continent, instead of which they had built one upon the island, we find the Tyrians assisting Darius Hystaspis, king of Persia, against the Ionian rebels of Lesser Asia, A. M. 3502. They also aided Xerxes, his son, in his mad invasion of Greece. Having fortified their new city, and recovered their enriching trade, they and their fellow Phenicians, in conjunction with the Egyptians, attempted to free themselves from the Persian yoke. About A. M. 3653, Artaxerxes Ochus ravaged their country in his inhuman manner. The Zidonians, finding themselves betrayed in the siege by Tennes their king, and Mentor his Grecian general, set fire to their city, and perished in the flames, to the number of 40,000. The rest of the Phenicians submitted, and had their slavery increased. Much about the same time the slaves murdered almost all their masters at Tyre. Highly provoked with their refusing to admit him into their city, that he might sacrifice to their principal idol, Alexander the Great, about A. M. 3672, laid siege to Tyre; and, with infinite labour and expense, took it by storm, after a siege of seven months. About 15,000 of the inhabitants had fled off in the Zidonian ships; and many of their wives and children had been transported to Carthage when the siege began. Of the men who remained, Alexander put 8000 to the sword, crucified 2000 of the principal, and sold 30,000 to the Jews, Arabs, and others, for slaves; Gen. ix. 25, 27; Psal. lxxiii. 7—18; Amos i. 9, 10; Joel iii. 4—8; Isa. xxiii. Jer. xlvii. 4; Ezek. xxvi—xxviii. Zech. ix. 1—4.

When Alexander's fury was abated, he repeopled Tyre from the continent of Phenicia. But Antigonus, one of his captains who succeeded him, soon after reduced it to the brink of ruin, having taken it by a siege of nineteen months. The Alexandrians in Egypt having drawn to themselves the trade of the nations around, the Phenicians could never recover their influence: they were also often embroiled in the contests between the Syro-grecian and Egypto-grecian successors of Alexander the Great.—To punish their frequent riots, and their siding with Cassius his enemy, Augustus, the Roman emperor, a little before our Saviour's birth, deprived the Tyrians and Zidonians of their municipal freedom. About A. D. 194, Niger, the Roman usurper, burnt Tyre into a heap of ruins, and murdered most of its inhabitants. From A. D. 633, to about 1130, Phenicia was enslaved by the Saracens and Seljukian Turks. It had been subjected about 160 years to the inhuman popish croisades, when Alphix, the sultan of Egypt, took it, and utterly destroyed Tyre and Zidon, and the other places of strength, that they might never more afford shelter to the Europeans: since which Tyre hath been generally an heap of ruins, inhabited only by a few pitiful fishermen; Is. xxiii. Joel iii. 4—8; Amos i. 9, 10; Jer. xlvii. 4, 7; Zech. ix. 1—4; Ezek. xxvi—xxviii. The Canaanites, who, in their flight from Joshua, David, Nebuchadnezzar, &c. had retired to the north of Africa, formed there several sovereignties; but that of Carthage was the most noted. After terrible contentions among themselves, or with the Greeks in Sicily, and Romans in Sicily, Spain, Italy, and Africa, they were all, about 3858, reduced by the Romans to the basest servitude. For about 1900 years past their country, by the tyranny of the Romans, Vandals, Saracens, and Turks, has been an almost constant scene of misery and bondage. Such Phenicians as retired to Europe, and there for a time subsisted under the names of Beotians, Pelasgi, Etruscans, &c. were quickly reduced to misery and bondage by the Greek and Roman descendants of Japheth. Thus Noah's curse of servitude followed these Canaanites whithersoever they fled to escape it; Gen. ix. 25—27.

II. THE PHILISTINES were a part of the posterity of Mizraim, the second son of Ham; Gen. x. 14; 1 Chron. i. 11, 12. Leaving Caphtor, or the north-east parts of Egypt, they very early settled in a small strip of territory along the sea shore, in the south-west of Canaan, having driven out the Avites, who before possessed it; Deut. ii. 23; Amos ix. 7; Jer. xlvii. 4. In the days of Abraham, Isaac, and Ephraim, they had begun to discover their malicious spite against the Hebrews; Gen. xx. xxi. xxvi. 1 Chron. vii. 21. Notwithstanding Joshua's allotment of their territory to the tribe of Judah, they long retained their fortified cities of Gaza, Ashkelon, Ashdod, Ekron, and Gath. Nor did they ever lose an opportunity of doing the Israelites mischief. Neither covenants of friendship with the Patriarchs, nor the rebuffs they met with from Shamgar, Samson, the ark, Samuel, Jonathan, Saul, or David, could long restrain their implacable resentment; Judg. iii. 31; and xlii. 1—17. At last David reduced their country; 2 Sam. viii. 1; 1 Chron. xiv. 15—17. But towards the end of his reign they attempted to revolt; 2 Sam. xxi. 13—22; 1 Chron. xx. 4—8. Not long after the division of the Hebrew monarchy, they renewed the war with the ten tribes; 1 Kings xv. 27; and xvi. 15. To their own hurt, they joined in the grand alliance against Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, about A. M. 3112; Psal. lxxlii. 7—18; 2 Chron. xx. Under Jehoram his son they ravaged the kingdom of Judah, and sold multitudes of Jews to the Edomites or Greeks; 2 Chron. xxi. 16, 17; Amos i. 6; Joel iii. 6. Notwithstanding Uzziah, king of Judah, had reduced part of their country, they, in the days of Ahaz, his unhappy grandson, again took arms, and seized upon part of Judea; 2 Chron. xxvi. 6; and xxviii. 18; Isa. ix. 12. About 20 years after Hezekiah reduced their whole country to the brink of ruin; 2 Kings xviii. 8. Isa. xiv. 29—31. Not long after they were attacked by the Assyrians; Isa. xx. 1.—To expel the Assyrian troops, Psammiticus, king of Egypt, reduced Ashdod by a siege of 29 years. They nevertheless spitefully harassed the Jews when distressed by the Chaldeans. Pharaoh-hophra, in his march to assist Zedekiah, king of Judah, A. M. 3415, smote Gaza their capital. In his march from Tyre to Egypt, A. M. 3432, Nebuchadnezzar, provoked with their attempts to assist the Tyrians, desolated their country, burnt their cities, and murdered the inhabitants. Under the Persian government they recovered a little; but abandoned themselves to pride, idolatry, and bloodshed. Having destroyed Tyre, Alexander the Great A. M. 3672, marched against the Philistines, whose cities were then garrisoned by Persian troops, took Gaza by storm, demolished its walls, and murdered its inhabitants, or sold them for slaves, and placed Macedonian garrisons in all their fenced cities. About A. M. 3841, Judas Maccabeus, the Jewish deliverer, subdued the whole country of the Philistines. About sixty-five years afterward, Janneus, his brother's grandson, burnt Gaza into a desert, and incorporated the remnant of the Philistines with such Jews as he placed in their country. Psal. lxxxiii. 7—17; Amos i. 6—8; Isa. xiv. 29—31; and xi. 14; Jer. xlvii. Ezek. xxv. 15—17; Zech. i. 21; and ix. 5—7.

III. THE EGYPTIANS descended from Ham by his son Mizraim; Gen. x. 6, 13. Their country was about 600 miles in length from north to south; and lay on the north-east of Africa, on the west of the Red Sea, and south-west of Canaan. The river Nile, which runs from south to north, by its annual overflowing, rendered the country exceedingly fertile; and at last, dividing itself into several streams, ran into the Mediterranean Sea. Their principal cities were No, Zoan, On, Migdol, Pithom, Rameses, Noph, or Memphis, Tahpanhes; and it is said about 20,000 others; Nah. iii. 8; Gen. xli. 45; Exod. i. 11; and xiv. 2; Num. xiii. 22; Isa. xix. 13; xlv. 1; and xlv. 14, 25; Ezek. xxx. 13—18. It seems that sometimes the southern part of the country was called PATHROS, and the lower part of it EGYPT; Isa. xi. 11; Jer. xlv. 1. Not long after the dispersion from Babel, Mizraim and his family founded their kingdom here; Gen. xi. xii. Their monarchy continued above 1600 years; and their kings were generally surnamed PHARAOH. A terrible famine of seven years, beginning A. M. 2290, had ruined their nation, had not Joseph the Hebrew, by his prudence, saved them alive. By his sale of the corn which he had laid up, he made their fields, their cattle, and persons, the property of their king; Gen. xl—xlvii. Their cruel oppression of the Israelites, when sojourning among them, drew upon them TEN fearful plagues; and at last all their first-born were slain in one night, and their army drowned in the Red Sea, A. M. 2513; Exod. i—xiv.

Perhaps provoked with the contempt which Solomon had discovered for their princess, his queen, in collecting his seraglio of women, the Egyptians became his enemies, and protected his opponents. Shishak, who it seems first united Egypt under one king, and extended his empire far and wide into Africa and Asia, A. D. 3034, ravaged Judea; 1 Kings xi. and xiv. 25—28; 2 Chron. xii. 1—9. In his absence his brother rebelled; and after his death his large empire fell into pieces; and Egypt itself bent under the power of the Ethiopians.—Provoked with their attempts to assist the Hebrews of Israel and Judah, the Assyrians (I suppose under Sennacherib) for about three years terribly ravaged their country. About A. M. 3330 a civil war broke out among the twelve princes, whom it seems the Assyrian king had constituted his deputies in the land. After it had raged about fifteen years, Psammiticus subdued his eleven competitors. But, notwithstanding all his efforts to restore the power and felicity of the nation, his wars with the Assyrians in Palestine, and his provoking 200,000 of his troops to retire into Ethiopia, greatly weakened it; Is. xix. 1—17; and xx. and perhaps xviii. Nah. iii. 8—10. About A. M. 3390 Pharaoh-necho, his son, attempted to extend his power on the ruins of the now falling Assyrian empire; and took Carchemish, a city upon the Euphrates; and rendered the Jewish nation his tributaries. Nebuchadnezzar, the Chaldean, soon after, A. M. 3396, gave his troops a terrible defeat; took Carchemish, and pursued the Egyptians to the frontiers of their country; 2 Kings xxiii. 29—35; and xxiv. 1—7; 2 Chron. xxxv. 20—24; and xxxvi. 3—6; Jer. xlvii. 1; and xlv. 1—12; Is. xix. 1—17. Puffed up with the felicity which he and his kingdom had enjoyed in the beginning of his reign, Pharaoh-hophra and his subjects abandoned themselves to pride, idolatry, carnal security, and other impieties. Terrible miseries ensued. Provoked with the unhappy issue of his expedition against the Cyrenians, many of his own subjects took arms against him. Making Amasis, his general, their king, they routed his hired troops and took himself prisoner. They even obliged Amasis to deliver him into their hands, and ignominiously strangled him. Meanwhile Nebuchadnezzar, to revenge the Egyptians' attempts to assist the Jews or Tyrians against him, invaded their country, A. M. 3432; routed their armies; murdered the inhabitants, or by terror drove them out of the land; seized on their wealth; burnt their cities; and carried off their idols. For about forty years the once populous country of Egypt continued almost utterly desolate; Jer. xlv. 29, 30; xliii. 8—13 9, 15; and xlv. 13—26; Ezek. xvii. xxix—xxxii. Is. xix. 1—17.

The Chaldean empire being ruined A. M. 3166, the Egyptians under Amasis attempted to recover their freedom. But Cyrus of Persia, marching his troops into their country, obliged them to acknowledge his authority. After his death Amasis quickly revolted from the Persian yoke. But Cambyses A. M. 3478 marched against them; and, placing before his troops, cats, dogs, and other animals, which the Egyptians adored, he easily stormed Pelusium, their principal frontier on the north-east. He cruelly ravaged the country; murdered the inhabitants; killed their deified animals; abused and slew their priests; demolished their temples; and transported about 3000 of their idols to Persia. About A. M. 3517 the Egyptians again revolted from under the Persian yoke. Darius Hystaspis prepared to reduce them. After his death Xerxes his son ravaged their country, and rendered their bondage more grievous. Instigated by Inarus, king of Lybia, whom they had acknowledged their sovereign, they again revolted about A. M. 3540. In a bloody war of six years, Artaxerxes Longimanus reduced the most of them. About 3590 Amyrtæus, who had for some time reigned in the fen country, furiously attacked the Persian garrisons, and drove them quite out of Egypt. After the Egyptians had struggled with the Persians for their liberty about sixty years, a furious intestine war, between Nectanebus and a Mendesian prince, exhausted their strength. Taking this opportunity, Artaxerxes Ochus and his Persian troops, about 3650, ravaged their country with inexpressible barbarity; murdered the inhabitants; demolished their temples; and returned home laden with booty.—In A. M. 3672, Alexander the Great marched his Grecian troops into Egypt. Wearied of the Persian yoke, the Egyptians readily submitted to him as their powerful deliverer. For about 323 years after this they were governed by the Grecian Ptolemies, under four or five of whom their country bade fair to recover its ancient splendour. About A. M. 3995 the Romans reduced it into one of their provinces, and retained it under their yoke about 650 years. In A. D. 640 the Saracens conquered it, and established in it their Mahometan delusion, which has ever since been the authorised religion. About A. D. 970 the Moslem Calif of Cyrene wrested it from the Calif of Bagdad. He and his posterity governed it 200 years. About A. D. 1171 Saladin the Kurd craftily seized it for himself; and he and his descendants governed it about 80 years. For the next 275 years it was ruled by Mamluck slaves; 24 of them Turks, and 23 Circassians. Since 1525 it has been oppressed by the Ottoman Turks. All the principal families being transported to Constantinople, a Turkish Pacha, with 24 subordinate Begs, all originally slaves, govern it, under the Grand Seigneur. Thus, for more than 2000 years backward, Egypt has never been governed by a proper native of the country: nor has any nation under heaven been so remarkably governed by the basest of slaves. Meanwhile, a mad propensity to the most stupid idolatry or superstition, brutish ignorance, sloth, cowardice, dishonesty, deceit, cruelty, murderous malice, and inclination to sodomy, have formed the great lines of their national character; Is. xix. 1—17; xx. and perhaps xviii. xxvii. 1; xxx. 1—6; xxxi. 1—3; and xliii. 3; Jer. xxv. 9, 18, 19; Jer. xlv. 13—26; Ezek. xxix. xxxii. Dan. xi. 3—25, 42, 43; Joel iii. 19; Zech. x. 11; and xiv. 18.

IV. THE CUSHITES or ETHIOPIANS descended from Ham's eldest son. For many ages part of them resided on the south-east of Babylon and west of Persia. That country is still called Susiana, or Chusistan, i. e. the country of Cush; Gen. x. 6, 7; and ii. 13. The CUTHITES, whom the king of Assyria transported to Canaan, were no doubt the remains of them in that place; 2 Kings xvii. 24, 30; Ezra iv. 9, 10. Part of these Cushites, after long continuance about Babylon; (Gen. x. 8—10.) moved westward into Arabia, and for a time dwelt about the eastern gulf of the Red Sea; Hab. iii. 7; Num. xii. 1. From thence part of them gradually emigrated into Abyssinia, southward of Egypt; Esth. i. 1; and viii. 9; Jer. xiii. 23. During the civil war which happened in Egypt, after the death of Shishak, about A. M. 3050, Zerah the Ethiopian (2 Chron. xiv. 9—13) seems to have seized on that kingdom. About A. M. 3278 Sabacon another Ethiopian reduced Egypt a second time, and entered into a confederacy with Hoshea king of Israel against the Assyrians; 2 Kings xvii. 4. Tirhakah, who marched to the assistance of Hezekiah king of Judah, was probably the same as Sethon his successor. When Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, or Esarhaddon his son, for three years ravaged the land of Egypt, part of Ethiopia shared the same fate; Is. xviii. xx. and xliii. 3. Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean, and Cyrus and Cambyses kings of Persia in their turns, ravaged the northern parts of Ethiopia. Since that period the Romans, Saracens, and Turks, who have been successively governors of Egypt, have frequently harassed the northern Ethiopians. And sometimes the savage Gallas and Gargas, from the south, have almost desolated their country. Ever since the conversion of the eunuch, A. D. 35, (Acts viii. 26—39) Christianity has been known; and for about 1400 years has had a civil establishment in African Ethiopia; but is much disgraced by ignorance and superstition.—Neither the repeated attempts of the Saracen or Turkish Mahometans, nor of the European papists, have ever been able to establish in it their respective delusions; Is. xx. xviii. and xliii. 3; Ezek. xxx. 4, 5; Zeph. ii. 12; Dan. xi. 43; Is. xlv. 14; xliii. 6; and xlix. 12; Psal. lxxviii. 31; and lxxxvii. 4. Part of the Ethiopians will assist Gog and Magog against the converted Jews in the beginning of the Millennium; Ezek. xxxviii. 5.

V. The AMALEKITES appear to have sprung from Ham; and to have existed as a nation long before Esau or AMALEK his grandson were born; and to have been one of the most ancient and powerful; they had their residence on the south and southwest of Canaan, almost all along from the western gulf of the Red sea, to the bank of the Euphrates; Gen. xiv. 7; Num. xxiv. 7, 20; 1 Sam. xv. 7; and xxvii. 8; 1 Chron. iv. 39, 40. No token of their connection with the Edomites appears in history. But, being allied with the Egyptians, or covetous of booty, they attacked the Israelites in their march from Egypt to Sinai. To punish their behaviour, God not only enabled Joshua to defeat them on that occasion, but appointed the Hebrews to exterminate them from the earth; Exod. xvii. 8—16; Deut. xxv. 17—19. Next year they assisted the Canaanites against the presumptuous Israelites; Num. xiv. 45. About A. M. 2639 they assisted the Moabites, and about 2797 the Midianites, against Israel; on both which occasions they shared the miserable fate of their allies; Judges iii. 13; and vi. 6. They continuing in their impiety and hatred of Israel, God, about A. M. 2942, appointed Saul to destroy them utterly, which in part he effected. Not long after, David cut off a part of what remained. Their alliance against Jehoshaphat, about A. M. 3112, issued to their hurt. About A. M. 3290 the Simeonites cut off many more. By his projecting the utter destruction of the Jewish nation, Haman, the Amalekite, drew complete ruin upon himself and his friends. Since which no remains of the nation are to be found in the histories of mankind; Exod. xvii. 14, 16; Num. xxiv. 20—22; Deut. xxv. 17—19; 1 Sam. xiv. 48; xv. 1—8; xxvii. 8, 9; and xxx. 1—20; 2 Sam. viii. 12; Psal. lxxxiii. 7—17; 1 Chron. iv. 39—43; Esth. iii. vii—ix.

VI. The EDMONITES sprang from Abraham by Esau his grandson. Partly by intermarriages, and partly by conquest, they seized on the country southward of Judea, which had been formerly possessed by the HORITE descendants of Ham. It included the mountains of Seir and Hor, and the provinces of Uz, Dedan, Teman, &c. Their principal cities were Bozrah, Selah, &c. It was of old moderately watered and fertile; Gen. xxv. 25, 30; xxxvi. 1—9; and xxxii. 3; Deut. ii. 12; Num. xx. 23; xxxiii. 37; and xxxiv. 3; Is. xxi. 11; and xxxiv. 5, 6; Jer. xlix. 7, 8, 22; Lam. iv. 21; Ezek. xxv. 12, 13; Gen. xxxvi. 32—39; xxvii. 39, 40. Like Esau their ancestor, the Edomites were generally given to hunting and war. While the Israelites groaned under their Egyptian taskmasters, the Edomites had become a powerful nation under their kings and dukes. But, being excluded from the peculiar privileges of Abraham's seed, they mingled themselves with the heathen; and, learning their ways, abandoned themselves to the slavery of their own sinful lusts; 1 Chron. i. 35—54; Exod. xv. 15, 16; Gen. xxxvi. 10—43; xxvii. 40; and xxv. 23. Notwithstanding repeated entreaties, they denied the Israelites a passage through their country into Canaan: but it seems they afterwards behaved in a more benevolent manner; Num. xx. 14—21; Deut. ii. 28, 29; and xxiii. 7. For about 400 years after the Edomites seem to have applied themselves much to trade. Elath and Eziongeber on the Red sea were their principal ports. Saul harassed them; 1 Sam. xiv. 47: David rendered them tributaries to the Israelites; Gen. xxv. 23; and xxvii. 29, 37, 40; 2 Sam. viii. 14; Psal. lx. cviii. 1 Kings xi. 15, 16. Notwithstanding Hadad's attempt to revolt, they continued 150 years subject to Judah, and were governed by a deputy; Gen. xxv. 23; and xxvii. 29, 37, 40; 1 Kings xi. 15—22; and xxii. 47; 2 Kings iii. 7. About A. M. 3112 they entered into a combination with the neighbouring nations to extirpate the Israelites, but almost perished in the attempt; 2 Chron. xx. Psal. lxxxiii. Not long after they revolted from Jehoram, king of Judah; and, with no small bloodshed, rendered themselves independent; Gen. xxvii. 40; 2 Chron. xxi. 8—10. To revenge some insult, perhaps, of their buying the Jews for slaves from the Tyrians and Philistines, Amaziah invaded their country, and inhumanly murdered many thousands of them, and took Selah their capital. Uzziah his son further ravaged their country, and took Elath, their principal seaport on the Red sea; 2 Kings xiv. 7; 2 Chron. xxv. 11, 12; and xxvi. 2; Amos i. 6, 9. About A. M. 3264 they ravaged the south parts of Judea, and murdered and took prisoners a great many of the inhabitants; 2 Chron. xxviii. 17. But God quickly resented the injuries done to his people. The Assyrians in a terrible manner ravaged the country of Edom, and destroyed Bozrah, their new capital.—When the Chaldeans, about 3416, burnt Jerusalem, and murdered and took captive most of the Jewish nation, the Edomites assisted them, and instigated their utmost severity. But, in the righteous judgment of God, the same Chaldeans, about five years after, rendered the country of Edom a desolate wilderness. Ever since it has been plagued with barrenness and drought, and has swarmed with serpents. When the Chaldean monarchy was unhinged, in A. M. 3466, the Edomites recollected themselves. Part of them incorporated with the Ishmaelites on the south, and part of them seized upon the south parts of Judea: these Darius Hystaspis ordered them to evacuate, but with what success we know not. About A. M. 3841 Judas Maccabeus, the Jewish hero, offended with the Edomites for assisting the Syro-grecians against his nation, ravaged their country, slew 40,000 of them, and dismembered Hebron, their capital. About thirty-five years after, Hircanus his nephew reduced the Edomites, and obliged them to incorporate with the Jews, and profess their religion. But just before the sacking of Jerusalem by Titus a body of Edomites deserted the Jews, and got off laden with booty. Ever since the Edomitish nation has been consigned to oblivion; Amos i. 11, 12; Is. xxi. 11; xxxiv. and xi. 14; Psal. cxxxvii. 7; Lam. iv. 21, 22; Ezek. xxv. 12—14; xxxii. 29; xxxv. and xxxvi. 2; Obad. 21; Jer. xxv. 9, 21; xxvii. 3, 6, 7; and xlix. 7—22; Num. xxiv. Joel iii. 19; Mal. i. 4.

VII. The MIDIANITES were the offspring of Abraham by Keturah. Most of them dwelt on the south-east of the Dead sea, eastward of the Edomites. But part of them, perhaps to shun the idolatrous infection of the rest, took up their residence near the north-east point of the Red sea; among these Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, was a prince or priest; Gen. xxv. 2—6; and xxxvii. 28; Exod. ii. iii. xviii. About A. M. 2552 the Northern Midianites were subjected to, or allied with, the Moabites. Their women were peculiarly instrumental in seducing the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry. This their wickedness God punished with the almost utter destruction of their nation; Num. xxii. 4, 7; and xxv. xxxi. Josh. xiii. 21. About A. M. 2797 the Midianites rendered the Israelites their tributaries, and for seven years greatly oppressed them. But Gideon, by an handful of troops, reduced them to the brink of ruin. It is probable that their small remains incorporated with the Moabites or Ishmaelites; Judg. vi—viii. The posterity of Jethro lived among the Jews, under the name of KENITES and RECHABITES, till the Assyrians and Chaldeans carried them away captive; Exod. ii. 21; and xviii. 1, 2; Num. x. 29—32; Judg. iv. 11; 1 Chron. ii. 55; 2 Kings x. 15, 23; Num. xxiv. 21, 22; Jer. xxxvi.

VIII. IX. The MOABITES and AMMONITES were the product of Lot's incest with his daughters; Gen. xix. 30—38. The Moabites dwelt eastward of the Midianites, along the banks of the river Arnon, which runs westward into the Dead sea. Their principal cities were, Ar, Kir, Bozrah, Heshbon, Elealeh, &c. This country they took from the gigantic Enims, who were the offspring of Ham; Num. xxi. 13—15, 26; and xxii. 36; Deut. ii. 9—11; Is. xv. xvi. Jer. xlviii. 1—5, 19—24. The AMMONITES had their residence on the north-east of the Moabites, and east of the Reubenites and Gadites, in the territories which they wrested from the gigantic Zamzummims, another part of the descendants of Ham. Rabbath was their principal city; Deut. ii. 18—22; and iii. 11; 2 Sam. xii. 26—29; Amos ii. 14. When the Israelites, in A. M. 2552, encamped on the border of the Moabites, in their way to Canaan, they, and it seems also the Ammonites, invited and hired Balaam to curse that people, that they might be destroyed. But God not only obliged him to bless the Israelites, and denounce destruction upon their enemies, but, for this cause, excluded the Moabites and Ammonites from the congregation of Israel to all generations; Num. xxi. xxii—xxv. Deut. xxiii. 3—6; Neh. xiii. 1, 2. From A. M. 2639 to 2657 the Moabites grievously oppressed the Israelites; but were driven out of Canaan by Ehud; and Eglon their king was slain; Judg. iii. 12—30. From A. M. 2840 to 2858 the Ammonites terribly oppressed the Israelites on the east of Jordan; but were reduced by Jephthah; Judg. x. xi. About A. M. 2909, or 2939, Nahash the Ammonite ravaged Gilead, and refused every term of submission but what was inhuman and barbarous; but his army was almost wholly cut to pieces by Saul; 1 Sam. xi. Saul afterwards warred with success upon the Ammonites and Moabites; 1 Sam. xiv. 47. They both seem to have favoured David while he was persecuted by Saul; but, provoked with their insolent or barbarous conduct, he conquered them both not long after he became king of Israel; 1 Sam. xxii. 3, 4; 2 Sam. viii. 2, 11, 12; Ps. lx. 8; and cviii. 9; 2 Sam. x—xii. 1 Chron. xviii—xx. Num. xxiv. 17. For about 150 years they continued subject to the Israelites; and, after the division of the kingdom, fell to the share of the ten tribes. After the death of Ahab the Moabites rebelled; but were severely chastised by king Jehoram his son, and his assistants in the war; and their country almost ruined; 2 Kings i. 1. and iii. Both nations joined as principals in the grand alliance against Jehoshaphat king of Judah; but their army perished in the attempt; 2 Chron. xx. Psal. lxxxiii. The kings of Israel, being no longer able to retain them in subjection, Uzziah and Jotham, kings of Judah, rendered them tributary. But it is probable they resumed their liberty during the unhappy reign of Ahaz; 2 Chron. xxvi—xxviii. While the Syrians from the north, or Assyrians from the north-east, ravaged the land of Israel, the Ammonites and Moabites seized on the cities which lay next them, and in the most inhuman manner murdered the inhabitants. God speedily and severely punished their injustice and cruelty. The Assyrians, about 3290, seized their wealth, burnt their cities, murdered or carried captive their people, and desolated their country. After the death of Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, they resumed their independency. About A. M. 3398 they assisted the Chaldeans in ravaging the kingdom of Judah; and, with the utmost cruelty and insolence, pushed on the ruin of that nation. Not long after Jerusalem was burnt to an heap, Nebuchadnezzar, offended with the Moabites and Ammonites, for their attempts to assist the Tyrians, and for the murder of Gedaliah his Jewish deputy, furiously invaded their country; and, by carrying off their wealth, burning their cities, and murdering the inhabitants, rendered it an absolute desert. After the overthrow of the Chaldean empire in 3466, such as remained returned to their country, and successively became the tributaries of the Persians, Greeks, and Romans. Notwithstanding their own servitude, they took every opportunity to distress the Jews after their captivity. Provoked with their insults, particularly during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, Judas Maccabeus, with a handful of Jews, about A. M. 3840, invaded the country of the Ammonites, routed their forces, burnt their cities, and made slaves of their wives and children. About seventy years after, Jannæus, his grand-nephew, reduced the Moabites into a state of slavery to the Jewish nation: Amos i. 13—15; and ii. 1—3; Isa. xv. xvi. and xxv. 10; Jer. xlviii. and xlix. 1—6; Ezek. xxv. Zeph. ii. 8—10.

X. The SYRIANS or ARAMITES were the offspring of Shem's youngest son, and of Nahor the brother of Abraham; perhaps mingled with some Canaanites; Gen. x. 22, 23; and xxii. 21, 22: 1 Chron. i. 17. Their country lay on the north-east of Canaan and Mount Lebanon: anciently it extended far beyond the river Euphrates to the eastward; and perhaps included most of Mesopotamia; 2 Sam. x. 16. Cushan-rishathaim, who for eight years greatly oppressed the Israelites, was probably the king of the Syrians beyond the Euphrates; Judg. iii. 8—10. Their ancient kingdoms were Zoba, Damascus, Hamath, Geshur, Rehob, Ishtob, Maachah, &c. 2 Sam. viii. 3, 9; x. 6, 8; and xv. 8; 1 Chron. xix. 6, 8. The Syrians on this side the Euphrates were either conquered by David, about A. M. 2964, or voluntarily submitted; 2 Sam. viii. x. 1 Chron. xviii. xix. But, about sixty years after, Rezon, a servant of Hadadezer, whom David had conquered, formed a kingdom for himself at Damascus; which quickly extended itself over all Syria on this side the river, and proved a terrible scourge to the kingdom of Israel; particularly in the days of Baasha, Ahab, Jehoram, Jehu, and Jehoahaz; 1 Kings xi. 23—25; xv. 18—20; and xx. xxii. 2 Kings vi. viii. 28, 29; x. 32, 33; and xiii. 3—7; 2 Chron. xxii. 5 and even to the kingdom of Judah, which lay further off; particularly in the days of Joash and Ahaz; 2 Kings xii. 17, 18; and xvi. 5, 6; 2 Chron. xxiv. 23, 24; and xxviii. 5; Is. vii. 1—8; and ix. 12. But God did not suffer the injuries which they did to his people to pass unpunished. Twice, with an handful of men, Ahab routed their huge armies, and brought them to the brink of ruin; 1 Kings xx. A preternatural noise terrified them from their cruel siege of Samaria; 2 Kings vii. And Joash and Jeroboam, descendants of Jehu, repeatedly routing their armies, reduced them to the very brink of despair; 2 Kings xiii. 15—25; and xiv. 25—28.

But more terrible judgments overtook them soon afterwards. Hired by Ahaz king of Judah, Tiglath-pileser the Assyrian made their wealth a prey, burnt their cities, murdered the inhabitants, transported part of the survivors to Media, or caused them to serve in his army against the Israelites; Amos i. 3—5; and iii. 12; Isa. viii. 4; xvii. 1—3; and ix. 12; with 2 Kings xvi. 7—9. During the decline of the Assyrian monarchy the captive Syrians returned and re-peopled their country. Part of them assisted Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean against the Jews; 2 Kings xxiv. 2. Not long after, on some provocation, he marched his troops into Syria; burnt Damascus, Hamath, Arpad, and other principal cities, into heaps of rubbish; and cruelly murdered the inhabitants, or transported them as slaves to his eastern dominions. Under Cyrus the Persian, about A. M. 3466, and his successors, the Syrians once more returned and rebuilt their cities. When Alexander the Grecian conqueror marched this way, about 3672, Hadrach Hamath, and Damascus, were obliged to submit. Ever since Syria has been a scene of war, ravage, and bloodshed. Here the Grecian monarchs of Egypt and Syria often conflicted. It was terribly ravaged by Eumenes the Pergamenian, and by Hircanus the Jew, and by the Parthians and others. About A. M. 3939 the Romans reduced it into one of their provinces. Under them it was often plagued with Parthian and Persian invasions, and miserably distressed by earthquakes. From A. D. 634, when the Saracens seized on it, it became a frequent scene of war between them and the Christian emperors of Constantinople. Towards the end of the eleventh century of Christ the Seljukians wrested it from the Saracens, and erected one of their four kingdoms at Aleppo and another at Damascus. After the European croisades had held it about an hundred years, rendering it a constant scene of the murder of Turks, and of one another, Saladin the conqueror of Egypt drove them out of most of it, about A. D. 1196. Since that time it has been generally oppressed by the Ottoman Turks, and not a little exposed to the plundering Druses of Lebanon and the roving Arabs. Nor, except at Aleppo and Damascus, is there now any thing important but ancient ruins; Amos i. 3—5; Isa. xvii. 1—3; Jer. xlix. 23—27; Zech. ix. 1, 2.

just and prudent regulations : but Cambyzes, his madly cruel son and successor, almost ruined it by his expedition into Egypt and Ethiopia. Artaxerxes Smerdis, the magician impostor, throughout his reign did nothing more than obstruct the building of the Jewish temple; Ezra iv. 6—24. Darius Hystaspis, who encouraged the building of it, and who was perhaps the ANASUERUS who divorced Vashti, married Esther, advanced and pulled down Haman, and rendered Mordecai his chief minister of state, extended the empire to its utmost greatness. The conquests and government thereof reached into Iberia, Albania, Colchis, and Scythia, on the north; into Lesser Asia and its islands, Syria, and Canaan, on the west; and into Egypt, Ethiopia, part of Arabia, and India, on the south; Ezra, v. vi. Esth. i.—x. Dan. viii. 3, 4; and vii. 5.

Provoked with the European Greeks, for assisting their rebellious brethren in Lesser Asia and the Egyptians, and for giving his father's troops a terrible defeat, Xerxes, furnished with the immense spoils of Cyrus and Cambyzes, and with the hoarded wealth of Darius his father, madly resolved to extirpate that nation. While the Carthaginians, by his instigation, attacked them in Sicily and Italy, about A.M. 3526, he marched an unwieldy army of several millions into Greece. The Greeks, having defeated his armies and fleets, began to think of conquering his whole empire : and the struggles of the Egyptians to recover their liberty had afforded them an excellent opportunity, had not their own contentions and treachery prevented their improving it. Agesilaus the Spartan once seemed on the point of overturning it. In their lingering or often repeated wars, the Greeks more and more perceived the luxury, folly, and weakness, of the Persian state. About A.M. 3671, Alexander the Great of Macedonia, having perfected the reduction of Greece into one kingdom, marched an army of about 35,000 excellent warriors, (Egeates, or goatish men, armed with brass), headed by the most prudent generals, against the Persians, whose emblem of royalty then was the golden head of a horned ram. Highly provoked by the insolent messages of Darius Codoman their king, Alexander furiously routed their huge armies in the great battles of Granicus, Issus, and Arbela; and, by over-running rather than fighting, in six years subdued the whole Persian empire; Gen. ix. 27; Num. xxiv. 24; Dan. ii. 32, 39; vii. 5, 6; viii. 3—7; x. 20; and xi. 2, 3; Zech. vi. 2, 6, 8. About A.M. 3754 the Parthians, who perhaps were chiefly Scythians and Gauls, formed a powerful kingdom in Persia, which continued about 482 years, and sometimes extended from the Indus on the south to the Hellespont on the north. It was long the distinguished terror of the Roman empire. About A.D. 220 or 232 the government was transferred to another nation, or at least to another family. This Persian kingdom was a terrible plague to the Christian emperors, especially to those of the East; and was a most inveterate and cruel persecutor of other Christians. Ever since A.D. 634 Persia has been a distinguished scene of the most shocking miseries, oppression, murder, and almost every thing horrid, under the Saracens, Saljukians, Tartars, Turkmans, Sophis, and modern usurpers; Dan. ii. 44, 45; and vii. 12.

XIV. THE GREEKS, comprehending the Athenians, Spartans, Eolians, Ionians, Dorians, &c. sprang from Javan the fourth son of Japheth. When they first removed from Lesser Asia into the south-east of Europe we cannot certainly determine: but about A.M. 3150 several colonies, chiefly Eolians and Ionians, returned from their over-stocked countries in Europe to the western parts of Lesser Asia. While the Greeks with great assiduity cultivated different branches of literature among themselves, they gradually penetrated into the Persian territories: and about A.M. 3672, under Alexander the Macedonian, they reared up an empire of their own upon the ruin of the Persian, less opulent and showy, but much more powerful and warlike: Gen. ix. 27; Num. xxiv. 24; Dan. ii. 32, 39; vii. 6; viii. 5—7, 20, 21; x. 20; and xi. 3; Zech. vi. 3, 6, 8.

Scarcely had Alexander spent twelve years in overrunning the world when he died, perhaps of drunkenness, in the very flower of his age. His whole family was quickly extirpated. His queen Statira, the daughter of Darius, was murdered by Roxana, another of his wives, and thrown into a well. Euridice, another wife, and Philip Aridaeus his brother, were murdered by Olympias his mother. For this Olympias herself was murdered by Cassander's soldiers. Roxana, and Alexander Ægus her son, whom Eumenes had for a time so bravely supported, were privately murdered by Cassander. About a year after he murdered Barsine, the only surviving wife of Alexander, and Hercules her son. Antigonus, one of his generals, who attempted to govern the whole empire, being reduced, it was divided into four parts; to each of Alexander's remaining principal generals a part. Cassander had Greece in Europe on the west. Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, &c. on the north. Seleucus Nicator had Syria and other eastern provinces. Ptolemy Lacus had Egypt, &c. on the south. Lysimachus' share was quickly wrested from him; and most of it united to Syria. Cassander's share was soon after divided into the several states of Macedonia, Achaia, Ætolia, &c. About A.M. 3856 most of it was reduced by the conquering Romans; Dan. vii. 6; viii. 8, 22; xi. 4; ii. 40; and vii. 7, 19, 23.

The thigh-like kingdoms of Egypt on the South of Canaan, and of Syria on the North, long subsisted. Ptolemy Lagus, surnamed the Saviour, ruled over Egypt, Canaan, Phenicia, Hollow Syria, Caria, Cyprus, part of Arabia, and the Egean isles. Seleucus Nicator, or conqueror, who founded his empire in A.M. 3692, was still more powerful; ruling over not only Syria but Persia, Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Assyria, Armenia, Media, Pontus, and almost all Lesser Asia; from which, after about sixteen years' contest, he drove Demetrius son of Antigonus; and to which, after the death of Lysimachus in A.M. 3723, he added Thrace, and part of Macedonia in Europe. But his son Antiochus Soter's wars with the Gauls, Bithynians, and Pergamenians, together with the revolt of the Parthians that ensued, exceedingly weakened the kingdom. Wearied with their ruinous contentions, Ptolemy Philadelphus of Egypt, and Antiochus Theos of Syria, about A.M. 3756, agreed to a mutual peace. Ptolemy carried his daughter Berenice into Syria; persuaded Antiochus to divorce Laodice his queen, and espouse Berenice, and settle the crown on her children. But Ptolemy was scarcely dead when Antiochus divorced Berenice, recalled Laodice to his bed, and settled the crown of Syria upon Seleucus Callinicus her son. To prevent Antiochus' changing his mind, Laodice quickly dispatched him by poison, and fixed her son on his throne about 3758. Berenice, her child, and all her Egyptian attendants, were murdered before the Lesser Asians or Egyptians could come up to protect them. To revenge the death of his sister, Ptolemy Euergetes of Egypt marched his troops into Syria, reduced most of that kingdom, and returned home laden with rich spoils, and with 2500 Egyptian idols, which Cambyzes the Persian had carried off about 300 years before. These, to the great joy of his subjects, he replaced in their temples. In his return through Canaan he offered a solemn sacrifice of thanksgiving to God at Jerusalem; Dan. xi. 5—9.

After he had been terribly plagued by Hierax his brother, and by Eumenes king of Pergamus, Seleucus was taken prisoner by the Parthian revolvers. His sons, Ceraunus and Antiochus the Great, resolved to be revenged on Ptolemy, and to recover what their father had lost. Death carried off both Ceraunus and Ptolemy while they prepared for the war. Ptolemy Philopator succeeded his father in Egypt. Antiochus routed his forces at Berytus, and recovered Phenicia and Hollow Syria. Whether he executed his purpose of ravaging Egypt we do not certainly know: but next year he marched his forces to Egypt, intending to wrest that kingdom from its luxurious prince. But Ptolemy routed his army at Raphia, a city on the north-east border of Egypt, and obliged him to restore Canaan and Hollow Syria. In his return from viewing these provinces, Ptolemy at Jerusalem offered sacrifices of thanksgiving to JEHOVAH. But, highly enraged that the terrors of God, or the importunity of the Jews, had hindered his entrance into the Holy of Holies, he caused about forty or sixty thousand Jews to be inhumanly massacred in Egypt. He granted the Syrians a peace upon the easiest terms, that he might have leisure to wallow in lewdness with Agathocles his harlot and her infamous brother. Offended with his baseness, many of his subjects revolted. Nor was it long before he died of his debaucheries. Ptolemy Epiphanes, his infant son, succeeded.—

Antiochus of Syria therefore agreed with Philip of Macedonia to conquer the Egyptian dominions, and to share them betwixt them. Ptolemy being solely governed by Agathocles his father's catamite, his subjects were upon the very point of revolting; and several seditions actually happened. The Alexandrians at last took arms, and put Agathocles, his sister, and his friends, to death. Scopas, Ptolemy's general, who perhaps himself intended to ascend the throne, recovered Canaan and Hollow Syria: but Antiochus, by three or four bloody battles, retook them. Assisted by the Jews, whom he honoured with distinguished favours, he marched his army into Egypt to conquer it. But, finding that the Romans, whose resentment he dreaded, had taken young Ptolemy under their protection, he resolved to make himself master of it by fraud. Having bribed his beautiful daughter Cleopatra to betray or murder her future husband, upon the first opportunity he married her to young Ptolemy; and assigned him Phenicia, Hollow Syria, and Canaan for her dowry. But Cleopatra, regardless of the horrid mandates or bribes of her father, faithfully adhered to the interests of her husband; and the Egyptian generals, suspecting Antiochus' intentions, kept themselves on their guard. Enraged to see his designs on the kingdom of Egypt wholly disappointed, Antiochus, with a fleet of 300 ships, and a formidable army, rendered himself master of several coasts of Lesser Asia, Thrace and Greece, and of Samos, Eubœa, and other islands, in the eastern part of the Mediterranean sea. Informed afterwards of Ptolemy's death, he once more prepared to wrest the kingdom of Egypt from his infant grandson: but a terrible storm, and the death of Scopas, who intended to betray that nation, prevented him. Instigated by Hannibal, the famous and now fugitive general of the Carthaginians, he, assisted by some of the European Greeks, next commenced a war upon the Romans. To revenge this affront, together with the injury which he had done to their allies in Lesser Asia, the Romans quickly engaged him. Acilius their general, routed his army in Greece, and drove him quite out of Europe. Livius and Emilius at different times defeated his fleets. Lucius Scipio, with an army of 30,000, routed his army in Lesser Asia, slew 54,000 of them, stripped him of all his dominions to the northward of mount Taurus, and condemned him to pay 12,000 talents of silver to the Romans, for defraying their expences of the war with him. Covered with shame and disgrace, Antiochus retired to the inmost parts of his kingdom; where, attempting to pillage a temple of Jupiter at Elymais in Persia, for money to pay his Roman debt, he was murdered by the infuriated mob.—Seleucus Philopater his son, who succeeded him, was remarkable for nothing but raising of taxes to defray his father's Roman debt; and for an unsuccessful attempt by Heliodorus his minister, to pillage the temple of God at Jerusalem. Not long after the same Heliodorus poisoned his master for the sake of his throne. Dan. xi. 10—20.

Not Demetrius his son, but Antiochus his brother, succeeded him, A.M. 3829. He had been some years at Rome, as an hostage, or pledge of security, for the payment of the Roman debt; and was one of the most base, frantic, and mischievous, persons that ever breathed. By flattering the Romans to befriend him; by flattering Eumenes, king of Pergamus, to assist him; and by flattering the Syrians to submit to him; he peaceably fixed himself on the throne. Having quickly routed the forces of Heliodorus the usurper, of Demetrius the true heir to the crown, and Ptolemy Philometor of Egypt, who claimed it in right of his mother, he distributed his spoils among his subjects, which exceedingly gained him their affection. Highly piqued that Eulæus and Lenæus, the curators of young Ptolemy, should have demanded, for their master, the provinces of Phenicia, Hollow Syria, and Canaan, which had been assigned for his mother Cleopatra's dowry, but it seems had never been delivered up, Antiochus, having repaired the fortifications of these countries, marched an army into Egypt, with an intention to conquer it. His incomplete victory on the border of Egypt obliged him to return home. Next year he invaded Egypt afresh, and, Alexandria excepted, ravaged most of it. While his deputy governors treacherously surrendered the island of Cyprus, the effeminately educated monarch of Egypt did almost nothing in defence of himself or his subjects. Perhaps he was taken prisoner by his uncle Antiochus. It is certain they feasted together, and formed a league of amity which neither of them intended to keep: but both were baulked of their treacherous intentions. In his return homeward, Antiochus, in cold blood, ravaged Jerusalem, murdered 40,000 of the Jews, and made as many slaves. Meanwhile the Alexandrians, finding that Ptolemy their sovereign was entirely managed by his treacherous uncle, made Phiscon his brother king in his stead. To resent this affront, Antiochus again invaded Egypt; but, finding it more difficult than he expected to reduce the supporters of Phiscon, he returned home, in hopes that the civil war between the two brothers would quickly render the kingdom an easy prey to himself. But, suspecting his intentions, the two Ptolemies, Philometor and Phiscon, agreed to reign jointly in peace. Informed hereof, Antiochus again invaded Egypt, and ravaged part of it. But Popilius, and other Roman ambassadors, arriving in Macedonian ships, charged him and all his forces to evacuate Egypt if he regarded the friendship of their state. Stung with indignation at this disappointment, when all things promised such success; and provoked by the peculiarity of their religion, and by some affronts they had given him; he, in his return to Syria, made terrible work among the Jews. Before this he had turned out Onias the legal high priest, and sold his office to his treacherous brothers Jason and Menelaus, one after another. Now, assisted by his heathen generals and apostate Jews, he stopped the daily sacrifice; rendered the temple a scene of idolatry and lewdness; compelled the people to eat swine's flesh; and, in fine, attempted, with all his might, to destroy every copy of the scriptures, and every faithful worshipper of God. Meanwhile the Armenians and Persians revolted. The Armenians he quickly reduced; but the Persian mob gave him a furious repulse while he attempted to plunder one of their temples. Informed, in his way homeward, that Judas Maccabeus, and the faithful Jews who assisted him, had routed his armies in Canaan, he furiously vowed to extirpate their whole nation. Immediately a horrible distemper seized on his body. His flesh was filled with crawling worms, rotted, and fell off in pieces, with intolerable torment and stench. Convinced that it was the punishment of his horrid abuse and persecution of the Jews, and their worship, he solemnly vowed to their God, that, if he recovered, he would restore their religion, and grant them the most advantageous instances of his favour. But his vows were in vain. The inexpressible torment and stench quickly put an end to his miserable life, near Babylon, A.M. 3840; Dan. xi. 21—35; and viii. 9—14, 23—25.

Having languished a hundred years more amidst terrible contentions and miseries, the Syro-grecian dominions, about 3939, fell into the hands of the conquering Romans. About thirty-five years after, those of Egypt had the same fate. When the Roman empire was divided, A.D. 338, most of that which had anciently pertained to the Greeks was allotted to the emperor of the East, who had his residence at Constantinople. Their territories in Europe were sometimes terribly ravaged by the Goths, Huns, &c. Those which were in Asia and Africa, about A.D. 640, generally fell into the hands of the Saracens. From them they passed, about 400 years afterward, to the Seljukian Turks. For about three or four hundred years past almost the whole Grecian empire has been subject to the Ottoman Turks, by whose oppression it is fearfully depopulated; Dan. vii. 12; ii. 40; and xi. 40—43; Zech. vi. 7; Rev. viii. 7—12; and ix.

XV. After the rich and bloody empire of the Assyrians and Chaldeans; the prudently formed, moderately wealthy, but inactive, and often basely governed, empire of the Medes and Persians; the rapidly formed and powerful, but quickly divided, empire of the brass-armed Greeks; had, according to the immutable purposes of God, and amidst difficulties unnumbered, successively sprung up from contemptible origins; and had finished their work, and filled up the measure of their iniquities, and then dwindled back to their primary meanness: the empire of the Romans, who were descended from Japheth by his son Javan or Gomer, succeeded. In this Satan made a more ample display of earthly glory, and erected a more powerful bulwark for the support of iniquity, than had ever before existed. In pride, avarice, murderous cruelty, and tyrannical oppression, chiefly of the people of God, it resembled the preceding monarchies; but in its commonwealth form, which was chiefly directed by two consuls, till at last it was divided into two parts, it differed from them. In policy, power, extent, and terror to every opposer, it far exceeded them. Sprung from the basest origin, these Romans gradually conquered the Italians, Spaniards, Helvetians, Gauls, Britons, Germans, Pannonians, Illyrians, Dalmatians, Greeks, Thracians, Lesser Asians, Pontians, Iberians, and Armenians, descended from Japheth; and the Lydians, Mesopotamians, Syrians, Jews, and some Arabs, descended from Shem.—They enslaved the Etruscan, Pelasgian, Heracleian, Phœnician, and Carthaginian, posterity of Canaan,—together with the Mauritanian, Getulian, Numidian, Lybian, Cyrenian, and Egyptian, descendants of Ham, in Africa. Rome, which was the seat of their empire, stands about 1200 miles north-west of Jerusalem: but the empire itself extended from north to south about 2600; from east to west about 3000 miles. Their conquests extended chiefly to the southward. They successively adopted seven different forms of government. For the first two hundred years they had kings. From A. M. 3472 to 3960 they were governed by consuls, tribunes, decemvirs, and dictators, in their turns. After this to A. M. 4480, by emperors, heathen and Christian.—From A. D. 476 to 556 they were governed by Gothic kings. Since A. D. 756 the popes have been at once their spiritual and their civil heads; Zech. vi. 1—7; Dan. ii. 33, 40—43; and vii. 7, 8, 23, 24; Rev. xii. 3; xiii. 1; and xvii. 3, 9—11.

About A. D. 44 a terrible famine, of seven years continuance, afflicted the empire. Not long after, multitudes of earthquakes happened in it, in Italy, Lesser Asia, and Canaan, and in the isles of Crete, Samos, Chios, &c. Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Colosse, were quite overturned; Joel iii. 30; Mat. xxiv. 7; Luke xxi. 11; Acts xi. 28; and ii. 19, 20. The opposition of the emperors Nero, Domitian, Trajan, and Adrian, to the every where victorious gospel of Christ, and their cruel persecution of his followers, drew upon their dominions the tremendous vengeance of God. The noted victories of Vespasian over the Jews in the first century of the Christian æra, and of Trajan over the Jews and Parthians in the next, were quickly followed by fearful and bloody disasters. While the Parthians and other heathens murdered the Romans in other countries, the Jews, enraged with the ruin of their nation, city, and temple, murdered about 500,000 or more of them in Cyprus, Cyrene, and Egypt. The slaughter of Jews unnumbered, in revenge of this, did but more and more weaken the empire; Rev. vi. 1—4. Whatever zeal Marcus Aurelius and Septimius Severus discovered for common equity, and for the support of their subjects, their persecution of the Christians issued in such scarcity of provisions, that people were obliged to eat their victuals by weight and measure; and labourers were scarcely able to earn what was necessary for their own subsistence; Rev. vi. 5, 6. In the third century of the Christian æra the Roman empire became more and more miserable. From 235 to 286 the Christians were generally, and sometimes terribly, persecuted, and millions of them murdered. In God's just resentment of this, twenty emperors and thirty usurpers, after making no small havoc among their opposers, or even their friends, were cut off almost all in a miserable manner. Moreover, while the Persians in the east plagued Syria and the countries adjacent, the Goths, Quadi, Sarmatæ, Suevi, and Vandals, ravaged almost all the Roman territories in Europe. Few cities, and scarcely one unvalled town, escaped their infernal pillage and murder. Besides fearful earthquakes, a terrible pestilence, of 15 years continuance, pervaded the whole empire from south to north. Multitudes were left unburied. Dogs, and other ravenous animals, were so accustomed to human carrion, that they sometimes entered towns and devoured the living; Rev. vi. 7, 8.

The fourth century opened with a terrible persecution of the Christians by Dioclesian and his fellow emperors, which lasted ten years. All on a sudden God pleaded the cause of his persecuted people, and poured his vengeance upon their heathen oppressors. While multitudes were swallowed up by earthquakes, or terrified by ill-boding omens in the sky, Constantine, being elected emperor by his troops, and provoked by the designs of his heathen partners in government, took arms against the persecuting emperors and their Cæsars or subordinate emperors. While Dioclesian abandoned his imperial crown for a private life, Maximian, Galerius, Maximin, Maxentius, and Licinius, were so plagued with repeated discomfitures and disasters, that they hid themselves in dens and caves. While some other principal persecutors murdered themselves in the most desperate anguish, Maximin and Licinius publicly acknowledged their disasters to be the just vengeance of Jesus Christ upon them for persecuting his people. Multitudes of the heathen priests, who had all along been distinguished instigators of the persecutions, were miserably destroyed. Even Maximin and Licinius murdered thousands of them; because, by their false predictions of victory, they had decoyed them into their ruinous wars with Constantine. In fine, the heathen worship of the sun, moon, stars, and other idols, was abolished by law; Rev. vi. 12—17; Psal. ii. 8, 9; xviii. 30—48; xxi. 8—12; xxxv. 26, 27; xl. 14—16; xli. 6—8; xlviii. 4—11; lix. 12—15; lxi. 23—28; lxviii. 1, 2, 12, 30; lxxix. 6—13; lxxxiii. 9—18; xciv. 24; xcvi. 13; xcvi. 9; lxxii. 9; cx. 5, 6; cxxii. 18; and cxlix. 6—9; Prov. i. 24—32; Isa. lxvi. 15—17; Joel iii. 9—16; Zeph. iii. 8; Hag. ii. 22; Mic. iv. 13; and v. 5—15.

From A. D. 323 to 338 the Roman empire, now christianized by law, enjoyed a short repose. Meanwhile Constantine repaired the ancient Byzantium, on the north-west of the Euxine sea, and called it CONSTANTINOPLE, after himself; and rendered it his imperial seat. His death was followed by fearful calamities. The cotemporary or separate reigns of his three sons were chiefly marked with mutual contentions one with another; rebellions of Maxentius, Sylvanus, and others; terrible ravages by the Persians and Armenians in the east; and by the Alemans, Scots, and Picts in the west. The short reign of Julian their cousin was principally noted for his crafty and cruel attempts to abolish Christianity and restore heathenism, and his ruinous loss in the Persian war. In A. D. 364 Valentinian divided the empire with Valens his brother; after which this division generally remained. The emperor of the western part resided at Rome, and the emperor of the east at Constantinople. Being now composed of ancient Romans, conquered nations, and invading Scythians, the Roman state became extremely weak and disjointed. Theodosius the Great united its parts, and restored it to some degree of its wonted order and strength. But he dying in 395, and dividing it to his sons Honorius and Arcadius, it gradually became more and more weak and miserable. The Goths under Rhadagaisus and Alaric ravaged Greece, Italy, &c. besieged Rome, murdered about a third part of the imperial subjects, and obliged the western emperor to allow them Gaul (or France) and Spain for their residence. In A. D. 410 Alaric again ravaged Italy, and burnt Rome. Meanwhile other armies of Goths, Alans, and Vandals, almost desolated Gaul and Spain, and took possession thereof. The Vandals crossed the Mediterranean sea by the Straits of GIBRALTAR, and by terrible ravage, rendered themselves masters of the Roman territories in Africa, and there formed a powerful kingdom.—Attila, and his infernal Huns, for fourteen years ravaged Thrace, Greece, France, and part of Italy, in the most barbarous manner, putting almost every one they could find to the sword. The emperor Valentinian III. by promising them an annual tribute, diverted them from their intended attack upon Rome. To revenge the murder of this emperor on his subjects, Eudoxa his queen implored the assistance of the African Vandals. They, under Genseric their king, in A. D. 455 ravaged Sicily and Italy, pillaged Rome, and returned home laden with spoil. The western empire, now terribly desolated, languished about twenty years more under eight short and turbulent reigns.—In A. D. 476 Odoacer, whom the Heruli and other barbarians had chosen for their king, deposed the emperor Augustulus, and translated the seat of his own royalty to Ravenna, another city of Italy. His kingdom had scarcely lasted sixteen years, when Theodoric the Ostrogoth unhinged it, and founded another, of about sixty-four years continuance. Hitherto the Roman consuls, senate, and magistrates, had always maintained some vestiges of their ancient power and dignity. But Justinian, the emperor of Constantinople, having recovered Africa from the Vandals, and part of Italy from the Goths, his successor Justin II. A. D. 566, totally abolished the distinguished honours of Rome, reduced it to the same level with the neighbouring cities, and made the exarch of Ravenna, his deputy governor of it.—The Romish bishop, about A. D. 606, obtaining an imperial mandate by which he was declared UNIVERSAL BISHOP, immediately began to grasp at civil power. In A. D. 756 he actually became prince of Rome and the two territories adjacent, and restored to that city part of its ancient privileges. The succeeding popes attempted to extend an imperial influence over the nations. Hating the emperor of Constantinople, the Romans proclaimed Charles the Great king of France and Germany, their emperor. About A. D. 800 he and the pope established the German empire instead of the Roman; which headed head of the beast will probably continue till the glorious Millennium commence; Rev. viii. 7—12; Zech. vi. 7; Dan. ii. 33, 41—43; and vii. 8; Rev. xiii. 2, 3, 15; and x. 3.

About A. D. 480 the western empire had begun to be parcelled out into ten TOES or HORNS, i. e. sovereign states of barbarians, who came from the east; viz. Huns, Ostrogoths, Visigoths, Franks, Vandals, Suevi and Alans, Burgundians, Heruli and Rugians, Saxons, Lombards.—Bishop Chandler classes them thus: the Ostrogoths in Mæsia, the Visigoths in Pannonia, the Suevi and Alans in Spain and part of France, the Vandals in Africa, the Franks in France, the Heruli and Thuringi in Italy, the Saxons and Angles in Britain, the Huns in Hungary, the Lombards on the banks of the Danube, and afterwards in Italy. Sir Isaac Newton arranges them thus: the Vandals and Alans in Africa and Spain, the Suevi in Spain, the Visigoths, the Alans in France, the Burgundians, the Franks, the Britons, the Huns, the Lombards, and the Exarchate of Ravenna. In the eighth century Bishop Newton arranges them thus: the Senate of Rome, the Greek Exarchate of Ravenna, the Lombards, the Huns, the Alemans, the Burgundians, the Franks, the Goths, the Britons, the Saxons. Ever since the fall of the Roman empire it has been generally parcelled out into ten distinct sovereignties, notwithstanding frequent alterations in their form, extent, &c. At present we have the states of Italy, the two Sicilies, Portugal, Spain, France, Britain, Holland, Germany, Hungary, and Switzerland: or, by joining Holland, Hungary, or Switzerland, to Germany, we may admit Turkey for a tenth. The different nations of which these states were composed, and their diversified tempers and laws, have rendered their constitutions weak and inconsistent; Dan. ii. 33, 41—43; and vii. 7, 20; Rev. xii. 3; xiii. 1; and xvii. 3, 12, 16. For almost 1200 years past these ten sovereignties have, in whole, or in part, submitted to the tyranny of the Antichristian Popes; but when 1260, from the full manifestation of Popery, are finished, they shall renounce his authority, and employ their power to abolish it. What alterations these ten states will undergo in their own form, by the general conversion of mankind to Christ in the Millennium, we know not; Rev. xiii. 1, 12—17; and xvii. 12—16; Dan. ii. 44, 45; and vii. 8, 11, 24—27.

XVI. ARABIA is of great extent, reaching from Egypt on the west to Persia on the east; and from the Indian ocean on the south to Canaan; nay, in the east parts, to Syria on the north. The south part of it, between the Red sea and the Persian gulf, was peopled by the posterity of Joktan; Gen. x. 26—30; 1 Chron. i. 20—23. The north parts by the ISHMAELITES, who, when multiplied into their twelve tribes, swallowed up most of the descendants of Keturah, Esau, and Lot; Gen. xvi. 10, 12; xvii. 20; xxi. 9—21; xxv. 12—18; 1—4; xxxvi. 1—16; and xix. 37, 38. Part of the Ishmaelites anciently traded with the Egyptians in spices; and long after with the Tyrians in spices, ebony, jewels, gold, ivory, precious clothes, and cattle; Gen. xxxvii. 25; Ezek. xxvii. 15; 20—22. But they have generally applied themselves to the management of flocks and herds, dwelling in tents, and roving from place to place, as they found most convenient for pasture; Is. xiii. 20; xxi. 13; and lx. 6, 7; Ezek. xxv. 4, 5. They have in every age been distinguished for lewdness, robbery, ravage, revenge, and murder; and have been a common nuisance and plague to mankind around them. It was the interest of each of the many conquerors who approached their territories to extirpate them; but none has ever so much as properly reduced them to subjection; Gen. xvi. 12.—Some of them assisted the Midianites against Israel, and shared in the vengeance of Gideon. Judg. vi. 3; and viii. 24. They sent friendly compliments to Solomon. And perhaps the queen of Sheba was an Arabian; 1 Kings x. 1—15; 2 Chron. ix. 1—14. Shishak, the Egyptian conqueror, was obliged to protect his kingdom from their depredations by a deep ditch and line of defence. They complimented Jehoshaphat with some flocks; but, quickly after, to their own hurt, they joined in the grand alliance against him; 2 Chron. xvii. 10, 11; and xx. Ps. lxxxiii. 6—17. They terribly ravaged Judea under Jehoram his son; 2 Chron. xxi. 16, 17.

About A. M. 3200 the Gadites and Reubenites gave the eastern Ishmaelites or Hagarenes a terrible defeat, and seized on their territory and wealth; 1 Chron. v. 15—22. About 3290 the Assyrians ravaged their country. Many of the Kedarenes were murdered, and their flocks carried off for a spoil. The Dedanites fled to the woods, where many of them perished by hunger. The Kenites were carried prisoners to Nineveh; Is. xxi. 13—17; Num. xxiv. 21, 22. About A. M. 3420 Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean ravaged the northern parts of Arabia, put multitudes of the Dedanites, Buzites, Temanites, Scenites, and Kedarenes, to the sword, burnt their cities, and carried off their wealth for a prey; Jer. xxv. 9, 23—25; and xlix. 30—33. Provoked by their contempt of himself, or by their depredations on his subjects, Alexander the Great, about A. M. 3678, in vain resolved to extirpate them. Antigonus, his mighty general, who attempted to succeed him, Pompey, the victorious Roman commander; and the emperors Augustus, Trajan, and Severus: attempted to reduce or destroy them in vain. Providence always, and sometimes miraculously, maintained the independency of these wild descendants of Abraham by Hagar; Gen. xvi. 12.

About A. D. 608 Mahomet, a crafty Ishmaelite, assisted, it is said, by a villainous Jew, and a treacherous Christian monk, under pretence of reforming his countrymen's gross idolatry, contrived a religious system, adapted to the then reigning taste of Jews and Christians as well as Heathens; promising to those who embraced it manifold carnal enjoyments, both in time and in eternity. After spending about fourteen years in private attempts on his idolatrous neighbours, he was obliged to flee from Mecca, the place of his birth, to Medina, where he procured a considerable number of followers, who were called SARACENS.—Encouraged by this, he altered his plan, and began to propagate his tenets by fire and sword.—While a preternatural darkness of the sun, from June to October, presaged their ruinous influence, his army of Saracens prodigiously increased. Like locusts and scorpions, they chiefly ravaged and murdered the nations during the five months of summer: and it was about five prophetic months, or 150 years, before their ruinous power began to decline. The strength of their armies chiefly consisted in cavalry; and their incursions were rapid and violent. Dressed with turbans or mitres, their heads appeared as if crowned; and their captains reckoned themselves on a level with kings. They had beards as men; but plaited their hair as women. They pretended to a masculine religion: but lust for women, revenge, and cruelty, chiefly marked their character. Their daring hearts and destructive weapons rendered their incursions alarming and terrible. Their tail, the very scum of their armies, spread misery and death wherever they went: and the delusions they propagated were ruinous and damning. But Abubekr the Calif, or successor of Mahomet, made it a standing law that none should destroy corn or fruit trees, or hurt any cattle, but when it was necessary for subsistence: and God so managed their conquests and ravages, that his faithful servants generally escaped. Nor, though they wrecked their fury upon empty and idolatrous Christians all along, from China to the Atlantic ocean, could they ever render themselves masters of the Christian capitals of Rome and Constantinople, even though they pillaged the former and often besieged the latter. By the direction of Satan, and of Mahomet and his successors (CALIFS), especially for the first eighty years, they murdered an infinity of mankind. In Asia they conquered Arabia, Canaan, Syria, Chaldea, Persia, Media, Armenia, Assyria, with part of Lesser Asia, India, and Tartary. In Africa they conquered Egypt, Nubia, Lybia, Barbary, Fez, and Morocco, and other countries on the north of the river Senegal,

In the Mediterranean they seized upon Cyprus, Sicily, and many other islands. In Europe they conquered Portugal and Spain, with part of Italy and France. From A. D. 760 to 910 their power was either at a stand, or more generally on the decline. Their setting up other Califs in opposition to the mighty lords of Bagdad; the religious differences between the Persians and other Mahometans, and the terrible animosity occasioned thereby; the success of the Christians in Spain; and the perpetual inroads and growing power of the Seljukians in Persia; greatly weakened their authority. Tangrolipix the Seljukian Turk, about A. D. 1040 or 1055, rendered himself sovereign of Persia, stripped the Calif of Bagdad, who was the chief, of his civil authority, leaving him but a mere shadow of spiritual power.

In A. D. 1260, the Jenghizian Tartars utterly abolished the Califate of Bagdad. Mostanser the Calif escaped to Egypt, where he and his successors enjoyed a shew of spiritual government, till, in 1525, that country was conquered by the Ottoman Turks. In A. D. 1610 the Spaniards drove about 900,000 Saracens and Moors out of their country. For more than 400 years past the Ottoman Turks have possessed a great part of their ancient conquests. Others, of Tartarian original, have still longer possessed their kingdoms of Persia, Indostan, &c. Thus these ISHMAELITES or SARACENS are, after an amazing blaze of earthly grandeur, reduced to, if not below, their ancient baseness. They nevertheless maintain their wonted independence; and still oblige the haughty Sultans of Constantinople to pay them a yearly tribute of 40,000 crowns, as the condition of their allowing the Turkish pilgrims a safe passage to Mecca their holy city; Rev. ix. 1—11; Dan. xi. 40; Gen. xvi. 12.

XVII. The Scythians, Tartars, and Turks, are the offspring of Japheth by MAEOG, and perhaps some others of his sons; Gen. x. 2; Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. They have multiplied exceedingly; and have often made the most terrible irruptions into Europe or Southern Asia. About A. M. 3370, under Maydes or Oguz Khan, they ravaged Western Asia. It seems they intended to have penetrated into Egypt, had not Psammiticus, by flattery and compliments, diverted them. It was not till after twenty-eight years, and the massacre of their chiefs by Cyaxares' orders, that they evacuated Media, or submitted to its king. Much about the same period they seem to have conquered China. About A. M. 3510 the Scythians carried on a furious war with Darius Hystaspis the Persian. About A. D. 3754 the Parthians founded a powerful kingdom in eastern Persia, which continued 482 or 475 years. Before the birth of our Saviour the Dacians had begun to ravage the north-east parts of the Roman empire; but were reduced by the emperor Trajan about A. D. 110. The Sarmatæ began their ravaging of Germany about A. D. 69; but were reduced by the Huns about 450, and more fully by the Goths about 500. The Alans began ravishing Media about A. D. 70, and Europe 120; and at last settled in Spain about 409. The Suevi began their ravages about A. D. 85; fixed their residence in Spain 409; and were subdued by the Goths about 585. The Vandals began their murderous incursions about A. D. 166. They ravaged all along from Germany to the Atlantic ocean, crossed the Mediterranean sea, and erected a kingdom in Africa, 407. Issuing from thence, about 455, they ravaged Sicily and Italy, and pillaged Rome; but, about 536, were subdued by Justinian the emperor of Constantinople. Perhaps the Gallas or Giagas, in the heart of Africa, are part of their murderous descendants. About, if not before, A. D. 215, the Goths began their terrible ravages of the Roman empire. In A. D. 410 they took and burnt Rome; and about the same time fixed their residence in Italy, Gaul, and Spain.—About A. D. 250 the Franks began their ravages; and about 420 settled in Gaul, which, from them, has been since called FRANCE. The Heruli began their ravages about A. D. 256; and, along with others, abolished the Roman empire in 476: but, within about sixty years, were once reduced by the Ostrogoths, and again by the emperor Justinian. About A. D. 257 the Burgundi began their ravages, but were reduced by the Franks about 534. About 269 the Gepidæ began their incursions; but about 572 the Lombards, who had just before established a powerful kingdom in Italy, subdued the rest. The Lombards themselves were reduced by Charles the Great of France and Germany about 200 years after. From A. D. 376 the Huns committed the most terrible ravages through a great part of Europe, and at last settled in Hungary. About the same time the Haiathelite or Ephthalite Huns committed the most shocking depredations in the kingdom of Persia. From about A. D. 485 to 1390 the Bulgars frequently ravaged the eastern empire; but were at last reduced by the Ottoman Turks. Whether the Saxons, who so furiously warred in Germany, and who murdered the Britons of England and dwelt in their stead; and the Marcomans, Alemans, and Quadi, who bore their part in ravaging the Roman empire; were also of a Scythian or Tartar original, we cannot determine: nor can we say what desolations were made in Tartary by the emigration of such multitudes towards the west. But it is certain that, by murdering the old inhabitants and one another, a great part of Europe was rendered a shambles of bloodshed and war, and turned into a comparative desert. Nor till many ages afterwards were these countries moderately peopled or cultivated. So general was the destruction, that the laws, and even the language, of the Romans or natives were extirpated; and the language of the ravagers, and their feudal system, inhuman divisions, and probations of causes, were every where introduced. Thus the TOES of the image appeared, as formed of iron and clay; and the grizzled horses of the fourth chariot walked to and fro in the earth; Dan. ii. 33, 41—43; Zech. vi. 7; Rev. vi. 4, 8; and viii. 7—12.

About A. D. 1000 Mahmud Gazni, with an army of Tartars and others, founded the empire of the Gaznevites in the East Indies, which continued for some ages powerful and flourishing. While the power of the Saracens was on the decline, multitudes of Turks had gradually poured themselves, from the north-east, into Persia and Mesopotamia. They formed four sultanies or kingdoms, near to the Euphrates; that of Bagdad in A. D. 1040 or 1055, of Damascus and Aleppo in 1079, and of Iconium in 1080. The first was by far the most powerful. For more than 200 years God, by their own mutual contentions, and by the invasions of the European Croisades for the recovery of Canaan, and by the invasions of the Tartars, restrained their motions, and kept them, as it were, bound by the river Euphrates. Arisen from the smallest beginnings, Jenghiz Kan, an eastern Tartar, and his sons, between 1200 and 1260, conquered most of Asia, and the east of Europe, to the frontiers of Germany. Besides several smaller states in India, &c. they formed the three powerful empires of Kipjak, partly in Europe, and of China and Persia in Asia. None of these continued respectable in the Jenghizian family beyond the 9th or 10th generation. About A. D. 1400 Tamerlain, with a huge army of Tartars, overran Western Asia, murdered an infinity of mankind, many of them in cold blood, and founded the two powerful empires of Persia and Indostan; the last of which, comprehending about thirty-two kingdoms on this side the Ganges, is still governed by his Mogul descendants. Thus God has multiplied Japheth, and made him dwell in the tents of Shem; Gen. ix. 27; Rev. ix. 14.

To avoid the fury of the Jenghizian Tartars, Soliman Shah, a Turkish lord, with his three sons, attempted to cross the Euphrates to the westward. He was drowned in his passage. His two elder sons returned home and submitted to the enemy; and not long after Ortogrul the youngest, with his sons, Condoz, Sarubani, and Othman, crossed the river, and obtained from the Seljukian sultan of Iconium a settlement on the western borders of Armenia. Othman, from whom the Turks are still called OTTOMANS, becoming a valiant captain, many of the Seljukians deserted their own sultans and joined him: With these he frequently routed the straggling Tartars or his Christian neighbours. His victories made the Ottoman hands prodigiously increase. The strength of their armies generally consisted in horsemen, of whom they have sometimes had a million in pay. Dressed in blue, scarlet, or yellow livery, they were extremely furious, desperate, and cruel; horrid blasphemers, and mad with zeal for the Mahometan delusion. Assisted by newly-invented fire-arms of a monstrous size, protected by sparkling breastplates, and armed in heart with courage and fury, for almost 400 years they spread the most tremendous ravage and murder among the apostate Christians in the west of Asia and south-east of Europe. They began their conquests with the taking of Kutahi in Asia, A. D. 1281 or 1302, and ended them with the taking of Kaminiek in Poland 1672, or at the peace of Carlowitz in 1698. Under their emperors, Othman, Orchan, Amurath I. Bajazet I. (whom Tamerlain the Tartar so terribly routed, and carried about in an iron cage), Mahomet I. Amurath II. Mahomet II. Bajazet II. Selim I. Soliman, Selim II. Amurath III. and Mahomet IV. they made themselves masters of the whole of the eastern Romish empire, from Ethiopia on the south to Poland on the north, and from near the Caspian sea on the east to the Straits of Gibraltar on the west. Few countries, mentioned in scripture, escaped their conquering fury. Those which they subdued, though anciently populous, rich, and fertile, were, by their murders and tyrannical oppressions, rendered a comparative desert. Instead of hundreds or thousands of wealthy and populous cities, none, except Constantinople in Europe; Smyrna, Bagdad, Aleppo, and Erzerum in Asia; Cairo and Alexandria of Egypt; to which we can scarcely add Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, in Africa; now deserve much notice; Gen. ix. 27; Zech. vi. 7; Rev. ix. 12—21; Dan. xi. 40—43.

What tidings from the north and east shall hereafter terrify the Ottoman empire we know not: but in the beginning of the Millennium we expect the Turks, and their Persian, Ethiopian, Lybian, and Arabian, allies, to attack the Jews when just converted to the Christian faith and returned to Canaan, and miserably to perish in the attempt, leaving their carcasses to fatten the fields, and their wealth for a spoil: Dan. xi. 44, 45; Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. In the end of that happy period we expect the descendants of Magog, Russians, Tartars, and Turks, or other like savages, with their wicked auxiliaries, to attempt an utter destruction of the Christians; but to be destroyed by some ruinous plague; Rev. xx. 8, 9.

XVIII. Notwithstanding God's destruction of the old world by a flood, to purge away its universal corruption, mankind quickly returned to their wonted wickedness, or invented new methods of guilt: and therefore, to preserve religion among them, God selected a peculiar nation for himself. For about 2000 years the Jewish or Hebrew descendants of Shem were the distinguished people of God; Gen. ix. 26. Abraham himself was, for this purpose, separated from the rest of mankind; and he and his promised seed, i. e. those only by Isaac and Jacob, were by solemn covenant adopted into peculiar relation to the Most High. While Abraham himself was a blessing to the nations around, he was also highly favoured by God; and Isaac and Jacob were conceived by a supernatural influence; and were, in like manner, by their instructions, example, and otherwise, rendered public blessings to mankind. A seed, numerous as the sand, was promised to these divinely-confederated Patriarchs. But, to exercise their faith and patience, it had, during the first 215 years, increased to no more than 70 persons. In the last half of the 430 years, prescribed by God for their wandering condition, it increased into about three millions, men, women, and children, notwithstanding terrible oppression, and manifold attempts to murder their male children; Gen. xii. 1—3; xiii. 16; xv. 4, 5, 13, 14, 16; xvii. 4—7, 16, 19, 21; xviii. 10, 14; xxi. 1—8, 12; xxii. 17, 18; xxv. 21—34; xxvi. 3, 4; xxvii. 22—29; xxviii. 3, 14, 15; xxxi. 13; and xxxv. 11.—Gen. xlvii. Exod. i. Dent. vii. 7; x. 22; and xxvi. 5; Josh. xxiv. 2—4; Psal. cv. 6—24; Is. li. 2; Acts vii. 2—18.

When the Hebrews had sojourned in Egypt about 215 years, and had for almost an hundred been cruelly oppressed, God, notwithstanding their sinfulness and many compliances with the heathen abominations, did, in A. M. 2513, miraculously bring them forth from their bondage with great honour and wealth; and, by tenfold plagues, severely punished their Egyptian persecutors; Gen. xv. 14, 16; xvi. 4; and l. 24, 25; Exod. i—xiv. Dent. xi. 2—4; iv. 20, 34, 37; v. 15; vi. 12, 21, 22; vii. 8, 18, 19; ix. 26; xiii. 10; xvi. 1; and xxvi. 6—8; Josh. xxiv. 5—7; Judg. ii. 1; and x. 11; 1 Sam. xii. 6, 8; Neh. ix. 9—11; Ps. lxxvi. 5—12; lxxvii. 14—20; cxiv. 1; lxxx. 8; lxxxii. 5—7; lxxxviii. 12, 43—52; cv. 26—38; cvi. 7—12; cxxxv. 8, 9; cxxxvi. 10—15; lxxiv. 12—15; and lxxxix. 10; Is. li. 9, 10; and lxiii. 9—15; Jer. xxxii. 20, 21; and ii. 6; Ezek. xvi. 2—7; xx. 5—10; and xxiii. 3; Acts vii. 18—36; and xiii. 17.

Notwithstanding their frequent murmurings, renewed rebellions, and repeated idolatries, God for forty years guided and protected them in the wilderness by a miraculous pillar of cloud; fed them with manna from heaven, and with water from the flinty rocks of Rephidim and Kadesh; and twice regaled them with the flesh of quails. In the most solemn manner he gave them his laws, and appointed them governors in church and state for the execution of them. His tabernacle was erected among them, and their tents regularly pitched around it. And, having by diversified plagues cut off that wicked generation who contemned his promised Canaan, he, by a miraculous passage through Jordan, and by manifold victories over the natives, gave them the possession of that country. His tabernacle was erected in the middle of the land, his covenant of peculiar friendship renewed with them, and the influences of his Holy Spirit remarkably bestowed upon them; Gen. xii. 2, 7; xiii. 14—17; xv. 7—21; xvii. 7, 8, 21; xxi. 12; xxii. 17, 18; xxiv. 60; xxvi. 3, 4; xxvii. 28, 29; xxviii. 3, 4, 13—15; xxxv. 11, 12; and l. 24, 25; Exod. iii. 8; vi. 4—8; xv. 13; xxiii. 23—31; xxxiii. 14; and xxxiv. 10, 11. Their situation and fate in Canaan exactly corresponded with the benedictions of Jacob and Moses; Gen. xlix. Dent. xxxiii. Their territory was about 180 miles in length from north to south, and 80 in breadth from east to west. The river Jordan, (which, taking its rise in Lebanon, and running southward, formed in its course the lake of Merom, and the far larger sea of Cinnereth, Galilee, or Tiberias), together with the brooks and rivulets which crossed the country, and a multitude of fruitful hills and valleys, rendered it exceedingly pleasant and fertile. Lebanon on the north, Hermon and Gilead on the east, Tabor, in the middle, and North Carmel on the west, were some of the more delightful mountains. This territory comprehended about 9,231,000 acres of ground, which, after saving perhaps two millions for the Levitical cities, and for the chiefs of families, allowed each of the 601,730 warriors who conquered it about twelve acres a-piece. The arable grounds yielded sometimes sixty or an hundred fold. The rich pastures produced large quantities of milk and honey. Thus, by the blessing of God, their land was fully capable of maintaining its numerous inhabitants. The Reubenites, Gadites, and half tribe of Manasseh, had their portions on the east of Jordan; Num. xxxii. Dent. iii. Josh. xiii. The portion of the REUBENITES lay on the north-east of the Dead Sea of Sodom, and north of the river Arnon. It included Peor, Nebo, and Pisgah, hills which at present make a very rugged appearance. Their principal cities were Heshbon, Jahaz, Bamoth-baal, Beth-peor, Medeba, Adam, Shittim, Bezer, Mephaath, Beth-jeshimoth, &c.; part of which the Moabites afterwards took from them; Num. xxxii. 3, 37, 38; Dent. iii. 12, 16; Josh. xiii. 15—21; and xxi. 36, 37; 1 Chron. vi. 78, 79; with Isa. xv. 2, 4, 6; and xvi. 9; Jer. xlviii. 21—24. Northward of the Reubenites the children of GAD had their inheritance, in a soil more plain and fertile. Their principal cities were Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, Jazer, Enon, Succoth, Penuel, Mahanaim, East Mizpeh, Ramoth-gilead, &c.; part of which were afterwards seized by the Ammonites and Moabites; Num. xxxii. 34—36; Josh. xiii. 24—28; and xxi. 38, 39; 1 Chron. vi. 80, 81; with Jer. xlviii. 21—24; and xlix. 2. Northward of the Gadites, in the large territory of Galilee of the Gentiles, were seated the Eastern Manassites. Their principal cities were Edrei, Ashtaroth, Golan, Geshur, Sharon, Jabesh-gilead, Chorazin, Bethsaida, Girsasha, Gadara, &c.; Num. xxxii. 39—42; Dent. iii. 14, 15; Josh. xiii. 29—31; 1 Chron. vi. 71; Mat. xi. 21; Luke viii. 26. Nine tribes and an half had their portions on the west of Jordan. In the south parts, westward of the Dead sea, JUDAH had a large inheritance of about an hundred fenced cities, among which were Libnah, Makkedah, Azekah, Engaddi, Adullam, Hebron, South Beth-lehem, Beth-shemesh, Gath, Ekron, Ashdod, Ashkelon, and Gaza; which last five the Philistines long retained; Josh. xv. and xxi. 13—16; 2 Chron. xi. 5—10; Neh. xi. 25—30. The SIMEONITES had their portion out of the south-west part of the territory of Judah. Their chief cities were Beer-sheba, Hormah, Ziklag, &c. Josh. xix. 2—8. The BENJAMITES had a small strip, along the north border of Judah: it included Jericho, Beth-el, Gibeon, Gibeah, Ramah, Gilgal, Mizpeh, Bahurim, Nob, Anathoth, Lod, Hadid, and Ono, and the northern half of Jerusalem; Josh. xviii. 11—28; Neh. xi. 31—35; Josh. xxi. 17, 18; 1 Chron. vi. 60; Ezra ii. 33. The DANITES had their portion on the west of the Benjamites. Their chief cities were Zorah, Eshtaol, South Gath-rimmon, Aijalon, Ekron, Gibbethon, if not also Joppa; Josh. xix. 40—47; and xxi. 23, 24; 1 Chron. vi. 69. Along the north border of Benjamin and Dan the EPHRAIMITES had their portion. It abounded with pleasant hills; Ephraim, Gerizzim, Ebal, Zalmon or Salmon, &c. The principal cities were Sharon, Lydda, two Beth-horons, Shechem, Samaria, Beth-el, Shiloh, Najoth, Gezer, &c. Northward of this was the portion of the Western MANASSITES. Their principal cities were Taanach, Beth-shean, Endor, Megiddo, Saleim, Bezek, Thebez, North Gath-rimmon, Tirzah, Cesarea, Antipatris; Josh. xvi. xvii. and xxi. 21—25; 1 Chron. vi. 66—70; Gen. xiv. 18; 1 Sam. xi. 8; Judg. ix. 47—50; and i. 27; 1 Kings xvi. 8, 9; Acts ix. 35, 36; and xxiii. 31, 33. Along the north border of these Manassites was seated the tribe of ISSACHAR. Their chief cities were Kishion, North Jarmuth, Tabor, Nain, Jezreel, Aphek, &c. Here were the mountains Tabor, Gilboa, and North Carmel, and the famed valley of Jezreel; Josh. xix. 17—23; and xxi. 28, 29; 1 Chron. vi. 72, 73; Luke vii. 11; 1 Kings xxi. 1; xx. 30; and xviii. 20; Judg. iv. 6; and viii. 18; 1 Sam. xxxi. 1; Isa. xxxv. 2; Hos. i. 5. Along the north border of the men of Issachar the ZEBULONITES had their portion. Which, as well as the three preceding, extended all along from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean sea on the west; and contained the rivers Kishon and Belus, if not also part of mount Tabor. The chief cities were Cinnereth, or Tiberias, Cana of Galilee, Gennesaret, North Beth-lehem, &c.; Josh. xix. 10—16; and xxi. 34, 35; Judg. i. 30; John vi. 1; and ii. 1; Mat. xiv. 34. Northward of the Zebulunites, on the west side, were seated the tribe of ASHER: whose principal cities were Rehob, North Hebron or Abdon, Aphik, Beth-shemesh, Kanah, Accho or Ptolemais; Josh. xix. 24—31; and xxi. 30, 31; Judg. i. 31; 1 Chron. vi. 74, 75; Acts xxi. 7:—And on the east side was the portion of the NAPHTHALITES; whose principal cities were Hammath, Ramah, Hazor, Kedesh, Beth-shemesh, Kirjath-sepher, Capernaum, &c.; Josh. xix. 32—38; and xxi. 32; 1 Chron. vi. 76; Judg. i. 33; Mat. xi. 23. This and the three next preceding portions lay mostly in Lower or Western Galilee.

In correspondence with the legal dispensation they were under, and that they might be standing emblems of the people of God in their imperfect state, the Hebrews were generally happy or miserable as they obeyed or disobeyed the divine Lord of their country. Neglect to extirpate the idolatrous Canaanites issued in their sudden and often-repeated apostasy from God to the like abominations. This JEHOVAH punished with repeated and grievous oppressions, by the Mesopotamians, the Moabites, the Canaanites, the Midianites, the Ammonites, and Philistines. But, upon their repentance, he delivered them by Othniel, Ehud, Barak, Gideon, Jephthah, Samson, and Samuel, their judges; Deut. iv—xiii. xviii—xxxii. Exod. xxiii. 24, 32, 33; and xxxiv. 12—17; Lev. xviii. 24—30; Num. xxxiii. 52—56; Deut. vii. 2—5, 16, 25, 26; xviii. 9—12; and xx. 16—18; Josh. xxiii. 4—16; and xxiv. 20; Judg. i—xxi. 1 Sam. i—vii. Neh. ix. 26—31; Psalm cvi. 34—46; and lxxviii. 56—67; 2 Kings xvii. 7—23; Ezek. xx. 25—29; and xvi. 15—34.

About A. M. 2909, or rather twenty or thirty years later, the Hebrews, wearied of their immediate subjection to God and his occasional deputy judges, desired to have a king like their heathen neighbours. Their sinful desire was granted; but it did not alter the tenor of their happiness and misery to their advantage. Under Saul, their first king, they were reduced to the very brink of ruin: but under David and Solomon, who succeeded him, their glory and happiness were advanced to the highest, correspondent to the blessings of Isaac, Jacob, and Moses. The whole of the Canaanites who remained among them were reduced to slavery: and all the nations, from the river of Egypt on the south-west to the Euphrates on the north-east, Philistines, Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, and Syrians, were rendered their tributaries; Lev. xxvii. Deut. iv—xii. xviii. and xxxii. 15—43; 1 Sam. viii. 11—18; xii. 14, 15, 25; xvi. 1—13; xviii. 17; xxiv. 20; xxv. 30; and xxvi. 25; 2 Sam. vii. 10—16; 1 Chron. xvii. 9—14; Gen. xxvii. 28, 29; and xlix. Deut. xxxiii. Psalm xx. xxi. lx. lxxvi. and lxxxix. 3, 4, 19—29; and lxxii. cxxxii. 1 Sam. viii—xxxi. 2 Sam. i—xxiv. 1 Chron. x—xxix. 1 Kings i—x. 2 Chron. i—ix. Psalm xviii. cxliv. and lxxviii. 67—72.

To punish the apostasy of Solomon and his subjects, God, before his death, began to chastise them, by means of Hadad the Edomite, and of Rezon the Syrian. Immediately after it the ten tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, Simeon, Dan, Reuben, Gad, Issachar, Zebulun, Asher, and Naphtali, in A. M. 3075, revolted from the royal family of David, and formed a distinct kingdom of their own; which, under nineteen wicked sovereigns, of nine different families, continued 254 years. To prevent their travelling up to the solemn feasts at Jerusalem, Jeroboam an Ephraimite, their first king, established among them the idolatrous worship of the golden calves. To these Omri and Ahab added other idolatrous abominations, still more hateful. Notwithstanding the faithful warnings of Abijah the Shilonite, and of the man of God from Judah, and of Jehu the son of Hanani, and of Micaiah, and of the wonder-working Elijah, and Elisha, and of Jonah, Amos, Hosea, and other prophets in their respective ages, the ten tribes continued obstinate in their iniquity, particularly, in worshipping the calves of Beth-el and Dan. The frequent murder of their kings, especially just before the ruin of their monarchy, and the civil wars attending it; their repeated wars with the kingdom of Judah; and especially the invasions of the Syrians and Assyrians; rendered them generally miserable. The craft of Jeroboam I. the valour of Baasha, the miraculous victories of Ahab, the successful wars of Jehoash, Jeroboam II. and Pekah, quickly issued in the ruin of their families and distress of their kingdom. Of the eleven cotemporary kings of Judah, only Asa, Jehoshaphat, and Jotham, were indisputably pious; and prosperity attended their reigns, and that of Uzziah. Rehoboam's inconstancy, and Joash's apostasy, were punished by Egyptian and Syrian invasions. Under the wicked reigns of Jehoram, Ahaziah, and Ahaz, the nation was reduced to the very brink of destruction. Ignorance; ingratitude; contempt of God, and his oracles and ordinances; breach of covenant with him; idolatry, devilish divinations; alliances with heathens around, and dependance on them instead of God, pride; hypocrisy; scornful obstinacy in wickedness; neglect of relative duties; selfishness; hatred; bloodshed; luxury; lewdness; injustice; oppression; falsehood; deceit; envy; covetousness; and every similar form of iniquity; having long prevailed among all ranks in Israel and Judah, God, by the Assyrians, fearfully punished them. After Pul and Tiglath-pileser had distressed and weakened the kingdom of Israel, Shalmaneser quite destroyed it in A. M. 3283: and, with Esarhaddon his grandson, about forty years after, carried off the poor remains of the ten tribes to Media and other eastern parts of their empire; whence few, if any of them ever returned to Canaan. From A. M. 3290 to 3294 Sennacherib terribly ravaged the kingdom of Judah, and took most, if not all, their fenced cities, except Jerusalem. But, when he had brought up his forces to attack that sacred capital, God, in answer to Hezekiah's and Isaiah's prayers, by an angel, cut off 185,000 of them in one night, and delivered the city; Lev. xxvi. 14—39; Deut. iv. 25—28; xxviii. 15—68; xxix. 18—28; xxx. 16—20; and xxxii. 15—30; Josh. xxiii. 13—16; and xxiv. 20; 1 Sam. xii. 25; 2 Sam. vii. 14—16; 1 Chron. xvii. 13, 14; Psalm lxxxix. 30—51; 1 Kings ix. 6—9; xi. 9—13, 26—39; xiv. 7—16; xvi. 2—4; xvii. 1; xviii. 41, 45; xx. 13, 28, 42; xix. 17; xxi. 21—24, 29; and xxii. 15, 17, 28; 2 Chron. xviii. 6, 27; 2 Kings i. 6, 16; and iii. 17, 18; 2 Chron. xx. 15—17; Ps. lxxxiii. 1—18; 2 Chron. xxi. 12—15; and xxiv. 20; 2 Kings ix. 6—10; x. 30; viii. 10—13; xii. 17—19; and xiv. 25; Hos. i. 4, 5; Amos vii. 9; and ii—ix. Mic. i. iii. iv. 11—13; and vi. vii. Hos. i. ii. 2—13; and iv—xiii. Isa. i—x. xvii. xxii—xxiv. 1 Kings xi—xxii. 2 Kings i—xix. 2 Chron. x—xxvi. xxxii. 2 Kings xvii. 7—23; Isa. xxxvi—xxxix.

Though the Jews had been severely punished for their hypocrisy and lukewarmness in the reformation attempted by king Hezekiah, and notwithstanding the manifold warnings of Hosea, Isaiah, Micah, and other prophets, yet they ungratefully abused their deliverance from the Assyrians, and the unnumbered mercies of both church and state consequent thereto. A most shocking scene of idolatry, murder, witchcraft, and every thing horrid, opened under king Manasseh, about A. M. 3306; which, notwithstanding his own repentance, and the piety and zealous reformation of Josiah his grandson, issued in the ruin of the state. After Josiah's death in A. M. 3394, both kings and subjects abandoned themselves to the most enormous impieties;—to contempt and forgetfulness of God; to hypocrisy in, or profane neglect or abuse of, his worship; to carnal confidence in themselves or their heathen allies; to profane swearing, and open violation of the sabbath; to neglect of relative duties, and want of natural affection; to hatred, murder, luxury, whoredom, perverting of judgment, falsehood, slander, and covetousness. To punish these and their other enormities, under Manasseh and Amon, the Lord gave them up into the hands, first of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and then of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon. He, in different invasions, wasted their country, carried captive their princes and people who escaped his sword, and in A. M. 3416 burnt their cities and temple, and rendered their land a desolate wilderness. While Daniel and others, who were first carried prisoners to Babylon, were kindly, and sometimes honourably, used, those who came after were treated with much severity, contempt, and derision. Such of the poor as were left in Canaan, and those who acceded to them, quickly after the murder of Gedaliah by Ishmael, retired to Egypt, where they mostly perished in a few years, when Nebuchadnezzar ravaged that country; Lev. xviii. 28, 29; and xxvi. 14—39; Deut. iv. 25—28. xxvii. 14—26; xxviii. 15—68; xxix. 18—28; xxx. 17, 18; xxxi. 17—19; and xxxii. 15—30; Josh. xxiii. 13—16; and xxiv. 20; 1 Kings ix. 6—9; 2 Chron. vii. 19—22; and xxxiv. 23—28; 2 Kings xx. 17, 18; xxi. 11—15; and xxii. 16—20; Mic. iv. 10, 11; and ii. iii. vi. vii. When the Jews, who were first carried captive, had been just seventy years in Babylon, Cyrus the Persian, who had, about two years before, taken Babylon, and abolished the power of the Chaldeans, by a solemn proclamation, A. M. 3468, commissioned them to return to their country and rebuild the temple of their god. To encourage them, he restored the sacred vessels which Nebuchadnezzar had brought away; and ordered his lieutenants on the west of the Euphrates to assist them with materials and money. About 30,000 of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and perhaps 12,000 of the other tribes, immediately returned, under the direction of Zerubbabel and of Joshua the high priest. Notwithstanding much opposition and trouble, in twenty years they rebuilt the temple and established the worship of God. About seventy years after, Ezra and Nehemiah, as deputies of the Persian king, reformed their corruptions, and rebuilt the wall of Jerusalem. The Jews meanwhile astonishingly increased in numbers, and enjoyed a tolerable degree of happiness. The Ammonites, Moabites, Samaritans, Philistines, Edomites, and Arabians, indeed, took every opportunity to harass them; and Haman the Amalekite, by a plot, brought them to the very brink of destruction. But God, by means of Zerubbabel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, and Mordecai, frustrated their attempts. Excepting that Artaxerxes Ochus, about 3653, ravaged their country, and transported multitudes of them into Egypt, or to the east of Media, for slaves, the Persian kings generally favoured them. But neither their mercies nor judgments restrained them from wickedness. They indeed from this time abhorred idolatry, which they reckoned the chief cause of their Chaldean captivity, but indulged themselves in marriages with the heathens; in cruelty to their Hebrew wives; in contempt of God's ordinances, and profanation of his sabbaths; and the like; Gen. xvii. 7, 8; Lev. xxvi. 40—45; Deut. iv. 29—31; xxx. 1—10; and xxxii. 35—43; 1 Kings viii. 46—50; Neh. i. 8, 9; Ps. lxxviii. 22; and lxxix. 35, 36; Is. i. 25—27; iv. 2—6; xi. 11—16; xix. 24, 25; xxiv. 22, 23; xxv—xxvii. xxxv. xiv. 1—3; xl. 1, 2, 9—11, 29—31; xli. 8—20; xlii. 13—16; xliii. 14—21; xlv. 21—28; xlv. 13, 17; xlv. 12, 13; xlvi. 16—21; xlix. 10—26; li. 11—23; lii. 1—12; lix. 19—21; and lx—lxvi. While the Grecian armies, between A. M. 3672 and 3834, so often marched through the country of the Jews which lay between Syria and Egypt, God protected them in a marvellous manner. About 3672 Alexander the Great marched against them, to punish their assisting his obstinate opposers of Tyre. But the humble supplication of their high priest entirely stilled his resentment, and secured his favour. He offered large sacrifices to their God, and confirmed to them whatever privileges they had enjoyed under the Persian kings. Having built Alexandria in Egypt, he settled multitudes of Jews therein, and allowed them the same privileges as his Macedonian subjects. About 3684 Ptolemy Lagus, king of Egypt, to revenge the attachment of the Jews to Laomedon his rival, furiously ravaged their country, and carried 100,000 of them prisoners to Egypt; but he there used them so kindly, even promoting them to places of power and trust, that many others followed them thither of their own accord. Seleucus Nicator of Syria, having built thirty-five, if not forty, new cities;—sixteen of which he called Antioch, after his father; nine Seleucia, after himself; six Laodicea, after his mother; three Apamea, and one Stratonice, after his wives;—placed in them as many Jews as he could, and assigned them the same privileges as they had at Alexandria in Egypt. About 3720 Philadelphus king of Egypt, at his own expense, ransomed all the Jews who were enslaved in his dominions, and gave them their freedom. It is said, that he or Euergetes his son, procured a Greek translation of their laws for the use of his famous library. Ptolemy Philopator offered large thank-offerings at the temple of Jerusalem for the victory which he obtained over Antiochus the Great: but, enraged that their priests or their God had hindered his access into the HOLY OF HOLIES, upon his return to Egypt, he terribly oppressed the Jews there, depriving them of their privileges; and assembled multitudes of them, in order to have them devoured by ravenous beasts. Instead of hurting the Jews, the animals furiously turned upon, and devoured the heathen spectators. Provoked by his barbarity, the Jews of Canaan readily submitted to Antiochus the Great, who had invaded their country. He repaired their temple at his own expense; complimented them with 20,000 pieces of silver, 1400 measures of wheat, and 375 of salt, for its service; and confirmed to them all their privileges which had been granted by Alexander the Great. As Jerusalem was much depopulated, he exempted from tribute for three years, such as would settle in it, and commanded all his subjects to let their Jewish slaves go free. But Scopas the Egyptian general, quickly forced the Jews to return to the obedience of his master; and placed a garrison at Jerusalem. About A. M. 3828 Heliodore of Syria, by order of his master Seleucus, attempted to pillage the temple of Jerusalem; but an angel affrighted him from the undertaking; and soon after he was permitted to poison his master, and thus hasten ruin upon himself; Zech. ix. 8; and ii. 8; Joel iii. 16, 17; Ps. lxxviii. 29, 30; Zech. viii. 20; Ezek. xxvi. 20; and xxi. 27; Dan. ix. 25; and xi. 14, 16, 20.

Antiochus Epiphanes was scarcely fixed upon the Syro-grecian throne when the Jews severely felt his madness and fury. Because Onias their high priest refused to comply with some heathen abominations, he turned him out of his office, and sold it to Jason, his more complaisant brother, for 350 talents of silver. Disgusted with Jason he quickly turned him out, and sold it to Menelaus, another brother, for 650 talents. When Antiochus was in Egypt, about A. M. 3834, the Jews, falsely informed of his death, made public demonstrations of their joy; and Jason attempted to recover the high priesthood. Provoked by this, and detesting their peculiar manner of worship, Antiochus, in his return homeward, forced his way into Jerusalem, murdered 40,000 of the inhabitants, and sold as many more for slaves. He carried off 1800 talents of the sacred money, and a great part of the furniture of the temple; and made two of his most inhuman favourites governors of the country. About two years after, mad with rage that the Romans had frustrated his designs upon Egypt, he ordered his troops, in their return through Judea, to pillage the cities, murder such as were able for war, and sell the women and children for slaves. Upon the sabbath, when the Jews superstitiously declined to fight, his troops entered Jerusalem, killed multitudes in cold blood, and carried off 10,000 prisoners. They erected a fort hard by the temple, whence they might sally forth and murder such as dared to worship there. Not long after Antiochus dedicated the temple itself to Jupiter Olympius, a chief idol of the Greeks, and erected his statue upon the altar of burnt-offering. For 2300 mornings and evenings, or 1150 days, the daily sacrifice was entirely stopped, and the temple rendered a scene of idolatry, lewdness, and murder. Such Jews as refused to worship idols, or eat swine's flesh, were exposed to all the horrors of persecution, torture, and death. Eleazar, and a widow, with her seven sons, were the most distinguished martyrs. Others, hazarding every thing dear, instructed their neighbours, and warned them to avoid every sinful compliance. Mattathias a priest, and his sons, Judas, Jonathan, Simon, &c. commonly called Maccabees, took arms, and, with astonishing bravery and conduct, defended their religion and liberties. After many lesser advantages, Judas, who succeeded his father in the command, gave Nicanor, the Syro-grecian general, a terrible defeat, A. M. 3839; recovered the temple; repaired and purified it, and restored the worship of God; and repaired Jerusalem, which had been reduced to almost a ruinous heap. After he had, with a handful of troops, for some years proved a terrible scourge to the Syro-grecians, Edomites, Arabs, and other heathens around, he was slain A. M. 3843, and Jonathan his brother succeeded him. He, and Simon his brother, who succeeded him, with astonishing bravery and prudence, continued to rectify the disorders of both church and state. Onias the high priest, son of the above mentioned, having settled in Egypt, where he afterwards built a temple for those of his nation, according to the form of that at Jerusalem, these Maccabees officiated in Canaan both as high priests and as civil governors: but were both at last treacherously murdered. About A. M. 3869 Hircanus succeeded Simon his father. He first procured a peace with the now weakened Syro-grecians, and then revolted from their yoke, and rendered himself an independent sovereign of the Jews. He subdued the Edomites, and forced them to embrace the Jewish religion. He reduced the Samaritans, and demolished Shechem and Samaria their capitals, and raised their temple on mount Gerizzim. Alexander Jannæus his son, after a short reign of Aristobulus his brother, succeeded him in A. M. 3899. He reduced the Philistines, obliged them to embrace the Jewish religion, and burnt Gaza their capital into a ruinous heap. He also reduced the Moabites, Ammonites, and part of the Arabians. Never since the days of Solomon had the dominion of the Jewish nation been so extensive. Never, but under these three reigns, were they, after the captivity, independent of the heathen powers, Persians, Greeks, or Romans; Dan. viii. 9—14, 23—25; ix. 25; and xi. 28—35; Zech. xiv. 1—3; xiii. 8, 9; xii. 2—8; x. 1—7; and ix. 13—16; Isa. xlix. 24—26; and lxiii. 1—4; Mic. iv. 12, 13; Obad. 17—21; Ezek. xxv. 14; Zeph. ii. 7—9; Isa. xi. 14; Num. xxiv. 17—19; Amos ix. 11—15.

By his cruelties, and other misconduct, Alexander had exceedingly disgusted many of his subjects, particularly the Pharisees. After his death, in A. M. 3925 his widow, with no small prudence, governed the nation for nine years. She was scarcely in her grave when Aristobulus her younger son, joined by multitudes of those who hated the Pharisees, contended for the crown and high priesthood against Hircanus, his elder but indolent brother. Finding that the Arabs assisted Hircanus, he, in A. M. 3940, applied to the Romans for help. But they, turning his enemy under Pompey, quickly reduced the country. He, and several of his captains, pushed their way into the Holy of Holies. And soon after Crassus, another Roman, bent on his fatal Parthian expedition, pillaged the temple of about 10,000 talents of silver. After Judea had for thirty-two years been a continued scene of ravage and bloodshed, Herod the son of Antipater, who had acted as a principal incendiary, by the assistance of Antony the Roman triumvir, obtained the crown through much barbarity and murder. Finding that neither force nor flattery could render him, who was a Gentile, at least by his father, and who, to please Augustus the emperor, had made heathen compliances, quiet on his throne, he, in A. M. 3984, resolved to recommend himself by rebuilding their ruinous temple. Within three years and an half the principal parts were finished in a most magnificent form. It took eight years more for the rest. Nay, in A. M. 4033, it appears not to have been finished; Ezek. xxi. 26, 27; Hag. ii. 6, 7, 22; Mic. v. 1, 3; Zech. xiv. 1, 2; Mal. iv. 1; John ii. 20.

When the long promised Messiah appeared in flesh, A. M. 4000, the Jews, finding their carnal imaginations and expectations nowise answered in him, notwithstanding the clearest evidence in his doctrine, miracles, and behaviour, rejected, and ignominiously crucified him; and did what they could to prevent the spread of his gospel among the Gentiles. To mark him actually come, the sceptre gradually departed from them. He had scarcely made his appearance in the temple, in the twelfth year of his age, when Judea was reduced into a Roman province. When he died, about twenty-four years after, they seem to have had no power of life and death in their hands. After the conversion of the centurion and his friends, Acts x. we find not the least vestige of civil power among them independent of the Romans.—The destruction of the Galileans at the temple by Pilate, the destruction of others by the falling tower of Siloam, the self-destruction of Judas the traitor, the alarming exit of Ananias and Sapphira, the consumption of Herod by worms, the blindness of Elymas the sorcerer, the murder of about an hundred thousand Jews, in Egypt, Syria, and Canaan, by their heathen neighbours; were but foreboding earnest of the fearful miseries of that nation for their rejection of Jesus Christ. The appearance of pretended Messiahs, Simon, Dositheus, Theudas, Felix the Egyptian, and many others; the astonishing spread of the gospel through the Roman empire; and the persecution of Christians by Jews and Heathens, and even by the edicts of Nero the emperor; the multitudes of earthquakes in Europe, Lesser Asia, &c.; the continued rumours of war, which disheartened many of the Jews from the cultivation of their fields; the hanging of a star, shaped like a sword, over Jerusalem for a whole year; the nocturnal blazing of a noontide light about midnight over the temple and places about, for half an hour, at the feast of tabernacles; a cow's bringing forth a lamb while she was led forward to the altar for sacrifice; the spontaneous opening of the east gate of the temple while shut with strong bolts, though twenty men could in general scarcely open it; the apparitions of armies in the air, fighting battles, and besieging cities; the unaccountable, and absolutely obstinate, crying of a country fellow, called Jesus, in the city for more than seven years, especially at the solemn feasts, "Wo to Jerusalem—Wo to the people—Wo to the temple;" and who, while at last he added "Wo to myself," was struck dead on the spot;—were providential omens thereof; Ps. xxii. 6—20; xxxv. 11—26; and lxix. 1—21; Prov. i. 20—32; Isa. viii. 14; Ps. xlix. 4, 7; 1. 2—9; lii. 14; liii. 1—8; and lxxv. 1, 2, 5, 6; Dan. ix. 24; Zech. xi. 8—13; Mat. ii—xxviii. Mark i—xv. Luke iv—xxiii. John v—xii. xviii. xix. Acts ii—xxviii. Gen. xlix. 10; Isa. lxvi. 6; Joel ii. 30, 31; Zech. xi. 1; Mat. xxiv. 3—13, 24, 30; Mark xiii. 5—13, 24—26; Luke xxi. 7—17, 25; Acts ii—xxiv. 1 Thess. ii. 14—16.

About A. D. 67 Cestius Gallus, the Roman governor of Syria having invested Jerusalem, raised the siege without any visible reason, and retired with the Jews at his heels. Taking this opportunity, the Christians, as directed by their Lord, left the city, and retired to Pella beyond Jordan, were Providence protected them; Mat. xxiv. 15, 16; Mark xiii. 14, 15; Luke xxi. 20, 21. Not long after Vespasian, whom God just then marvellously advanced to the Roman throne, in A. D. 69, invaded their country from the north-east, and quickly spread murder and flames all along to the south-west. Beginning at Galilee, where the inhabitants of Chorazin, Bethsaida, Nazareth, and Capernaum, had been principal rejecters of Jesus Christ, he took the cities by force, burnt them into heaps, and murdered almost every inhabitant. The Jews resisted with madness, and chose rather to murder themselves than surrender to the most compassionate generals. No where was the scene more shocking than at Jerusalem, where the worship of God had been long profaned, and our Lord had been crucified. The Romans invested the city while the Jews, not only from Canaan, but from the countries around, were assembled to keep their passover, perhaps to the number of two or three millions. Thus their solemn feast, which commemorated their miraculous deliverance from Egypt, and which prefigured Jesus' death, and at which he had been crucified, became their snare and trap. Split into three different factions, the besieged Jews spent their time in barbarously murdering one another; or united in desperate, but unsuccessful, sallies, against the Romans. Some even in sport murdered their fellows, to try the sharpness of their swords. At last the faction, headed by Eleazar, was treacherously massacred; and, while the heaps of unburied corpses occasioned a pestilence, their destruction of each others' magazines hastened a terrible famine. Even the most delicate ladies were obliged to broil their infants for food. Meanwhile the Jews scorned every gracious proposal which the compassionate Titus, now general for Vespasian his father, could make them. Having besieged the city about six months, the Romans, A. D. 70, forced their way into it from the east. Provoked with the obstinacy of the besieged, they murdered every one they met with. While the streets ran with blood, the air was filled with the groans of the dying, the howlings of the terrified, and the desperate outcries of the ravished: and the flames of the burning city ascended up to heaven. Instigated by a pretended Messiah, 6000 took refuge in the temple. Titus was extremely bent upon preserving it; but one of his soldiers, by casting a brand, set it on fire. Nor could all his authority make his loving and obedient troops so much as attempt to quench the flames. The outcries of the Jewish beholders became then absolutely infernal. Not long after its rival temple in Egypt, built by Onias, shared a similar fate. Jerusalem was turned into a ruinous heap. The foundations of the temple were plowed up, probably in quest of treasure: and, for the like reason, much of the rubbish of the houses was turned up; and it is said, not only the bellies of the dead but of the living, were ripped up, for the sake of the gold which they were supposed to have swallowed. Besides 257,660, who perished in other places, 1,100,000 are said to have lost their lives at Jerusalem alone. Titus caused the ringleaders in the rebellion to be crucified all round the city, till no more wood for crosses could be had. About 97,000 were taken prisoners. Many of these were sent into Egypt by sea to be slaves. About 11,000 perished with hunger. Part were transported to Syria, to be devoured by wild beasts in the public diversions, or sold at the lowest rate for slaves. Not one descendant of David, that could be found, was left alive. Nevertheless, multitudes of Jews still remained in the Roman empire. These, about A. D. 119, murdered about 500,000 of the Roman subjects, Christians and heathens. But Trajan, the valiant emperor, with no small difficulty and with terrible bloodshed, reduced them. About A. D. 134, Elus Adrian the emperor prohibited them from circumcising their children, and appointed a colony of heathens to rebuild Jerusalem and name it Elia, after himself. About 200,000 Jews assembling under Barcochab, one of the banditti who had, for a century before infested Canaan with their robberies, and now a pretended messiah, murdered the Roman subjects wherever they could find them. With no small difficulty the Romans defeated them in battle. After a siege of three years they took Bitter their capital. Fifty other garrisons quickly surrendered. In this war about 600,000 Jews are said to have been slain by the sword, besides those who perished by fire, famine, or pestilence. For several years fairs were held in Syria for selling the prisoners: and of those who were transported to Egypt, many perished by hunger, shipwreck, and massacres. Adrian built his city on mount Calvary; and, in contempt of the Jews, erected a marble statue of a swine over its principal gate. For about 500 years after this they durst not, without bribing the soldiers or hazarding their lives, approach near the ruins of their once sacred capital.

Since this period the Jews have continued scattered among all nations, obstinately adhering to their ancient and distinguished ceremonies, in contempt of Christ. Their numerous pretenders to messiahship, in every age and nation, have hardened them in their delusions, and drawn upon them an infinity of mischiefs. Dreadful have been their persecutions by the kings of Persia, Roman emperors, Arabian califs, kings of Spain, France, and England, and princes of Germany; and often from the groundless fury of the enraged populace in these places. A few instances shall represent their miserable condition. About the beginning of the fifth century of the Christian æra, the people of Macedonia, Dacia, Syria, and Minorca, murdered multitudes of them on account of their insulting their religion, and forced the remainder to hide themselves in dens and caves of the earth. In the sixth century Julian, their pretended Messiah, and his followers, drew upon themselves, by their insolence, the death of 20,000, and the enslavement of as many more. In the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth centuries, the popish crusaders murdered them almost wherever they could find them; while the Jews themselves murdered their own children, that the crusaders might not cause them to be baptized. About the beginning of the thirteenth century, Nasser the Arabian calif, provoked by their madly running after pretended messiahs, scarcely left one of them alive in Mesopotamia and the places around. After various confiscations of goods, banishments, and bloody massacres, they were finally expelled from England by king Edward, A. D. 1291, to the number of 160,000. Edward permitted them to transport their substance to France; but there, in his own dominions, he confiscated it for himself; so that most of them perished through want. After several banishments and massacres, they were, in 1300, finally expelled from France. About 1492 the Spaniards banished six or eight hundred thousand of them. Most of these perished by shipwreck, or through the inhumanity of the Africans. Many of their carcasses lay unburied. Between A. D. 1663 and 1666 scarcely any of them were left alive in the Persian empire. To save their lives or wealth, many of them have, from age to age, pretended to embrace the Romish idolatry. Perhaps at present sixteen or twenty thousand of them are professed Papists in Portugal and Spain, and not a few of them in clerical orders. These their friends endeavour to have circumcised at death; Lev. xxvi. 14—39; Deut. iv. 26—28; xxviii. 49—68; xxix. 18—28; xxx. 17, 18; xxxi. 16—18, 29; and xxxii. 15—34; Ps. ii. 1—5, 9; xxi. 8—12; xxxv. 23, 26; xl. 14, 15; 1. 2, 3; lxix. 22—28; lviii. 2—11; lix. 11—15; cix. 1—20; cx. 5, 6; cxxii. 18; cxi. 9, 10; and lv. 15, 23; Prov. i. 24—32; Is. ii. 6—21; iii. 1—26; iv. 1; v. 24—30; vi. 9—12; viii. 15, 21, 22; ix. 13—21; xxiv. 1—22; xxvii. 10, 11; xxviii. 17—22; x. 22, 23; xlii. 19, 20, 22—25; lix. 1—18; lvi. 2—7; 11—15; and lxvi. 3, 4, 6, 7, 14—18; Ezek. vi. 1—7; vii. ix. xv. and xvi. 35—39. Notwithstanding their inexpressible miseries, the Jews, every where scattered have, for 1700 years past, remained a people distinct from the rest of mankind, and never, in the common manner, incorporated with others. It is computed that their present number amounts to 3,000,000; one of which lives in the Turkish empire; 300,000 in Persia, India, and China; and 1,700,000 in Africa and Europe. Except in Portugal and Spain, their condition is now generally tolerable. It is even observable that scarcely one of their distinguished oppressors, whether persons or nations, hath long escaped the vengeance of Heaven. About A.D. 1866, or 2016, we expect the whole of the Hebrew tribes to be converted to the Christian faith, and to be happily and orderly replaced in Canaan, where it is probable they will continue to the end of the world. When they shall be just settled, the Turks and their allies we expect will attempt to dispossess them, and seize on their wealth; but shall miserably perish in the enterprise; Lev. xxvi. 40—45; Deut. iv. 29—31; xxx. 1—10; and xxxii. 35—43; 1 Kings viii. 46—50; Ps. lxxviii. 22—30; and lxxix. 35, 36; Is. i. 25—27; iv. 2—6; ix. 1—7; xi. 11—16; xix. 24, 25; xxiv. 22, 23; xxvii. 12, 13; xxv. xxvi. xxxv. xli. 8—20; xlii. 9—16; xliii. 18—21; xlv. 23, 26, 27; xlv. 17; xlvii. 12, 13; xlix. 10—26; li. 11, 17—23; lii. 1—12; liv. 8—13; lvi. 8; lvii. 13—19; lviii. 12; lix. 19—21; and lx—lxvi. XIX. No history is more important than that of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH in her Head and members. This world was chiefly created for a theatre, on which JEHOVAH might transact the work, and display the glories, of our redemption. To prepare the way for this great work, God permitted mankind to fall in Adam their covenant head. In prosecution of it he published the first promise in Paradise; instituted sacrifices; and, by an effusion of his Spirit, made the descendants of Seth to distinguish themselves from those of Cain, and observe social and public assemblies for his worship. By an overflowing flood he swept off the multiplied offspring of the serpent; and testified that the grant of the earth to man under the first covenant was entirely annulled. Immediately after the flood he bestowed on Noah and his descendants a new grant of the earth, founded on that new covenant which cannot be broken by men's sin. When the seed of the serpent again waxed strong, and attempted to defeat his designs in their building of Babel, he dispersed them; but it was round about Canaan, where the Redeemer intended to appear in manhood, and from whence the glad tidings of redemption were to be published; Gen. i—xi. To preserve religion in the re-corrupted world, God separated Abraham and his seed for himself by a peculiar covenant relation; founded on, and emblematic of, the covenant of grace. For almost two thousand years he marvelously preserved that family, out of which the Messiah was to spring, and continued the true religion among part of them; even under the oppression of the most powerful and active agents of hell. To them the covenant of grace was gradually manifested; and confirmed by many solemnities, signs, and types; Gen. xii—i. &c.

Intending quickly to abandon the rest of mankind to the slavery of Satan, he, by the deliverance of his people from Egypt, further separated them for himself. To regulate and fix them in this state, he added a multitude of positive laws, which, whether ecclesiastical or civil, did almost all exhibit Jesus Christ and his work of redemption. The fate of that generation in the wilderness; the remarkable effusion of the Holy Ghost on their children; their unbloody victories over the natives, and safe settlement in Canaan; their mingled troubles, deliverances, and rests, under the Judges; and their glory and wealth under David and Solomon; were but so many figures of the approaching redemption by Jesus Christ. To mark their imperfection, and their true design, the most purifying ceremonies, as the sin-offering, annual expiations, and water of separation, remarkably spread defilement. The Jewish nation, church, and ordinances, had no sooner arrived at their meridian glory, than they began to fade, and make way for the exhibition of Christ himself. Whilst the captivity in Babylon weaned them from their obstinate attachment to idolatry, the loss of the diadem of David's family, of the magnificence of the temple, and of the Urim and Thummim, sacred fire, ark, Shechinah, and perhaps other principal types, taught them to look for the speedy manifestation of the things prefigured. The dispersion of the Jews through the Persian, Grecian, or Roman empires, with their sacred books along with them, prepared the nations, as by broken hints, for the spread of the gospel by means of the pentecostal converts, or of the preachers who followed them into their several countries. By the successive rise and fall of the Chaldean, Persian, and Grecian empires, God had shewn that every alteration of external government did but change the form of men's sinfulness and misery, if not add thereto. After repeated attempts, Satan had, in the constitution and extent of the Roman empire, erected the strongest battery against God and his Christ which had ever existed, and had reduced God's separated nation to the lowest depth of corruption and misery. And, that the appearance of Jesus might be the more observable, the miracles, once so common in Israel, had, for 700 years, almost entirely ceased; nor for 400 had one prophet appeared among them; Exod. iii. to Esth. x. &c.

In the fulness of time, A. M. 4000, when the long-continued tribeship and legislative power were departing from the descendants of Judah;—when that tribe had undergone manifold calamities, and changes of government and masters;—when Daniel's seventy weeks, or 490 years, from the edict of Artaxerxes to rebuild Jerusalem, were just expiring;—when the nations had been shaken, by the rise of the Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires, and by the fall of the two former;—when the second temple yet stood, but hastened towards ruin;—when the family of David remained distinct in genealogy, but was extremely debased;—when both Jews and Gentiles generally expected the unparalleled birth of a glorious Redeemer;—and when an uncommon peace, of about twelve years continuance, extended over most, if not all the world;—the eternal Son of God, without any change in his divine nature or person, assumed a real manhood; in respect of which he became the Son of Eve, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, Jesse, David, and Mary the virgin; and was born at Bethlehem. Endowed in this manhood with an incomparable fulness of gifts and grace, and peculiarly supported in his work, his perfection in knowledge, in wisdom, holiness, meekness, and zeal, was amazing; Gen. xlix. 10; Ezek. xxi. 27; Mic. v. 3, 5; Dan. ix. 24; Hag. ii. 6—9, 21—23; Mal. iii. 1; Num. xxiv. 17; Isa. vii. 14; ix. 6; xxviii. 16; xl. 3, 5, 9, 10; xlviii. 17; xlix. 26; and xlv. 17—25; Jer. xxiii. 5, 6; and xxxiii. 15, 16; Hos. i. 7; Psa. xlv. 6; and xcvii. 7; Heb. i. 6; Prov. viii. 22, 23, 30; Psa. ii. 7; Zech. xiii. 7; Exod. xxxiii. 21.—Gen. iii. 15; xii. 3; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14; and xlix. 10; Deut. xviii. 18; Jer. xxx. 21; Isa. xi. 1, 10; Luke i. 69; 2 Sam. vii. 12, 14; Psa. lxxii. 1; and lxxxix. 3, 20; Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24, 29; xxxvii. 24, 25; and xvii. 22; Isa. liii. 2; iv. 2; and vii. 14; Zech. iii. 8; Dan. ii. 34, 35; Jer. xxxi. 22; Mic. v. 2; Luke i. 32, 35; with Mat. i. Having, as our surety, engaged to pay the debt which we owed to the law and justice of God, he, in the character of our High Priest offering himself in sacrifice to his Father, appeared in the likeness of sinful flesh, the manner of his birth being extremely debased. Hatred, contempt, reproach, poverty, and trouble, were his inseparable attendants in life. In his infancy Herod attempted to murder him.—During his public ministry he wandered about without any fixed abode. While Satan repeatedly tempted him to the vilest of crimes, Jews, Samaritans, and others, affronted and abused him.—In ratifying the new covenant, and abolishing the ancient ceremonies by his death, his sorrows were quite inexpressible. While Judas, instigated by Satan, betrayed him, and Peter thrice denied him, the other disciples forsook him. Notwithstanding his manifest innocence, Jews and Gentiles of all ranks concurred to persecute and murder him. He was spit upon, buffeted, scourged, condemned, and crucified. Not only in the garden, but when his body was distorted on the cross, his Father deserted him, and loaded him with the impressions of his wrath. While nothing but gall and wormwood were allowed to quench his thirst; while the soldiers in sport parted his garments, and the profligate multitude insulted him with scoffs; he, imploring forgiveness to his murderers, and committing his soul to God, expired an atonement for sin. Yet, notwithstanding repeated attempts, not a bone of him was broken. He was interred in the tomb of the rich, but sealed up and watched by the wicked. Upon the third day he conquered death, and rose again to receive his glorious reward. And, after he had sufficiently manifested the reality of his resurrection, and instructed his disciples, he ascended into the sanctuary and holy of holies above, to make continual intercession for us; Jer. xxx. 21; Psal. xl. 6—8; Exod. xxxviii. xxix. In his debasement and glory he was, and is, equally the Saviour, Shepherd, Prophet, and Teacher, of his church, whether Jews or Gentiles; feeding them, particularly the poor, by his truths, ordinances, influences, and blessings. His personal ministrations were chiefly confined to Judea, especially in the courts of the temple at Jerusalem, where multitudes attended; and in the regions of Galilee, where the grossest ignorance had long prevailed. He confirmed his precious, seasonable, practical, and sanctifying, doctrines by miracles unnumbered, and which emblematically represented his spiritual work in the redemption of men. He feasted thousands on a few loaves, without diminishing the food. He healed the most incurable diseases; made the blind to see, the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, the dead to live, the devils to leave the possessed, the storms to become calm, the trees to wither, the fishes to assemble into nets, or even to bring the money which he needed. And yet his ministrations had but inconsiderable success in the conversion of sinners; Gen. xlix. 10, 18; Psalm xiv. 7; liii. 7; and xcviii. 2, 3; Isa. xix. 20; xlii. 7; xlv. 17. 22; xlvii. 13; xlviii. 17; xlix. 6, 7, 25, 26; lix. 20; and lxxii. 1—5; Jer. xxiii. 6; and xxxiii. 16; Hos. i. 7; Zeph. iii. 17; Zech. ix. 9, 11; Mat. i. 21; Luke i. 31, 47.—Psalm xxiii. 1—3; Isa. xl. 11; xlix. 9, 10; and xli. 17, 18; Ezek. xxxiv. 11—16, 22—29; and xxxvii. 23—27; Mic. v. 4, 5; Zech. xiii. 7; and xi. 7, 11.—Hag. ii. 7, 9; Mal. iii. 1—3; Isa. xli. 27; ix. 1, 2; lii. 7, 15; and xl. 3; Deut. xviii. 15—19; Gen. xlix. 10; Psalm xxii. 22; and xl. 9, 10; Prov. i. 20—24; viii. and ix. 1—12; Job xxxiii. 23; Isa. xi. 9; xlii. 1, 3, 6, 7; xlix. 6; l. 4; xlviii. 17; liv. 13; lv. 3—11; and lix. 19, 20; Luke i. 79; and ii. 32.—Mal. iv. 2; Isa. xxxix. 18, 19; xxxv. 5, 6; and xli. 17; Ezek. xxxiv. 16; Isa. xxv. 8; Hos. xiii. 14; Mat. iv—xxv. Amidst his lowest debasement he discovered his Royal Headship over his church. He taught in his own name. He appointed twelve, and afterwards seventy more, of his disciples to act as his deputies, heralds, and ambassadors, in the work of the gospel. He, at least twice, expelled the merchants from the courts of the temple. He instituted baptism and his own supper for seals of his covenant. Being raised from the dead, he more abundantly exercised his kingly office in appointing extraordinary and ordinary officers in the church, and in qualifying them with the Holy Ghost. He issued forth his oracles, and appointed his gospel ordinances. For almost two thousand years after the call of Abraham, and especially after the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, very few Gentile sinners had been converted, or even called to fellowship with God. But the promised Shiloh had scarcely appeared in the likeness of sinful flesh when wise men from the East, two centuries, the Syro-phenician woman, and the Samaritans and Greeks, received him by faith. He had scarcely ascended to heaven when he poured down the Holy Ghost in a wonderful manner. Qualified by his influences, the apostles and others, beginning at Jerusalem, preached with amazing success, and confirmed their doctrine by miracles. Within about forty years, Arabia, Egypt, Ethiopia, and Cyrene, on the south and west; Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Assyria, Armenia, and Persia, on the east; Phenicia, Syria, Lesser Asia, Pontus, Thrace, Greece, Illyricum, *Italy if not also France, Spain, and Britain, on the north and west; had received the gospel; and multitudes had believed on Christ, and formed themselves into regular societies, under the apostles, evangelists, prophets, pastors, teachers, ruling elders, and deacons whom he had appointed; and walked in holy fellowship with God, and among themselves. Wretched ignorance, gross idolatry, vain superstition, savage barbarity, shocking lewdness, and other like abominations, were, by the power of the gospel, obliged to give place to spiritual knowledge, piety, and virtue, in every form; Gen. xlix. 10; Isa. xi. 1, 10; and ii. 2; Mic. iv. 1; Joel ii. 28; Prov. i. 23; Isa. xxxii. 15, 16; and xlv. 3, 4, 5; Mat. 10, 23; and xxviii. 20; John xiv. 17, 18, 26; xv. 26, 27; xvi. 7—14; and xx. 22; Luke xxiv. 49; Acts i. 8; Psalm lxxii. 6; Hos. xiv. 5; Ezek. xxxiv. 26; Psalm lxxv. 9—13; and lxxviii. 9, 10; Isa. lv. 10—13; Joel iii. 18, 21; Zech. xiii. 1; and xiv. 8; Ezek. xlvii. 1—12; Isa. lxi. 3, 11; xxxv. 3, 5, 6, 7; xli. 17—19; xliii. 19; and xii. 3; John vii. 38, 39; Mark xvi. 17, 18; Isa. xxxv. 3, 5, 6; xlii. 18; and xxix. 18; John xiv. 12.—Amos ix. 11; Psa. lxxix. 34—36; xlv. 16; lxxviii. 22—28; and lxxii. 16, 17; Isa. lxi. xxxii. 20; and lx. 20; Mat. xix. 28; and v. 13, 14.—Psalm cxxxii. 16; Ezek. xlv. 17—25.—Gen. iii. 15; xii. 2, 3; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14; and xlix. 10; Deut. xxxii. 36, 43; Psalm ii. 8; xv. 7; xviii. 43; xxii. 27—31; xlv. 3—6, 9—17; xlvii. lxxv. 5; lxxvi. 1—4; lxxvii. lxxviii. 22—35; lxxix. 33—36; lxxxi. lxxxvii. lxxxix. 2, 3, 4, 18—29; xcii. xcvi—c. cx. cxxxii. 13—18; and cxlix. During this period the Christians, and especially their teachers, were hated and persecuted by the Jews and the heathen mob. But, till their religion had spread and taken deep root among the Gentiles, they experienced no imperial persecution. God even made the junction of so many nations into one Roman empire, which Satan had erected as his impregnable bulwark against the approaching Messiah, a mean of its more easy spread. The destruction and dispersion of the Jewish nation, which soon after took place, were also calculated to wean men from the typical ceremonies, and to make them examine the character and religion of Jesus, who had so circumstantially predicted these events. From A. D. 66 to 312, the church was repeatedly under general persecutions, appointed by the Roman emperors: particularly under Nero, about 66; Domitian, 96; Trajan, 107; Adrian, 120; Aurelius, 160; Severus, 202; Maximin, 235; Decius, 250; Valerian, 257; Aurelian, 272; and Dioclesian, 303. These persecutions were very useful to prevent the church's swarming with errors, or the propagators of them; for many, particularly the Gnosticks, fond of mingling the heathen philosophy with the gospel of Christ, formed abominable tenets, in opposition to his person and grace. The monstrous Nero led the way in imperial persecution. Having, for his revenge or his diversion, burnt part of Rome his capital, he charged it to the Christians' account.—Multitudes of them were burnt in heaps in his gardens, for his nocturnal recreation; and in many corners of his vast empire, they were inhumanly exposed to wild beasts, or otherwise tortured and slain. For about 250 years after scarcely a disaster, by sword, famine, or pestilence came upon the Roman subjects, but the heathens, and especially their priests, pretended that the toleration of the Christians in their peculiar religion had provoked the gods to inflict it, and begged to have them utterly extirpated. The persecutions above mentioned were all of them remarkably distressing. Those of Aurelius and Severus were extremely ruinous.—Those under Maximin, Decius, and Valerian, were still more furious and cruel.—Millions of Christians were murdered without, or by form of, law. Multitudes were, for the public diversions, torn to pieces by lions, tigers, and other ravenous beasts, in the theatres. And the last, between A. D. 302 and 312, was still more terrible and bloody. Almost in every place of the Roman empire, Christians, and especially their preachers, were scourged to death; had their flesh pulled off them by pincers, or mangled with broken pots; or they were torn asunder by beasts, or between trees; or were roasted between gentle fires; or, by holes made in their flesh, had melted lead poured into their bowels. In Egypt alone, 144,000 are said to have been cut off by violent deaths, and 700,000 more banished. Their churches were every where demolished; and their books, especially the scriptures, sought out and burnt.

Scarcely any, whether the Jewish nation or particular persons, as Herod, Domitian, &c. who had persecuted the Christians, long escaped the vengeance of God.—Terrible ravages, by the Goths, Persians, and others, had often punished the Roman empire. But never was the vengeance of heaven so manifest as in the case of Dioclesian and his assistants. He, and Heraclius his partner, had scarcely begun their barbarous work when Galerius, their instigator, caused them to resign their authority and retire to a private life. After living some years in great anxiety, it is said that Dioclesian poisoned himself. After several efforts to resume his imperial authority, Heraclius had his neck broken for attempting to murder Constantine his son-in-law. Maxentius and his army, of about 200,000, were most of them slain by the enemy or drowned in the Tiber, where they had laid snares for Constantine. Galerius died of a most tormenting and loathsome distemper, begging the prayers of the Christians as a mean of his relief. Constantine, son to Constantius, the only Cæsar who had not joined in the persecutions, being called from Britain, was made emperor by his troops. He proclaimed a toleration of the Christian religion in the whole Roman empire; but Maximin, his colleague in the east, quickly revoked it, and attacked Constantine's forces, which were commanded by Licinus his brother-in-law. But, being shamefully routed, he in a fury murdered multitudes of the heathen priests, who had instigated him to the war. When he was ready to give a second battle to Licinus he was struck with blindness and terrible torments, in both body and mind. In rage and despair he poisoned himself, confessing that he was plagued by Jesus Christ for his persecution of the Christians. Licinus, who was now deputy emperor in the east, for a time pretended to favour the Christians; but, instigated by the heathen priests, he at last commenced a furious persecutor. In three great battles, in the last of which about 100,000 were slain, and himself taken prisoner, Constantine reduced him; after which he was put to death; Gen. iii. 15; Dan. xi. 30—35; Rev. vi. 3—12; John xv. 20; xvi. 2, 33; and xxi. 18, 19; Acts xiv. 22; 2 Tim. ii. 11; and iii. 12; Mat. xvi. 24; x. 17—22; 34—39; xxii. 6; and xxiv. 9, 10, 18; Luke xii. 49—53; and xxi. 12—17; Rev. ii. 10; and iii. 10.—1 Cor. xi. 19; 2 Pet. ii. 1—3; Mat. xxiv. 5, 11, 24; Acts xx. 29, 30; 1 Tim. iv. 1—3; 2 Tim. iii. 1—6, 13; and iv. 3, 4.—Gen. iii. 15; Rev. vi. 12—17; and xii. 2—4, 7; Deut. xxxii. 36—43; Ps. ii. 1—6, 9, 12; xxi. 8—12; lxxviii. 14, 21, 23, 30; xciii. xvi—xcix; cx. 5, 6; lxxxix. 23; xviii. 37—42; xxxv. 5, 6, 26; and cxxxii. 18; Is. viii. 9, 10; ix. 4; xlii. 13, 14; xlix. 24—26; li. 22, 23; liv. 15, 17; xli. 11; xlv. 24; lxiii. 1—6; and lxvi. 15, 16; Rev. i. 7.

From A. D. 320 to 606 all the emperors, except Julian, professed themselves Christians. Constantine and Theodosius in the 4th, and Justin I. and Justinian in the beginning of the 6th, centuries of the Christian æra, distinguished themselves by their care for the church. Constantine first of all made the Christian the established religion of the empire. He admitted few but Christians to places of power or trust; and, while he erected churches and schools, and appointed salaries for their teachers, he warmly inculcated, and carefully exemplified, the due observation of the Lord's day. At first he tried soft methods for converting the heathens; but finding them obstinate, he began to pull down their temples, break in pieces their idols, and banish, or even put to death, their enraged priests. By the free preaching of the gospel, and by the spread thereof among the Indians, Persians, and those on the east of the Euxine sea, many were turned to the Lord. But Constantine's excessive kindness to the doctors of the Christian church, and to their new converts, tempted them to ambition and dissimulation. Many, awed by his authority or example, or attracted by the favours they expected, professed themselves Christians, who had neither knowledge of, nor due regard to, Jesus or his truths. By his assumption of a kind of headship over the church, at least in some instances, the clergy were encouraged to model her government according to the form of that establishment in the empire. The favours of Theodosius, Justin, and Justinian, were perverted to much the same purpose. While the inundations of the ravaging Goths, Huns, &c. were almost ruining both church and state, the Donatists in Africa, who separated from their fellow Christians as not sufficiently pure in their practice; the Arians and half Arians, through most of the empire, who denied our Saviour's proper dignity; the Pelagians, who denied the necessity of his righteousness for our justification, and of his Spirit's influence to regenerate the heart; the Nestorians, who were thought to hold a two-fold person in Christ; and the Eutychians, who allowed him but one compounded nature; and other corrupters of the truth; were fearful plagues to the church, by their soul-ruining errors, and by the furious contentions, rival councils, and even persecutions and massacres, which they produced. The Arians, who in the fourth century held about thirty-two councils, and had often persecuting kings or emperors to abet them, were peculiarly hurtful, and had once forced most of the clergy to their side. But the doctrines of Pelagius, especially when a little refined, gradually and more insensibly infected most of the Christian church, both ministers and people.

By such means the church became a motley mass of practical heathens, mingled with a few real and circumspect Christians. The great zeal of the fashionable clergy was to render her, in her offices superior and subordinate, similar to the imperial state; and, for the gratification of their carnal proselytes, to borrow whatever they could from the Jewish or heathen superstition. Even in the fourth century lordly bishops, metropolitans, archdeacons, subdeacons, exorcists, and canonical singers, were introduced. Candles were lighted by day in the churches. Incense was burnt while prayers were offered or sacraments administered. On the stated fasts some particular meats were forborne. Abstinence from marriage was esteemed a high degree of sanctity, especially among the clergy. Prayers were directed to saints departed. Pretended reliques were held in great veneration, Images of saints, and of Jesus Christ, were placed in churches, and sometimes were worshipped. The clergy began to officiate in canonical robes, which they held to be sacred. Prayers were made for the dead, and even sometimes for mitigation of torments to the damned. Baptism was held of absolute necessity to salvation; and hence was administered to the dead, or by lay persons. Pilgrimages to our Saviour's sepulchre, and a monkish retirement from fellowship with mankind, were reckoned a transcendent devotion. By the end of the sixth century the doctrines of the church were deeply infected with Pelagianism. The discipline had been long remiss, corrupt, or partial, chiefly in favour of the liberal or the great; and the principal concern of the leading clergy was who should be greatest. The notion of a purgatory or middle state, multitudes of sacred festivals and litanies, in honour of angels, the virgin Mary, and martyrs; and consecrations of churches; were introduced. Every thing supposed to have had connection with martyrs was held in veneration. But not contented with all these human or rather devilish inventions in the worship of God, Gregory the Great, a sainted and famous bishop of Rome, added his new canons of the mass; his canticles and antiphones; and his almost innumerable ordinances concerning stations, litanies, processions, lent, oblations for the dead, pontifical robes, consecrations, and reliques; Mat. xxiv. 5, 11, 24; Acts xx. 29, 30; 1 Cor. xi. 19; 1 Tim. iv. 1—3; 2 Tim. iii. 1—6, 13; and iv. 3, 4; 2 Pet. ii. 1—3; Rev. vii. viii. and xii. 8—17.

In the beginning of the seventh century two principal enemies to Jesus Christ formally appeared on the earth; the Mahometan delusion in the East, which has ever since extirpated or oppressed the Christian religion in a great part of the world; and the long predicted Antichrist in the West. The imperial seat had been long before removed to Constantinople. The Western empire had been abolished, and ten motley kingdoms formed out of its ruins. Every shadow of Rome's ancient forms of government, by kings, consuls, decemvirs, tribunes, dictators, emperors, heathen or Christian, was gone; and Rome itself, in A. D. 566, subjected to the exarch of Ravenna. These things had given the bishops of Rome an opportunity to extend their ambitious views. The clerical form of church government still wanted an imperial LORD OVER ALL, instead of Jesus Christ; and, by promoting divisions, by encouraging appeals to themselves from the eastern and other bishops, by pretending deeds of councils in their own favour, and by unwearied struggles with the bishops of Constantinople, the Roman bishops had long and earnestly contended for the supremacy. About A. D. 606, or 608, Phocas, an absolute monster of treachery, cruelty, and every thing horrid, had, by the inhuman murder of his worthy master Mauritius and family, become the emperor of the East. It seems the bishop of Constantinople disdained the friendship of this infernal wretch. But Boniface III. of Rome, by his fulsome flatteries, obtained his imperial appointment to be the UNIVERSAL BISHOP of the Christian church.—Deputies were immediately dispatched throughout the Western churches, to introduce the new Gregorian superstition, and to procure a formal submission to the Roman pope. The missionaries being extremely ignorant of every thing important, or at least incapable of officiating in the language of the places to which they were sent, it is said Pope Vitalian, about A. D. 666, appointed their public worship to be every where performed in the now long-disused Latin tongue. This at once concealed the ignorance of his missionaries, and became a standing badge of the church's subjection to Rome. Just five prophetic months, or 150 years, after the pope had obtained his spiritual supremacy, and 666 years after John had received his revelations in Patmos, Pope Stephen III. assisted by Pepin king of France, who by the help of a former Pope had treacherously usurped his master's throne, rendered himself a CIVIL LORD of the states of Rome, Ravenna, and Pentapolis; in consequence of which his cardinals, or privy counsellors, dressed themselves in purple and scarlet. Several of the succeeding popes claimed an absolute power to dispose of, not only the Christian kingdoms and empires, but even of what belonged to heathens, every where in the world. By deceiving or terrifying princes with their excommunications and interdicts, by decoying or forcing them to the holy war in Canaan, and by raising up traitors against them, they caused them to submit to their slavery. The ten kingdoms, which had been formed out of the ruins of the Western empire, all submitted to the idolatry, superstition, and clerical tyranny, of Rome. The haughty pontiffs even pretended to command the angels, whether good or bad, to do what they pleased; nay, they claimed an authority over JEHOVAH himself;—in empowering their priests to create or divide the glorified body of his Son at their pleasure;—in adding to his standard of faith and practice apocryphal tracts, human traditions, and decrees of popes or their councils;—in founding the authority of his oracles on the will of their church, and, contrary to his express command, debarring all but their clergy from the free perusal of them;—in altering, reversing, or confirming, his laws as they pleased;—in making multitudes of persons and things his partners in worship, and in protection of the world;—in appointing multitudes of holidays, in opposition to his law;—and by pardoning men's sin or indulging them in it, and cancelling the obligations of oaths, &c. Most dreadful were the scenes of wickedness against God and man which prevailed in the whole Antichristian body, but especially among their clergy. These, regular and secular, multiplied like locusts, till, by their delusions and oppressive exactions, they every where destroyed the souls of the people, enslaved their bodies, and ruined their estates.—Under the different denominations of Augustinians, Benedictines, Franciscans, Dominicans, Carmelites, Jesuits, &c. huge armies of monks zealously supported the Romish bishop and his abominations. In the Benedictine order alone, before the Reformation, it is said there had been above 15,000 monasteries, 24 popes, 200 cardinals, 1600 archbishops, 4000 bishops, 15,700 abbots, who had been authors, and 156,000 deified saints.—While the pope and his clergy wallowed in every fleshly abomination, and every where spread the most pernicious errors, gross idolatry and superstition; by pretences to uncommon sanctity, and by magical wonders and pretended visions, they made their ignorant votaries believe what they pleased. By inhumanly excluding from trade, or even from their habitations, such as dissented from them; and by murderous inquisitions, massacres, and wars, in which millions of Waldenses and Protestants were slain; they terrified others into a blind submission; Dan. vii. 8, 20—25; and xi. 36—39; 2 Thes. ii. 3—12; 1 Tim. iv. 1—3; 2 Tim. iii. 1—7, 13; and iv. 3, 4; Rev. ix. 1—11; xi. 2; xiii. xvii. 1—14, 17, 18; and xviii. 12, 13.

Notwithstanding the diabolical fraud and barbarous rage of these Antichristian locusts and their abettors, Jesus Christ has always qualified and encouraged a proper number to bear witness for his injured doctrines and laws against the contrary abominations. Among whom may be reckoned the council of Charles the Great of France at Frankfurt, in the eighth century: Claude bishop of Turin, and his followers, in Piedmont, in the ninth and tenth: the WALDENSES, in the south of France, in the twelfth and subsequent centuries; who, by war and persecution, were scattered into Germany, Italy, and Britain; and of whom Wickliff and his followers in England, in the fourteenth century, and Huss and his followers in Germany, in the fifteenth, were the genuine offspring. Notwithstanding their faithful contendings, and notwithstanding dreadful judgments inflicted by Saracens, Turks, &c. the anti-christians still prevailed. The oracles of God were almost wholly unknown. Many of the bishops had never perused, and perhaps never seen, them. Doctrines were tried by false miracles and lying wonders, not by the word of God. Many of the leading truths of the gospel were buried in oblivion, and the contrary errors established and believed. Even the remains of truth were rendered almost unintelligible, by scholastic terms and arguments. Religion lay buried under wicked and senseless traditions and papal decrees. Worship was drowned in depths of heathenish, Jewish, or magical superstitions. Devotion chiefly consisted in adoring the sacramental bread, the Virgin Mary, saints, angels, images, and reliques. Pardons of sin, or indulgences therein; admissions to ecclesiastical offices, or even to celestial thrones; were sold for money; and none but the poor, who could pay nothing, were consigned to eternal damnation. In ignorance many of the clergy were similar to brutes; but in pride, avarice, oppression, lewdness, blasphemy, and every thing abominable, they were complete infernals. Meanwhile God,—by making the holy war a means of introducing knowledge from the east,—by forcing the learned Greeks into the papal dominions,—through the capture of Constantinople by the Turks,—and by causing the contentions between rival popes, and the struggles of the councils of Basil and Pisa, to sink the credit of the pontiffs among their votaries,—prepared the way for the Protestant reformation.

In A. D. 1517 Zuinglius in Switzerland, and Luther in Germany, shocked with the blasphemous manner in which the papal pardons of, and indulgences in, sin were exposed to sale, openly declared their detestation of them. By a diligent search of the scriptures, in defence of their conduct, their views of divine truth were exceedingly enlarged; and what they apprehended themselves they boldly preached to others, and warned them of their danger in a continued adherence to Rome. Wearied of the tyranny, and detesting the monstrous wickedness, of the Romish clergy, multitudes embraced their doctrines, and attempted to search the scriptures for themselves: for which purpose the learned reformers supplied them every where with translations in their mother tongue. Notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the popish rulers in both church and state, by pretended miracles and apparitions; by perfidy and flattery; by prohibitions of Protestant books; by wars, persecutions, and massacres;—and notwithstanding the lukewarmness, scandals, contentions, and even enthusiastic madness and horrible blasphemy, which took place among too many of the nominal Protestants;—the true scriptural religion was, in less than fifty years, not only preached with remarkable success, but formally established by the civil authority, in a great part of Germany—in Sweden—in Denmark—in Holland and half of Switzerland—and in Britain; and was, by public edicts, allowed in France, Poland, Hungary, and Transylvania. Since that period the Protestant religion has been almost entirely rooted out of Hungary, Austria, Bohemia, France, Palatinate on the Rhine, &c. and the papists have greatly increased in several of the Protestant dominions. Perhaps the number of Protestants in Europe may have decreased 15,000,000 from what it was about 200 or 180 years ago. On several occasions, as in Germany 1418 and 1550, and in Britain 1558 and 1688, the opposers of Antichrist have been remarkably delivered, after they had for three years and an half appeared on the very brink of destruction. But the great slaughter of Christ's witnesses, by the apostatizing of Protestants to the essentials of Popery, and by the persecution of such as shall continue faithful, and their glorious resurrection, we suppose, are still future; Rev. xi. 2—10; xiv. 1—23; and xvii. 14—17.

Partial effusions of the vials of God's wrath upon the Anti-christians have also taken place. The Saracens not only murdered their eastern brethren in error, idolatry, and superstition; but, about A. D. 713, conquered Spain, and afterwards ravaged France and a part of Italy; seized upon Sicily and Naples; and thought it highly meritorious to harass and murder the Romish idolaters. From A. D. 830 to 980 the contentions between the descendants of Charles the Great, and the invasions of the Hungarians, deluged Germany, France, and Italy, with torrents of human blood. From A. D. 1090 to 1290 millions perished in the pretended holy war with the infidel Saracens and Seljukian Turks for the recovery of Canaan.—Scarcely a kingdom in Europe but was disordered in its constitution, drained of men, and beggared of wealth, by these mad attempts; which the popes promoted with all their fury and craft, that they might have an opportunity to extend their power in Europe, while the princes of the respective nations warred in the East.—From A. D. 1200 to 1370 the furious wars between the papal and imperial factions, commonly called *GUELF*s and *GIBEL*ins, rendered Germany and Italy a comparative desert. Between A. D. 1370 and 1447, or later, the frequent contentions of rival popes, and the brave resistance of the faithful Bohemians involved the Antichristian dominions in terrible misery and bloodshed. Between A. D. 1486 and 1534 a sweating sickness and other pestilential disorders, cut off multitudes in England, Germany, and France. Between 1370 and 1698 the Ottoman Turks made the most shocking havoc among the Papists who inhabited Hungary, Poland, Dalmatia, the Mediterranean isles, and even part of Italy and Germany. But none of these plagues in the least reformed the pope or his votaries. When, between A. D. 1517 and 1570, about the half of his subjects revolted, and embraced the Protestant religion, shame obliged their neighbours to drop several of their papal customs, that were absolutely stupid or horribly wicked; but the whole substance of their errors and corruptions, a little varnished, was judicially established by the council of Trent, which was concluded A. D. 1563. But at the end of 1260 years from the birth of the pontiff's ecclesiastic or civil supremacy, i. e. about A. D. 1866 or 216, we expect still more tremendous vials of divine wrath to be poured out upon the Antichristian state, which for about thirty years, shall render their persons and countries miserable; and, together with the pure preaching of the gospel, shall abolish their pretended religion at the very same time that the delusions of Mahomet shall be banished from the east. The princes who had long supported the papal interest, and their subjects, enlightened by the gospel, shall, with an active zeal, detest its wickedness and accelerate its ruin; Dan. vii. 11, 26; xi. 40—45; and xii. 1, 10—12; Zeph. iii. 8; Joel iii. 12—14; 2 Thes. ii. 8; 2 Tim. iii. 9; Rev. ix. xi. 13, 18, 19; xiii. 10; xiv. 4—20; xv. 7, 8; xvi. xvii. 14—17; xviii. and xix. 2, 11—21; Deut. xxxii. 36—43.

The Antichristian and Mahometan delusions being extirpated from the face of the earth, the gospel will, we expect, with amazing rapidity and success, spread through the whole habitable world. Both Jews and Gentiles shall heartily embrace it, and turn to the Lord with one consent, and unite in his body the church. Then shall her doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, be restored to the apostolic plan, and exactly correspond with the measuring line and reed of God's word.—Astonishing shall be the abilities, labours, and success, of her pastors and other officers; and amazing the knowledge, holiness, zeal, order, unanimity, and peace of her members. Such shall be their multitude and quality, as if all the ancient martyrs had risen from their graves to enjoy the most glorious fellowship, with Christ. So general shall be the reformation of mankind, that perhaps few will remain apparently wicked: and long, perhaps a thousand years, shall this happy period continue; Gen. iii. 15; xii. 2, 3; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14; and xlix. 10; Deut. xxxii. 36, 43; Ps. ii. 8; xiv. 7; xviii. 43; xxii. 27—31; xlv. 3—6, 9—17; 2, 3, 18—29; xciii. xcvi.—c. cx. cxxxii. 13—18; and cxlix; Isa. i. 25—28; ii. 2—5, 17—21; iv. 2—6; ix. 8; xi. xii. xviii. 7; xix. 18—25; xxiv. 23; xxv. xxvi. xxvii. 1—6, 12, 13; xxix. 18—24; xxx. 18—26, 29; xxxii. 1—4, 15—20; xxxiv. xli. 10—20; xlii. 1—16; xlv. 2—5; xlv. 22—25; xlix. 6—26; lii. 15; liii. 10—12; liv. lvi. 8; lvii. 14—19; lix. 16—21; lx—lxii. lxiii. 1—5; lxv. 16—25; and lxvi. 8—14, 18—24; Jer. xxxi. xxxiii; Ezek. xvii. 22—24; xxxiv. 11—31; and xxxvi.—xlvi. Dan. ii. 35, 44; vii. 14, 22, 27; and ii. 12; Hos. i. 10, 11; ii. 14—23; iii. 5; vi. 2; and xiv; Joel ii. 28—32; and iii. 16—21; Amos ix. 11—15; Mic. iv. v; and vii. 14—20; Zeph. iii. 9—20; Hag. ii. 6—9; Zech. ii. 10—13; viii. 20—23; and xiv. 8—11, 20, 21; Mal. iv. 2; Rom. xi. 12, 15, 25—32; Rev. vii. xi. 11—19; xv. 2—4; xix. 1—9; xx. 1—5; xxi. and xxii. 1—6.

At the end of this blessed period, perhaps about A. D. 2860 or 3000, Satan will be again loosed from his long restraint; and, after corrupting the members of the church, will assemble the Turks, Russians, or others of a like savage temper, to destroy her: but the fearful vengeance of God shall overtake them in their attempts.—Then cometh the end of the world, at what distance we know not; when Jesus, who had all along from the creation managed whatever pertained to his church, whether in heaven or earth, shall appear with power and great glory, attended with all his holy angels, to judge the world; especially with respect to their behaviour towards him and his people. The unnumbered millions of mankind, now raised from their graves, shall attend at his bar for trial, and to receive their final sentence of everlasting happiness or misery. The saints being caught up to the right hand of Jesus Christ in the air, shall be openly acknowledged, acquitted, and adjudged to happiness. Devils, and their wicked seed among mankind, while their sins are publicly exposed, shall be condemned, and immediately driven to everlasting misery in hell. Then shall Jesus in solemn manner conduct his ransomed saints into the everlasting happiness of heaven, and present them before his Father faultless, with exceeding joy.—Then, to mark the emptiness of the carnalists' portion; to give them a terrible exclusion from it; and to purge this lower world from every effect of the curse; and that it may, for the eternal advantage of the saints and honour of God, be fashioned anew; it shall be wholly burnt; Luke xviii. 8; and xvii. 24—37; Matt. xxiv. 36—41; Mark xiii. 24—27; Rev. xx. 7—15; Gen. iii. 15; Deut. xxxii. 36—43; Job xix. 25—27; Ps. l. 2—6; xcvi. 11—13; xcvi. 7, 8; and cx. 5, 6; Isa. xxvi. 19; Dan. xii. 2, 3; Eccl. xii. 14; Hos. xiii. 14; Matt. xxii. 11—13, 30, 31; xxiv. 29—31, 42—51; xxv. 6—13, 19—46; and xxvi. 64; John v. 28, 29; and xiv. 3; Acts iii. 21; and xvii. 31; Rom. ii. 16; and xiv. 9—12; 2 Cor. v. 10; 1 Thes. iv. 14—17; Heb. ix. 28; 1 Cor. xv. 20—55; 2 Thess. i. 6—10; 1 Tim. vi. 14, 15; Tit. ii. 13; 2 Tim. iv. 8; 1 Pet. iv. 5; Col. iii. 4; Jude 14, 16; Rev. i. 7; and xxii. 12, 20; Ps. xix. 15, 17; xvi. 10, 11; and xxxi. 19; 1 Cor. xiii. 12; Isa. xxxv. 10; li. 11; and lx. 19, 20; Rev. xxi. xxii. 1—5; and vii. 9—17; 2 Pet. iii. 10—13; Isa. lxi. 17, 18; and lxvi. 22.

CHAPTER V.

A Chronological HARMONY of the Scripture Histories, and of the Fulfilment of its Predictions.

	FROM eternity	JEHOVAH himself alone subsisted in three persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; Gen. xxi. 33; Deut. xxxiii. 27; Ps. xc. 2; Is. xlv. 6; Hab. i. 12; 1 John v. 7; 2 Cor. xiii. 14; Matt. xxviii. 19; and iii. 16, 17, &c.
	God decreed	whatever comes to pass; Acts xv. 18; Is. xlv. 10; Eph. i. 11; 2 Tim. i. 9, &c. He made the covenant of grace with his Son as the Mediator and Representative of his elect; Ps. xl. 6—8; and lxxxix. 3, 4; Is. liii. 10; Jer. xxx. 21; Zech. vi. 13.
14004	Before Christ	God created all things; covenanted with mankind; Adam fell into sin, and his posterity in him; God published salvation by Christ, but denounced troubles and sorrows in this life; Gen. i—iii.: Exod. xx. 11; Eccl. vii. 29; Rom. v. 12—21; 1 Cor. xv. 22.
14003		Cain, and not long after Abel, is born, perhaps with twin-sisters.—Some years after Cain becomes a husbandman, Abel a shepherd; Gen. iv.
1293875		Cain and Abel offer sacrifice. Cain murders Abel, and is punished; but his family increases; Gen. iv. Heb. xi. 4; 1 John iii. 12; Jude. Next year Seth is born.
2353769		Enosh is born. Public Societies for God's worship are introduced, to distinguish the Sethites from the offspring of Cain: Gen. v. 6; and iv. 26.
9873017		After predicting the last judgment, pious Enoch is translated to heaven without tasting of death: Gen. v. 23. 24; Heb. xi. 5; Jude 14, 15.
10562468		Noah, the famous preacher and patriarch, is born, to the great joy of Lamech his father; Gen. v. 28; Ezek. xiv. 14, 20.
15362468		The Sethites marrying with the Cainites, men become abominably wicked. Noah warns them of the flood, and begins to build his ark; Gen. vi. Heb. xi. 7; 1 Pet. iii. 20; 2 Pet. ii. 5.
16562348		Methuselah, son of Enoch, dies. The world, with perhaps double of its present inhabitants, is drowned by a flood. Noah, his family, and some animals, are preserved in the ark; Gen. v. 27; and vii. Luke xvii. 26, 27; Matt. xxiv. 37—39; Job xxii. 16; 1 Pet. iii. 19, 20, 2 Pet. ii. 5; and iii. 6.
16572347		The flood ceases: the ark settles in Armenia: Noah, his sons, and the animals, come forth of the ark. Noah offers sacrifices of thanksgiving. God covenants with him; allows him to eat flesh; forbids murder; gives him the rainbow, as a token that the earth should never more be drowned. Not long after Noah plants a vineyard; is drunk; and foretels the fate of his seed; Gen. viii. ix. Is. liv. 8—10.
17602244		Men, being generally reconverted, build the tower of BABEL. God confounds their language, and disperses them. Nimrod founds a kingdom in Chaldea, Ashur another in Assyria, and Misraim a third in Egypt; Gen. x. xi. xii.
20081996		Two years after the death of Noah Abraham is born, in the 130th year of Terah. Sarai or Iscah, his brother Haran's daughter, is born ten years after; Gen. xi. 26—32; xvii. 17; and xx. 12.
20791925		Chedorlaomer, king of Elam, subdues the kingdoms of Sodom, Gomorrah, &c. Gen. xiv. 1—3.
20831921		Terah dying after they had dwelt five years in Haran, Abraham, directed by God, and encouraged by a promise of Christ, and a numerous seed, enters Canaan. The land is promised to his seed. A famine forces him into Egypt. From hence the 430 years of the Hebrew sojourning are reckoned by some; Gen. xii. Josh. xxiv. 2, 3; Neh. ix. 7, 8; Psal. cv. 9—15; Exod. xii. 40, 41; Acts vii. 2—5; Gal. iii. 17; Heb. xi. 8.
		Returning to Canaan, Lot retires to Sodom. God renews his covenant with Abraham. He removed southward to Hebron, and built an altar for the worship of God; Gen. xiii.
20911913		After twelve years servitude the kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar, revolted; Chedorlaomer and his allies ravage their country, defeat their troops, take Lot and others captive. Abraham defeats the conquerors, rescues the prisoners, recovers the spoil, and is blessed by Melchizedek. God promises him a numerous seed, and Canaan for their inheritance; Gen. ix. 25; and xiv. xv. Heb. vii. 1—11; Acts vii. 6, 7; Gal. iii. 17; Ps. cv. 9—15; Neh. ix. 7, 8.
20931911		Despairing of the promised seed by herself, Sarah gives Hagar to Abraham for a concubine, that she might bear it. After Hagar had fled from the family, and returned, she bears Ishmael; Gen. xvi. and xxv. 12—18; Gal. iv. 22—31.
21061898		God constitutes Abram, and his seed by Isaac, his peculiar people; appoints circumcision as the seal of this covenant; changes Abram's and Sarai's names. Soon after he and two angels visit Abraham and Sarah, renew the promise of Isaac's birth; Abraham intercedes for the preservation of Sodom, &c.; the two angels warn Lot and his family to remove; Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, are destroyed by fire and brimstone; Lot's wife is turned into a pillar of salt; the Dead sea is formed out of this country. Not long after Lot, made drunk by his two daughters, commits incest with them, and hence the Moabites and Ammonites proceeded; Gen. xvii—xix. Isa. xiii. 19; and i. 9, 10; Ezek. xvi. 46—50; Zeph. ii. 9; 2 Pet. ii. 6—8; Jude 7; Amos iv. 11.

Y. of world	Before Christ		Y. of world	Before Christ
2108	1896	Sarah bears Isaac. About three or four years after Ishmael mocks him; and he and Hagar are in consequence expelled from the family; Gen. xxi. Acts vii. 8; Rom. ix. 9; Heb. xi. 11, 12; Gal. iv. 22—31.			condemned to wander and die in the wilderness. Korah and his companions rebel, and are fearfully destroyed. The priesthood is confirmed to Aaron and his family by the budding of his rod; and some laws, relative to oblations and purifications are given; Num. v. vi. x. —xix. and xxxiii. 15—20; Deut. i. 19—46; ix. 22, 23; and xi. 5, 6; Psal. lxxviii. 30—40; and cvi. 17, 18, 24—27.
2144	1860	To try Abraham's faith and obedience, God commands him to offer Isaac in sacrifice. Abraham readily obeys; Isaac's death is prevented, and Abraham and his family greatly blessed; Gen. xxii. Heb. xi. 17—19; James ii. 21.—Soon after, Sarah dies; and is buried at Machpelah; Gen. xxiii. and xlix. 30—32.	2552	1452	After wandering thirty-seven years in the Arabian desert, the Israelites come back to Kadeshbarnea. They murmur for want of water: Moses smites a rock to provide them with it. He and Aaron offend God.—The Edomites refuse the Israelites a passage. Aaron dies. The Israelites murmur at the manna, and are plagued by fiery serpents, but healed by the sight of a brazen one. They conquer the Canaanitish kingdoms of Sihon and Og on the east of Jordan, which are afterwards given to the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites; Num. xxx. 21—47; xxxi. and xxxii. Deut. ii. iii. and x. 6. Ps. cvi. 32, 33; John iii. 14, 15; Josh. xii. 1—6; xiii. 8—32; and xx. 8; Neh. ix. 16—23; Ezek. xx. 17—26.
2148	1856	Isaac, by the direction of Providence, is married to Rebekah the daughter of Bethuel, his Syrian cousin; Gen. xxiv. Shem, the son of Noah, dies ten years after; Gen. xi. 10, 11.	2553	1451	Balaam at Balak's request, repeatedly attempts to curse the Hebrews; but God obliges them to bless them, and denounce destruction upon their enemies. Advised by him, the women of Moab and Midian seduce the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry; which issues in a plague to Israel, and in destruction to Balaam and the Midianites; Num. xxii—xxv. and xxxi. Psal. cvi. 28—31; 2 Pet. ii. 14, 15; Jude 11; Rev. ii. 14; Mic. vi. 4; Deut. xxiii. 3—6; Josh. xxiv. 9, 10; and xiii. 21, 22.—The new generation of Israelites are numbered; the manner of dividing Canaan settled; Joshua appointed to conquer it; its boundaries marked out; and princes nominated to divide it; Gen. xv. 18—21; Num. xxvi. xxvii. xxxiv. Laws of oblations at festivals; of vows; of cities of refuge; and of marriage of heiresses, are instituted; Num. xxviii—xxx. xxxv. xxxvi.
2208	1796	Esau, having sold Jacob his birthright, marries two Canaanites, which grieves his parents; Gen. xxv. 27—34; and xxvi. 34; Heb. xii. 16. Being blessed of God, Isaac greatly prospers, notwithstanding the Philistines' envy; Gen. xxvi.	2560	1444	After spending six years in the conquest of the south and north parts of Canaan, Joshua, in the seventh, divides it by lot to the tribes of Judah and Ephraim, the Manassites, the tribes of Benjamin, Simeon, Issachar, Zebulun, Asher, Naphtali, and Dan; sets up the tabernacle at Shiloh; appoints the cities of refuge, and assigns to the Levites forty-eight cities and their suburbs; dismisses the Reubenites and Gadites to their home on the east of Jordan, who erect an altar of memorial. The year after was the first sabbatical year, from which the years of release and of jubilee were afterwards reckoned; Gen. xv. 18—21; and xlix. Exod. xxiii. 22—31; Deut. viii. xi. and xxii. 8—14; Josh. x—xxii. Neh. ix. 23—26; Ps. xlv. 2, 3; lxxvi. 12; lxxviii. 10—12; lxxviii. 54, 55; viii. 8—11; cv. 42—45; xxxv. 10—12; and cxxxvi. 17—22; Jer. xxxii. 21, 22; Ezek. xvi. 8—14; and xx. 28; Acts vii. 44.
2270	1734	Dinah is deflowered, and the Shechemites circumcised and murdered. Jacob removes to Bethel, where Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, dies.—Soon after Rachel dies in childbirth of Benjamin. Reuben commits incest with Bilhah; Gen. xxxiv. xxxv.	2679	1335	The Israelites having relapsed into idolatry, God delivers them into the hand of the Moabites for eighteen years; Judg. iii. 12—14; after which Ehud, a left-handed man, of the almost ruined tribe of Benjamin, delivers them; and the land rests eighty years. During this period Shamgar routs the Philistines, and Boaz marries Ruth; Judg. iii. 15—31; Ruth i—iv.
2276	1728	Joseph, now seventeen years old, is, for his dreams, hated, and sold, by his brethren, to Ishmaelites and Midianites, who sell him to Potiphar the Egyptian; Gen. xxxvii. Ps. cv. 17; Acts vii. 9.	2719	1285	After the Israelites had been for twenty years oppressed by Jabin, king of the Canaanites, who were left in the land, Deborah and Barak deliver them, and celebrate their victory; Judg. iv. v. and x. xi. 1 Sam. xii. 9—11; Heb. xi. 32; Neh. ix. 27—31; Ps. cvi. 40—43.
2286	1718	About seventeen years after his marriage with Shuah the Canaanitess, Judah commits incest with Tamar his daughter-in-law, who bears him Pharez and Zerah.—Joseph refuses to commit adultery with his mistress; and, by false accusation, is imprisoned; Gen. xxxviii. xxxix. Psal. cv. 18.	2745	1259	After they had been seven years oppressed by the Midianites, Gideon a Manassite delivers them; Judg. vi. vii.
2288	1716	Isaac dies, aged 180 years. Soon after Esau removes from Canaan, and finally settles in Mount Seir; where his family, cohabiting with the Horites, wonderfully increased; Gen. xxxv. 28, 29; and xxxvi.	2759	1245	After Abimelech, a bastard son of Gideon, had murdered sixty-nine of his brethren, and tyrannized over Israel three years, he quarrels with his Shechemite friends; is knocked on the head with a stone thrown by a woman from a tower; and, at his desire, killed by his armour-bearer; Judg. ix. 2 Sam. xi. 21. Tola began to judge the Israelites on the west of Jordan. Perhaps not long after, Jair the Gileadite began to judge those on the east of Jordan. It was perhaps while they were conjunct judges that the Ammonites terribly oppressed the Israelites eighteen years; Judg. x.
2289	1715	Having, perhaps two years before, interpreted the dreams of the baker and butler, Joseph is liberated, and interprets those of Pharaoh; is made ruler of Egypt, and married to a princess; Gen. xl. xli. Psal. cv. 19—22; Acts vii. x.	2771	1233	Jephthah, a bastard of Gilead, delivers the Israelites; sacrifices his daughter to fulfil a rash vow; and puts to the sword 42,000 insolent Ephraimites; Judg. xi. xii.
2296	1708	After seven plenteous years, a terrible famine begins in Egypt and the places about; Gen. xlii. 52; Acts vii. 11; Psal. cv. 16.	2848	1156	After, or while, Jephthah judged Israel six years; Ibzan seven, Elon ten, and Abdon eight, God delivers the Israelites, for forty years, into the hands of the Philistines. Meanwhile Eli the high priest, of Ithamar's family, judges Israel. Samson is born, and appointed to be a Nazarite. About the same time, or a few years afterwards, Samuel is born; Judg. xii. xiii. 1 Sam. i.
2298	1706	After Jacob's sons had twice gone to Egypt to buy corn, and been tried by Joseph, he, and all his family, go and reside there; and are nourished by Joseph; Gen. xlii—xlv. Acts vii. 11—15; Psal. cv. 17, 23; Josh. xxiv. 4.	2869	1135	After Samson had, for twenty years, harassed the Philistines, he is taken prisoner, and enslaved by them; but at his death pulls down the house, and kills multitudes of them. Encouraged by this, the Israelites attack the Philistines; but, being defeated, bring the ark to the camp; they are again routed, and the ark is taken. The judgments, attending the ark, on themselves, and on Dagon their idol, beside which they placed it, oblige the Philistines to send it back with honourable presents. The curious Bethshemites looking into it, 50,000 of them are struck dead. It is never returned to Shiloh, but remains at Kirjath-jearim; Judg. xiv—xvi. 1 Sam. ii—vi. and xii. 9; Heb. xi. 32; Acts xiii. 20; Ps. lxxviii. 59—67; Jer. vii. 12, 14.—Samuel, now almost forty years old, begins to judge Israel, and some time after delivers them from the Philistines; 1 Sam. vii. Heb. xi. 32.
		By the sale of the corn which he had laid up during the plenteous years, Joseph renders the money, cattle, lands, and persons of the Egyptians, their king's property; Gen. xlvii.	2888	1116	The Israelites, wearied of God's deputy judges, request a king, to render them like the neighbouring nations. Saul is made king, and defeats the Ammonites. Samuel resigns his government; 1 Sam. viii. —xii. Acts xiii. 20, 21; Heb. xi. 32—35.
2303	1701	After blessing Joseph's sons and his own, Jacob dies, and is with great pomp carried to Canaan and buried. Joseph's brethren supplicate forgiveness; Gen. xlviii—l. Acts vii. 15, 16; Heb. xi. 21.	2909	1095	For intermeddling with priestly work, for neglecting the utter destruc-
2315	1689	Joseph, having foretold the deliverance from Egypt, and given order concerning his bones, dies; Gen. l. 22—26; Heb. xi. 22.
2369	1635	The oppression of the Israelites begins. Twenty years after Moses is born, and is saved from the water, and educated, by Pharaoh's daughter; Gen. xv. 13; Exod. i. ii. 1—10; vii. 7; and xvi. 20; Acts vii. 18—22; Heb. xi. 23.
2413	1591	Moses, now forty years old, kills a murderous Egyptian; flees into Midian; marries Jethro's daughter; Exod. ii. 11—22; Acts vii. 23—29; Heb. xi. 24—26.
2473	1531	About this time Job is plunged into great distress; disputes with his friends; is reproved by his Maker, and graciously delivered; Job i—xlii. James v. 11; Ezek. xiv. 14, 20.
2513	1491	Pitying the Hebrews' affliction, God appears to Moses at Sinai in a burning bush; appoints him and Aaron to lead them out of Egypt.—After ten plagues the Egyptians allow them to depart; but afterwards pursue them through the Red sea, and are drowned, to the great joy of the Hebrews; Gen. xv. 13, 14; and xlv. 4; Exod. ii. 23—25; iii—xv. and xx. 2; Deut. iv. 20, 34; vii. 18, 19; xi. 2, 3; and xxix. 2, 3; Josh. xxiv. 5—7; 1 Sam. xii. 8; Neh. ix. 9—12; Ps. lxxvi. 10—12; lxxiv. 12—15; lxxviii. 12—14, 42—53; lxxx. 8; lxxxii. 6; lxxxvii. 13—20; cv. 26—39; cxiv. 1—3; cxxxv. 8, 9; and cxxxvi. 10—15; Is. lxiii. 7—14; Jer. xxxii. 20, 21; Ezek. xvi. 3—6; Acts vii. 30—36; Heb. xi. 27—29. Directed by the pillar of cloud, the Hebrews travel in the Arabian desert south-eastward to Sinai. The bitter waters of Marah are sweetened. Quails, manna, and water from the rock, are bestowed by God for their provision. They defeat the Amalekites, and have rulers appointed; receive God's laws from Mount Sinai, and are entered into covenant with him. God directs the form of his tabernacle; appoints his priests, and their consecration. Moses receives the tables of the moral law, and breaks them when he beheld the Hebrews worshipping their golden calf. By his intercession their destruction is prevented, and the tables of the law renewed; Exod. xv. 22—26; and xvi—xxxiv. Deut. i. 6—18; iv. v. ix. and x. 1—5; Neh. ix. 12—20; Ps. lxxviii. 7, 8, 17; lxxviii. 15—25; cv. 40, 41; and cvi. 13—16, 19—23; Ezek. xvi. 8—14; and xx. 5—16; Acts vii. 37—44.
2474	1490	The furniture of the tabernacle is formed. It is erected, consecrated, and dedicated; Exod. xxxv—xl. Num. vii. Aaron and his sons are consecrated for priests; Lev. viii. ix. Laws of oblations, purifications, and festivals, are enacted by God; Lev. i—v. x—xxvii. The second passover is kept; Num. ix. The Hebrews are numbered and marshalled; Num. i. ii. x.; and Levites appointed to serve God instead of the first born, and consecrated; Num. iii. iv. viii. After the giving of some other laws concerning the purity of the camp, suspected adulteresses, Nazarites, the priests' blessing of the people, and making two silver trumpets, the Hebrews march from Sinai. They murmur, and are plagued; have seventy elders added or confirmed in office. Miriam is smitten with leprosy and healed. The spies search Canaan. On their false report the Israelites despise it, and are

Y. of world	Before Christ	tion of the Amalekites and their property, and for consulting with a witch, Saul's army is routed by the Philistines, and he murders himself, about two years after the death of Samuel.—David, who had been anointed king by Samuel about seven years before, and who for about four years had been persecuted, and had composed several of his psalms, as vi. vii. xxxiv. xxxv. lii—lix. lxiii. lxiv. cxx. cxli. cxlii. cxliii. &c. returns from the country of the Philistines; resents Saul's death upon an Amalekite; laments over Saul and Jonathan's death; and praises God for his deliverances; Ps. xviii. ix.—Directed of God, he repairs to Hebron, where he is made king of Judah. Meanwhile Abner made Ishbosheth king of Israel; 1 Sam. xiii—xxxi. 1 Chron. x. 2 Sam. i. ii. xxii.	Y. of world	Before Christ	Maachah his idolatrous grandmother; 2 Chron. xiv. xv. 1 Kings xv 9—15.
2979	1055		3052	952	Baasha murders Nadab the son of Jeroboam, and the whole family; and reigns over Israel. Engaged in a war with Baasha, Asa hires the Syrians treacherously to invade the kingdom of Israel; and imprisons the prophet who reproved his conduct; 1 Kings xv 16—22; 1 Chron. xvi. 1—10.
			3075	929	Zimri murders Elah the son of Baasha; reigns over Israel seven days: but, being besieged by his master's troops, he burns the palace upon himself; 1 Kings xvi. 9—20.
2936	1048	After Ishbosheth had reigned seven years, much of which time had been spent in skirmishes with the servants of David, he is deserted by Abner, and murdered by two of his servants: upon which the principal men of Israel, with a large body of the people, assemble, and make David their king; 2 Sam. ii—v. 1 Chron. xii. Ps. lxxxix. 19, 20, &c. Acts xiii. 22; Ps. lxxviii. 68—72.	3079	925	After four years of civil war between Omri and Tibni, Omri prevails, and reigns wickedly; builds Samaria, and renders it his capital; 1 Kings xvi. 21—28; Micah vi. 16.
			3086	918	Ahab, still more wicked than his father, reigns over Israel; marries Jezebel a Zidonian princess; and, by her advice, introduces the worship of Baal: Hiel, with the loss of his sons, rebuilds accursed Jericho; 1 Kings xvi. 29—34; Mic. vi. 16.
2959	1045	After taking Jerusalem from the Jebusites, and building himself a palace there, and defeating the Philistines twice, David, attended with many thousands of Israelites, brings up the ark of God, with great solemnity, from Kirjath-jearim to a tent which he had formed for it on mount Zion; 2 Sam. v. vi. 1 Chron. xiii.—xvi. Ps. lxxviii. 68, 69; xxiv. xlvii. lxviii. xciii. xcvi. cxviii. cxlii. cxliii. cxlii—cl.	3090	914	Asa dying of diseased feet, Jehoshaphat succeeds him. He reforms his kingdom, fortifies his cities, and forms a militia of 1,160,000; 2 Chron. xvii. 1 Kings xxii. 41—46.—He first made friendship with the kings of Israel, and took Ahab's daughter to be the wife of Jehoram his son.
2962	1042	David intends to build a temple; but God restrains him; allots that honour to his son; promises to establish his kingdom; and David, with great thankfulness, pleads for its accomplishment; 2 Sam. vii. 1 Chron. xvii. and xxii. 6—13; Psal. cxxxii. 1 Kings v. 2—5; and viii. 15—19; 2 Chron. vi. 4—9; Acts vii. 46.			In answer to the prophet Elijah's prayer, a drought of three years and an half plagues the kingdom of Israel. Ravens at first, and afterwards a poor widow of Zarephath, whose son he restores to life, feed Elijah. Having by his sacrifice, burnt with fire from heaven, demonstrated that not Baal, but JEHOVAH, was the true God, he causes the prophets of Baal to be slain; and procures rain.—Terrified by the threatenings of Jezebel, he retires far southward to Sinai; but is reproved by God for his flight, and ordered back to anoint Jehu king over Israel, Hazael over Syria, and Elisha prophet in his own room; 1 Kings xvii—xix.
2970	1034	After he had subdued the Philistines, Moabites, Amalekites, Syrians, and almost all the Ammonites, and thus extended the dominion of the Israelites to the utmost extent promised; Gen. xv. 18—21; Exod. xxiii. 23—31; and xxxiv. 11; Deut. xi. 24; 2 Sam. viii. x. 1 Chron. xviii—xx; he commits adultery with Bathsheba; murders Uriah her husband; and, being reproved by Nathan, bitterly repents. The child sickens and dies; 2 Sam. xi. xii. Ps. li.	3103	901	Benhadad king of Syria having insolently threatened the destruction of Samaria, God punishes him with a signal defeat by a handful of Israelites. Next year, to punish his captain's blasphemy, his army is almost utterly cut off. He submits; and Ahab, to his own ruin, makes a treaty of peace with him; 1 Kings xx.
2971	1033	Bathsheba, perhaps the grand-daughter of Ahithophel, now David's wife, bears Solomon; 2 Sam. xii. 24, 25; 1 Chron. iii. 5; and xiv. 4.	3104	900
2972	1032	Amnon, David's eldest son, deflowers his sister; and after two years is murdered by Absalom, her full brother; 2 Sam. xii. 10; and xiii.	3105	899	By seizing upon Naboth's vineyard, whom Jezebel had for this purpose basely murdered, Ahab draws upon himself and family fearful denunciations of wrath; but his external repentance for a time defers the execution; 1 Kings xxi.
2977	1027	After Absalom had lived three years an exile with his grandfather Talmai king of Geshur, he is, by Joab's means, brought back to Jerusalem; and after two years more, is reconciled to his father David; 2 Sam. xiii. 37—39; and xiv.	3107	897	Having in the preceding year associated their eldest sons, Ahaziah and Jehoram, in power with themselves, Ahab and Jehoshaphat, encouraged by the false prophets, march against the Syrians for the recovery of Ramoth-gilead. Jehoshaphat is endangered, and Ahab slain; 1 Kings xxii. 2 Chron. xviii.
2983	1021	Absalom rebels against David; is joined by Ahithophel, who hanged himself, and by most of the Israelites. David and his friends flee over Jordan. There Absalom's huge host is defeated and himself slain by Joab.—After some altercation with the men of Judah, the Israelites again revolt under Sheba; but, he being slain, they return to their allegiance; 2 Sam. xv—xx. Psal. ii—vi. xlii—xlv.	3108	896	While Jehoshaphat, reproved by a prophet, proceeds in the reformation of his kingdom, Ahaziah, the successor of Ahab, dies of a fall from a window.—Elijah, having destroyed two idolatrous troops by fire from heaven, is translated.—Elisha succeeds him; heals the bitter water and barren fields of Jericho; and, by two she-bears, destroys forty-two insolent children of Beth-el; 1 Kings xxii. 49—53; 2 Chron. xix. 2 Kings i. ii.
2987	1017	David numbers his subjects. God punishes his sin in the death of 70,000 of them. By his deep humiliation and sacrifice he stops the plague. He purchases a spot for the temple to be built on; 2 Sam. xxiv. 1 Chron. xxi. and xxvi. 23, 24.			Elisha multiplies the widow's oil; promises a son to the Shunammite, and restores him to life; renders poison harmless; multiplies provision; heals Naaman of his leprosy, and smites Gehazi with it; makes iron swim; blinds and opens the eyes of the Syrian soldiers. The Syrians, affrighted by God, raise the siege of Samaria when the inhabitants were almost famished, and leave plenty of provision; 2 Kings iv—vii.
2989	1015	Having made immense preparations for the building the temple, and given Solomon a plan of it and a charge concerning it, he fixes the order of the priests, Levites, singers, and porters, for the temple; as either now or before he had regulated the trained bands and the royal property: and, having solemnly charged Solomon and the princes of Israel to cleave to the Lord, he soon after died.—Not long after Adonijah, Joab, and Shimei, were slain by Solomon's order; 1 Chron. xxii—xxix. 1 Kings iii.	3115	889	After Jehoshaphat's death, Jehoram, being sole king, introduces the idolatry of the house of Ahab his father-in-law into Judea; murders his brethren; and contemns the warning which the prophet Elijah had left him. The Edomites and Libnites revolt. The Philistines, Arabs, and others, ravage his kingdom and murder his family; 2 Chr. xxi. 2 Kings viii. 16—24.
2993	1011	After securing the assistance of Hiram king of Tyre, and making great preparations, Solomon, in the 480th year of the deliverance from Egypt, lays the foundation of the temple. It was finished in seven years and six months, just 3000 years after the creation and 1000 before Christ's birth. The next year it was dedicated by solemn prayer and large sacrifices; 1 Kings v—ix. 2 Chron. ii—vi. Acts vii. 47.	3126	878	After Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab, had murdered all the seed royal of David she could find, and had tyrannized six years, Jehoiada the high priest, assisted by his fellow priests and nobles, installs Joash, Ahaziah's son, when seven years of age, on the throne; kills Athaliah, and Mattan her idolatrous high priest; reforms the nation; and renews their covenant with God; 2 Kings xi. 2 Chron. xxiii.
3000	1004	Solomon finishes his magnificent palace; 1 Kings vii. 1; and ix. 10; 2 Chron. viii. 1. About this time he wrote his inspired Song; Song i—viii. carried on his repairs of cities and enriching trade; and was visited by the queen of Sheba; 1 Kings ix. x. 2 Chron. viii. ix. and i. 15—17.	3149	855	Jehoash, in the twenty-third year of his reign, gives orders for repairing the temple; which are executed with great prudence and fidelity; 2 Kings xii. 2 Chron. xxiv. Jehu king of Israel is succeeded by Jehoahaz his son. Under both, especially the latter, Hazael (who, by murdering his master Benhadad, had become king of Syria) terribly ravaged their kingdom; 2 Kings x. 29—36; xiii. 1—9; and viii. 7—15.
3013	991	After great licentiousness with heathenish women, and apostasy to their idolatries, Solomon, being reproved by a prophet, repents; writes his Ecclesiastes, and perhaps his Proverbs; and dies; 1 Kings xi. Neh. xiii. 26; Eccl. i—xii. Prov. i—xxix.	3164	840	Joash king of Judah, and his subjects, turn idolaters. He murders Zechariah the priest, son of Jehoiada and his own cousin, for reproving him. Soon after the Syrians ravage his kingdom, and his servants murder him; 2 Kings xii. 17—21; 2 Chron. xxiv. 17—27.
3029	975	Provoked by Rehoboam's haughty threatenings, the Ephraimites, and other nine tribes, revolt from the family of David, and form a separate kingdom under Jeroboam the son of Nebat. To prevent their return to Judah, by going up to Jerusalem at the solemn feasts, he establishes the idolatrous worship of the calves of Dan and Bethel among them. Nor could the reproof of the man of God, nor the miracles attending it, render him penitent; 1 Kings xii. xiii. 2 Chron. x.	3165	839	Jehoash, grandson of Jehu, succeeds his father Jehoahaz as sole king of Israel; visits the prophet Elisha on his death-bed; according to whose predictions he gives the Syrians three terrible defeats; 2 Kings xiii. 10—23; and xiv. 15, 16.
		Many Levites and others retiring from the kingdom of Jeroboam to that of Rehoboam, he and his subjects conducted themselves for three years regularly, and lived prosperously. But afterwards revolting to idolatry, Shishak, king of Egypt, ravages their country, and pillages Jerusalem and the temple; 1 Kings xiv. 21—31; 2 Chron. xi. xii.	3166	838	Amaziah succeeds his father Joash on the throne of Judah; punishes the murderers of his father; ravages the country of the Edomites with inhuman barbarity; provokes Jehoash king of Israel to a war, in which his army is routed, Jerusalem and the temple pillaged, and himself taken prisoner; 2 Kings iv. 1—14; 2 Chron. xxv.
3034	970				Jonah the prophet foretells the relief of the Israelites. Unwilling to denounce the destruction of Nineveh, he flees to Tarshish. A whale swallows him up, and, after three days, casts him out upon dry land. He warns the Ninevites; they repent, and are spared; 2 Kings xiv. 25; Jon. i—iv. Matt. xii. 39—41; and xvi. 4.
3046	958	Abijam succeeds Rehoboam. He routs Jeroboam's army of 800,000, slays 500,000 of them, and takes Bethel and other cities from him; 1 Kings xv. 1—8; 2 Chron. xiii.	3180	824	After being his father's partner twelve years, Jeroboam succeeds his father Jehoash, and restores the kingdom of Israel almost to its ancient glory; 2 Kings xiv. 16, 23—28.
3049	955	Asa succeeds Abijah; reigns forty-one years; zealously extirpates idolatry; strengthens his kingdom with forts; defeats an Ethiopian army of 1,000,000; renews his subjects' covenant with God; and deposes	3194	810	Amaziah king of Judah being murdered by his subjects, Azariah world; Christ

		Uzziah succeeds him, and reigns prosperously fifty-two years; 2 Kings xiv. 21, 22; and xv. 1—4; 2 Chron. xxvi. 1—15.	Y. of world; Christ			Jer. xxii. 24—30; xxix. 1, 2; and xxiv. Ezek. xvii. 4, 12; and i. 2, 3; Esth. ii. 6.
		The prophets Amos, Hosea, and perhaps Joel, prophesy; reprove the Israelites for their sins, and foretell their approaching, but just judgments; Amos i—ix. Hos. i—xiv. Joel i—iii.	3406	598		Zedekiah, brother of Jehoiakim, being made king by Nebuchadnezzar, as his sworn tributary, reigns wickedly.—Jeremiah continues prophesying in Judea; Jer. xxi. xxvii—xxxiv. xxxvii. xxxviii. l. li. if not also xix. xx.; and Ezekiel begins to prophesy in Chaldea; Ezek. i—xxxii.
3221	783	A terrible earthquake is felt in Judea; Amos i. 1; Zech. xiv. 5; Jeroboam II. dying, a civil war, at least an interregnum of eleven years and an half, ensues; at the end of which Zachariah his son, the fourth in descent from Jehu, reigns six months; 2 Kings xv. 8—12; and x. 30.				Zedekiah, depending on the Egyptians, rebelled; to punish which Nebuchadnezzar, after a siege of almost two years, burns Jerusalem and the temple; carries off captive all the Jews who remained, except a few of the poorer sort; whom, together with Jeremiah, now liberated from prison, he commits to the care of Gedaliah. But Gedaliah being quickly murdered, the rest retire into Egypt, and force Jeremiah along with them; Jer. lli. xxxix—xliv. 2 Kings xxv. 2 Chron. xxxvi. Lam. i—v.
3233	771	Shallum his murderer had reigned but one month when Menahem, probably Zachariah's general, slew him, and reigned ten years. While he was butchering his opponents, Pul king of Assyria invaded the kingdom, and laid it under tribute; 2 Kings xv. 13—22.	3416	588		Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Obadiah, prophesy; Jer. xliii. xlv. Ezek. xxxii—xlvi. Obad. i. Psal. lxxiv. cxxix. cxxxvii. are penned, and Jeremiah's Lamentations; i—v.
3241	763	About this time Uzziah, proud of his conquests and wealth, attempts to offer incense in the temple, is withstood by Azariah the high priest, and struck with a leprosy. Jotham his son governs the kingdom; 2 Kings xv. 5, 6; 2 Chron. xxvi. 16—23.				Having desolated the countries of Ammon, Moab, Edom, Phenicia, Philistia, and Egypt, Nebuchadnezzar returns to Babylon, where, out of his immense spoils, he forms a gigantic image to his god Belus. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, refusing to worship it, are miraculously preserved in the fiery furnace, and are promoted to great honours; Jer. xxv. xli—xlix. Ezek. xxv—xxxii. xxxv. Isa. xlv—xxiii. Hab. i. ii. Dan. iii. He also builds palaces, hanging gardens, the temple of Belus, &c. Dan. iv. 30.
3245	759	Isaiah and Micah begin to prophesy; Is. i—vi. Mic. i.	3433	571		Daniel interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the tree cut down. Next year Nebuchadnezzar, for his pride, is deprived of his reason, and dethroned for seven years; Dan. iv. and v. 18—21.
3246	758	Having murdered Pekahiah the son of Menahem, Pekah begins to reign over Israel twenty years.				Nebuchadnezzar hath his reason restored; he acknowledges God's sovereignty; is restored to his throne; and dies, having reigned forty-five years.
3262	742	Next year Jotham begins his prosperous reign over Judah; 2 Kings xv. 27, 28, 32—38; 2 Chron. xxvii.	3443	561		Evil-Merodach, his son, succeeds, and exalts Jehoiakin king of the Jews; 2 Kings xxv. xxvii—xxx. Jer. lli. 31—34.
		Ahaz succeeds Jotham, and reigns very wickedly and unhappily. Pekah king of Israel kills 120,000 of his best troops in one battle, and carries off 200,000 prisoners, which, by order of the prophet Oded, are sent back. He and Rezin king of Syria ravage Judea, and intend to render it tributary to them, under a deputy of their own. The Edomites and Philistines, from the south and west, also distress it. In his distress, Ahaz hires Tiglath-pileser, of Assyria, to attack his enemies, who, after murdering multitudes of the Syrians and Israelites on the east of Jordan and in Galilee, carries the rest captive to Media. Ahaz then copies after the Syrian idolatry, and pollutes the temple; 2 Chron. xxviii. Is. vii. 1—9; 2 Kings xvi. and xv. 29.	3442	562		Neriglissar, Nebuchadnezzar's son-in-law, who had murdered Evil-Merodach, and his family being murdered in their turn, Belshazzar, the son of Evil-Merodach, becomes king of Babylon; Jer. xxvii. 7. —Daniel hath his vision of the four beasts;—and, about two years after, of the ram and he-goat; Dan. vii. viii.
3274	730	Hoshea, who had killed Pekah nine years before, at last, by a long civil war, renders himself king of Israel, and is less wicked than his predecessors. Shalmaneser king of Assyria renders him tributary; 2 Kings xv. 30; and xvii. 1, 2.	3466	538		Daniel is advanced by Darius the Mede; but, by the envy of his fellow rulers, is cast into the den of lions. He is delivered, and his accusers destroyed; Dan. vi. He solemnly supplicates the restoration of the Jewish nation; has the coming of Christ, and the disasters attending it, intimated to him by the angel Gabriel; Dan. ix.
3278	726	After being partner with his father one year Hezekiah begins to reign alone over Judah. He, with great zeal and diligence, reforms his kingdom, refuses to pay tribute to the Assyrians; and reduces the Philistines; 2 Chron. xxix—xxxii. 2 Kings xviii. 1—8; Is. xiv. 29.	3468	536		Cyrus, succeeding his father Cambyses as king of Persia, and Darius his uncle and father-in-law as king of Media, proclaims liberty for the Jews to return to Canaan and rebuild their temple; and restores to them their sacred vessels, which had been dedicated to the Chaldean idol Bel.—About 30,000 of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and perhaps 12,000 of the other tribes, 7337 proselytes and servants, return under the direction of Zerubbabel and Jeshua; Isa. xlv. 23—28; xlv. 13; and xlviii. 20; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22, 23; Ezra i. i. Neh. vii.
3283	721	Finding that Hoshea had, with the assistance of the Egyptians, conspired to render himself independent, Shalmaneser invades his kingdom; demolishes Samaria his capital; takes him prisoner; and transports the remaining Israelites to Assyria and Media, whence few, if any of them, ever returned to Canaan; Is. vii. viii. xxiv. xxviii. Hos. iv—xiii. Amos ii—ix. Mic. ii. iii. vi. vii. 2 Kings xvii. 3—23; and xviii. 9—12; 2 Chron. xxx. 6; Neh. ix. 32. He soon after ravaged Phenicia, and besieged Tyre five years, &c.	3469	535		After observing the feast of tabernacles, and making preparation for seven months, the Jews amidst joy and grief, lay the foundation of the second temple; Ezra iii. But their Samaritan neighbours, by their open influence at court, and by accusing them as rebels to Cambyses and Artaxerxes Magus, long hinder the building; Ezra iv. Daniel hath his last vision; x—xii.
3291	713	Having reduced the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Philistines, if not also the Egyptians, Sennacherib the Assyrian, contrary to treaty, invades Judea, and takes all the fenced cities except Jerusalem: his army is cut off, perhaps in the third year, by an angel, on the east of Jerusalem. During this war Hezekiah was miraculously delivered from his deadly distemper; Amos i. ii. Is. xlv. xxiv—xxxviii. Mic. i—iii. 2 Kings xviii—xx. 2 Chron. xxxii.	3480	524		Cambyses, after the death of Amasis, ravages Egypt and part of Ethiopia, and ruins his own army.
3294	710	Chaldean ambassadors coming to Hezekiah, he vainly shews them his wealth. God threatens him, that it and his seed should be carried captive to Babylon; Is. xxxix. 2 Kings xx. 12—21; 2 Chron. xxxii. 25—33.	3484	520		Encouraged by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, and after this by a decree of Darius Hystaspis in their favour, the Jews resume the building of their temple; and in about four years finish and dedicate it, about seventy-two years after it had been burnt by the Chaldeans; Ezra v. vi. Hag. i. ii. Zech. i—ix. About this time Darius reduced the revolted Babylonians; Is. xlii. xlv. xlii. xlvii. Jer. l. li.
		While Judea flourishes Isaiah, and perhaps Micah, prophesy; Is. xl—lxvi. Mic. iv. v.	3489	515		Perhaps about this time Esther was made queen of Persia instead of Vashti; and after five years the plot and ruin of Haman took place. But some historians place these events thirty-six years later, under Xerxes, or rather fifty-six, under Artaxerxes Longimanus; Esth. i—x.
3306	698	Manasseh succeeds Hezekiah. He introduces idolatry, persecution, and other abominations; 2 Kings xxi. xxiv. 3, 4; and xxii. 17, 1; Jer. xv. 4; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 1—10.	3490	514		The Egyptians revolt from Darius. About six years after, Xerxes his son reduces them.
3328	676	Esarhaddon invades Judea; carries Manasseh prisoner to Babylon; where he repents, and is restored to his kingdom, perhaps as a tributary of the Assyrians; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11—19.	3525	479		Darius having, for the sixteen last years of his life, carried on an unsuccessful war with the Greeks, Xerxes his son, after four years preparation, invades their country with an army of some millions: but he and his Carthaginian allies are shamefully repulsed; Dan. xi. 2; x. 20; vii. 5; and viii. 4.
		About this time Esarhaddon transported the remains of the Israelites to the East, and further re-peopled their country with heathen tribes from Persia, Chaldea, &c. They formed a religion, partly Jewish, partly heathen; and were called Samaritans; 2 Kings xvii. 21—41; Ezra iv. 2, 9, 10, 17; John iv. and viii. 48; Luke ix. 52, 53.	3540	464		Artaxerxes Longimanus succeeds his father Xerxes. The Egyptians again revolt, but are reduced.
3363	641	Josiah, a child of eight years, succeeds his obstinately-wicked father Amon:—he, with great zeal, reforms his kingdom; repairs the temple; renews his subjects' covenant with God; solemnly celebrates the passover.—During his reign Jeremiah and Zephaniah prophesy, if not also Nahum and Habakkuk; Jer. i. perhaps to xvii. Zeph. i—iii. Nah. i—iii. Hab. i—iii.	3547	457		Ezra is sent to Jerusalem by Artaxerxes, as his deputy governor of Judea. With great zeal he separates the Jews from their strange wives; Ezra vii—x. Perhaps it was now that Esther was married to Ahasuerus, and Haman's plot and ruin five years after; Esth. i—x.; and, by her influence, Artaxerxes greatly favoured the Jews.
3394	610	Unadvisedly giving battle to Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt, Josiah is slain; after which the kingdom of Judah becomes miserable; 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30; 2 Chron. xxxv. 20—24.	3559	445		Nehemiah is appointed deputy governor of Judea, and rebuilds Jerusalem. Continuing in that office 18, or perhaps 36, years, he labours to reform his nation; Neh. i—xiii. Dan. ix. 25.
3395	609	Jehoaiah, whom the people had made king, being carried prisoner into Egypt, Pharaoh Necho makes Jehoiakim king, who reigns wickedly eleven years; 2 Kings xxiii. 31—37; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 1—5. Under him Jeremiah and Urijah, if not also Habakkuk and Zephaniah, prophesy; Jer. xix. xx. xxvi. xxii. xxiii. xxv. xxxv. xxxvi. xlv. xlvii—xlix. Hab. i—iii. Zeph. i—iii.	3574	430		Malachi the prophet reproves the Jews for their contempt of God's ordinances, sacrilege, marriages with heathens, and cruelty to their Jewish wives; Mal. i—iv.
3398	606	Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean, now partner in the kingdom with his father, invades Judea; renders Jehoiakim his tributary; carries off Daniel and his companions, and others, to Babylon, with part of the vessels of the temple of God, which he places in that of Belus; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6, 7; Jer. xxxv. 11; and xxix. 10; Isa. xxxix. 7; Dan. i. 2, 3, 7; &c.	3591	413		The Egyptians revolt from Darius Nothus king of Persia. It requires 64 years to reduce them; Isa. xix. Ezek. xxix. xxx. Zech. x. 11. Joel iii. 19; Isa. xxvii. 1.
3401	603	Jehoiakim rebels against Nebuchadnezzar, now sole king of Babylon; 2 Kings xxiv. 1.	3596	408		Scarcely had Nehemiah finished his reformation when Manasseh, the son-in-law of Sanballad, began to build the Samaritan temple on Mount Gerizzim; Neh. xiii. 28, 29; John iv. 20.
3403	601	Daniel makes known and interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the image, which the wise men could not; Dan. ii.	3655	349		After reducing the revolted Cyprians and Phenicians, and ravaging part of Judea, Artaxerxes Ochus, king of Persia, finally reduces the Egyptians; since which they have never been governed by a prince of their own; Ezek. xxix. 14, 15; and xxx. 13; Zech. x. 11; Isa. xix. 4.
3404	600	After a long and furious war Nineveh is destroyed by the Medes, assisted by Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean; Nah. i—iii. Ezek. xxxi.	3670	334		After the Persians and Greeks had been generally in a state of war for 160 years, Alexander the Great marches 35,000 Greeks into Asia with whom, in six years, he conquers the whole Persian empire; Dan. vii. vi; viii. 5—7; x. 20; and xi. 3; Zech. vi. 6.
405	599	While Nebuchadnezzar is occupied in seizing the kingdom of Assyria he sends an army of Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, against Jehoiakim king of Judah, who ravage his kingdom, murder him, drag his corpse out by the gate of Jerusalem, and leave it unburied; 2 Kings xxiv. 2; Jer. xxii. 18, 22; xviii. 19; and xxxvi. 30.	3672	332		Alexander furiously destroys Tyre and Philistia. The Jews and Egyptians submit to him; Isa. xxiii. 1—18; Zech. ix. 1—8.
		His son Jehoiachin, whom, it seems, he had made his partner ten years before, after reigning alone three months and ten days, surrenders himself to Nebuchadnezzar, who carries him and his family, courtiers, and principal magistrates, warriors, and artificers, in all 18,000, to Babylon; together with Ezekiel the priest, afterwards a prophet, and Mordecai, and part of the furniture of the temple; 2 Kings xx. 17, 18; Isa. xxxix. 6, 7; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9, 10; 2 Kings xxiv. 6—10;	3681	323		Alexander dies. Within fifteen years after his whole family is murdered.

and his empire divided among four of his principal generals; Dan. vii. 6; viii. 8; and xi. 4. The two principal divisions were—the kingdom or empire of Egypt on the south of Canaan, and of Syria on the north. For more than 150 years these were generally in a state of war one with another; nevertheless, the Jews, whose country lay betwixt them, were marvellously protected by Providence; Dan. xi. 5—29; Zech. x. viii.

3829 175 Antiochus Epiphanes, succeeding his brother Seleucus, persecutes the Jews, and sets to sale their high priesthood.—He makes four attempts to rob Ptolemy his nephew of the kingdom of Egypt.

3834 170 In his return from his second expedition into Egypt he takes Jerusalem, murders 40,000, and takes as many more prisoners to be sold for slaves.

3836 168 In his return from his fourth expedition, when he was checked by the peremptory demands of the Roman ambassadors, he stops the daily sacrifice, and attempts to abolish the Jewish worship.

3840 164 After some years struggling, Judas Maccabeus defeats Antiochus' army at Jerusalem, restores the worship of God in the temple, and institutes the feast of dedication. Not long after this Antiochus dies miserably; Dan. xi. 21—35; and vii. 23—25; Zech. i. 20, 21; ix. 13—17; and xii. 2—7; John x. 22.

For thirty years after, Judas, and his brethren Jonathan and Simon, protect their nation; governing their church as high priests, and their state as civil rulers dependent on the Syro-grecians.

3870 134 After this, John Hircanus the son of Simeon, and Alexander Janneus his son, having rendered the Jewish nation independent, reign prosperously for about fifty years, and subdue the Samaritans, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, and Philistines; Isa. xi. 14; Mic. iv. 12, 13; Obad. 18—21.

3926 78 After a war of six years with his subjects, Alexander dies. Alexandra his widow wisely governs the state nine years, Hircanus her son, being high priest.

3940 64 After five years' contention between Hircanus, her elder but peaceable son, and Aristobulus the younger, they both apply to the Romans for help.

3941 63 Pompey the Roman general takes part with Hircanus; and, taking Jerusalem from Aristobulus, carries him prisoner to Rome, where he is poisoned about 14 years after.

3957 47 Antipater, who had been a partizan of Hircanus, obtains for his son Phasael the Government of Judea, and for Herod the Great the government of Galilee.

3960 44 Julius Cæsar, who after great success in war, had altered the republican form of the Roman government, and made himself emperor, is slain by Brutus Cassius and others in the senate house.

3964 40 Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, having been made king of Judea by the Parthians, Herod of Galilee, by the assistance of the Romans, wrests the kingdom from him.

3982 18 Herod, having offended the Jews, by some heathenish structures in compliment to Augustus the Roman emperor, attempts to regain their favour by rebuilding their ruinous temple.

After a solemn annunciation of their birth by the angel Gabriel, John Baptist and Christ are born, to the great joy of their parents. Jesus' birth is published to the shepherds. He is circumcised, and presented at the temple; and solemnly acknowledged the Messiah by Simeon and Annas; Matt. i. ii. Luke i. ii. 1—38; and iii. 23—38.

Wise men of the Gentiles come from the East to worship him. God admonishes them not to return to Herod to inform him concerning the divine babe. To secure his destruction, Herod murders all the babes under two years old in and about Bethlehem; but an angel had previously warned Joseph and Mary to carry Jesus into Egypt, where he was safe; Matt. ii. 1—18.

4002 Herod being dead, Joseph and Mary, with the babe Jesus, return to Canaan, and settle at Nazareth in Galilee; Matt. ii. 18—23; Judas of Galilee raises an insurrection; Acts v. 37.

A.D. 4009 6 Archelaus, who reigned in the room of his father Herod, being accused of mal-administration, is deposed by the Romans, and Judea is formed into one of their provinces.

1012 9 Jesus goes up with his parents to the passover, and disputes with the doctors in the temple; Luke ii. 39—52.

1030 27 John Baptist begins to preach and baptize, warning the Jews to prepare for receiving the Messiah, who was about to be manifested; Matt. iii. 1—12; Mark i. 1—8; Luke iii. 1—18; John i. 7—19.

4032 29 Jesus is baptized by John at Bethabara near Jericho, and is attested by his Father and the Holy Ghost from heaven; Matt. iii. 13—17; Mark i. 9—11; Luke iii. 21—23. He is led by the Spirit into the wilderness of Judah to fast, and to be forty days tempted of the devil; Matt. iv. 1—11; Mark i. 12, 13; Luke iv. 1—13. Being examined concerning his character, John acknowledges himself the Messiah's forerunner, and points out Jesus as the Messiah, to his hearers and disciples; John i. 20—37.—Having become acquainted with Andrew, Peter, Philip, and Nathaniel, Jesus returns into Galilee, perhaps attended by the two last; and there, at a marriage, turns water into wine; John i. 35—51; and ii. 1—12.

1033 30 After making a short visit to Capernaum, Jesus goes up to the passover at Jerusalem;—where he expels the merchants from the courts of the temple; foretells his own death and resurrection; and confers with Nicodemus concerning the new birth; the end of his mission, &c. John ii. 12—25; and iii. 1—21.—Departs from Jerusalem, and preaches with great applause;—which John hearing of, joyfully extols him; John iii. 22—36; and is soon after cast into prison; Matt. xiv. 10; Luke iii. 19, 20; Mark vi. 17.—Jesus returns northward to Galilee through Samaria, where he converts an harlot and many of her neighbours; is welcomed to Galilee; at Cana restores to health a nobleman's son; John iv. preaches at Nazareth, to the hazard of his life; Luke iv. 16—30; removes to Capernaum, where he preaches with acceptance; calls Peter and Andrew, James and John, to be his stated attendants; casts out a devil in the synagogue, and heals Peter's mother-in-law; after which he takes a tour through the other cities of Galilee; multitudes following him to hear his sermons, or to obtain his miraculous cures; Mark i. 14—39; Luke iv. 31—44; and v. 1—11; Matt. iv. 13—25; and viii. 14, 15. Preaches the sermon on the Mount; Matt. v—vii. Descending from thence, he cures a leper; Matt. viii. 1—4; Mark i. 40—46; Luke v. 12—16. Returns to Capernaum, where he cures a man of the palsy, and calls Matthew to be his disciple; Matt. ix. 2—9; Mark ii. 1—14; Luke v. 17—28.

4034 31 Goes up to his second passover at Jerusalem, where he cures the lame man at the pool of Bethesda on the sabbath, and vindicates his conduct, from his equality with God, and the office he had from God; John v. Returning to Galilee, he vindicates the rubbing out ears of corn by his hungry disciples for their refreshment on the sabbath-day; cures a man's withered hand on the sabbath, and justifies his conduct; is followed by multitudes to the sea of Galilee; many of whom he heals of their diseases, and forbids the possessed to acknowledge his Messiahship; Matt. xii. 1—21; Mark ii. 23—28; and iii. 1—12; Luke vi. 1—11.

Y. of world 4034 A. D. 31 Having prayed all night in a mountain, he chooses his twelve disciples from among his other followers; descends to the plain; works many miracles; repeats part of his celebrated sermon on the Mount; Mark iii. 13—19; Luke vi. 12—49; heals the centurion's servant, and commends his faith; Matt. viii. 5—13; Luke vii. 1—10; raises the widow of Nain's son to life; Luke vii. 11—17; Mark iii. 19—21; answers John Baptist's inquiry, Whether he was the promised Messiah? discourses concerning John, and bewails the fate of the impenitent cities of Galilee; Luke vii. 18—35; Mat. xi. 1; dines with a Pharisee, and vindicates the woman who anointed his feet; Luke vii. 36—50. Takes another tour through the cities of Galilee, attended by his disciples and some pious women; answers the Pharisees charge of correspondence with Satan; warns them of the danger of sinning against the Holy Ghost, and of idle words; upbraids the Pharisees' perverseness in seeking a sign from heaven; pronounces the parable of the relapsed demoniac against them; intimates his resolution to persevere in his work, and his endeared affection to his obedient disciples; Luke viii. 1—3; and xi. 14—36; Mat. xii. 22—50; Mark iii. 22—35.

Retiring to the west side of the sea of Tiberias, he delivers the parables of the sower and of the tares, which he afterwards explained to his disciples; and of the springing field, the mustard seed, the leaven, the hid treasure, the pearl and the net; Matt. xiii. Mark iv. 1—34; Luke viii. 4—18. After answering some who professed their inclination to follow him, he crosses the sea eastward, and stills a tempest; Matt. viii. 18—27; Mark iv. 35—41; Luke ix. 57—62; dislodges the devils out of two madmen, the one extremely furious; and permits them to enter into and drown the swine; and, at the Gadarenes' request leaves the country, and crosses the sea to Capernaum; Matt. viii. 28—34; and ix. 1; Mark v. 1—21; Luke viii. 26—40. Being feasted at Matthew's house, he justifies his conversing with sinners; vindicates his disciples' present omission of religious austerities; cures an inveterate bloody issue, and restores to life Jairus' daughter; Matt. ix. 10—34; Mark ii. 15—22; and v. 22—43; Luke v. 29—39; and viii. 41—56. Removes from Capernaum to Nazareth, where, being again rejected, he begins another new circuit through the cities of Galilee; Matt. xiii. 54—58; and ix. 35—38; Mark vi. 1—6. Sends forth his disciples to preach in different parts, with proper directions and encouragements; Matt. x. and xi. 1; Mark vi. 1—13; Luke ix. 1—6.—Herod the tetrarch of Galilee suspects him to be John Baptist, whom he had lately beheaded at the instigation of Herodias his incestuous harlot; Matt. xiv. 1—12; Mark vi. 14—29; Luke ix. 7—9.

About the time of the third passover he withdraws into the borders of Tyre and Zidon; commends the Syro-phenician woman's faith, and casts the devil out of her daughter; returning through Decapolis, cures a deaf man; and, after feeding 4000 with a few loaves, crosses the sea of Tiberias westward, and lands near Dalmanutha and Magdala; Mat. xv. 21—39; Mark vii. 24—37; viii. 1—10. Again upbraids the Pharisees for asking a sign of his Messiahship, and heals a blind man at Bethsaida. Returning thence to Cesarea Philippi, near the springs of Jordan, he acknowledges himself the Messiah; foretells his sufferings; rebukes Peter; and encourages his disciples to self-denial and martyrdom; Mat. xvi. Mark viii. 11—38; and ix. 1; Luke ix. 18—27.—On the eighth day after he is transfigured; foretells his death and resurrection; declares that John Baptist was the New Testament Elias; descends from the Mount; casts out an obstinate devil; warns his disciples of his future sufferings; causes a fish to bring money for his tribute at Capernaum; Mat. xvii. Mark ix. 2—32; Luke ix. 28—45; recommends harmony and humility; directs how to deal with offending brethren; and, by the parable of the unmerciful servant, inculcates forgiveness of injuries; Mark ix. 33—37, 42—50; Luke ix. 46—48; Mat. xviii.; and reproves John for rebuking a castor-out of devils; Mark ix. 38—41; Luke ix. 49, 50.

After discoursing with his unbelieving kinsmen, he goes up to the feast of tabernacles at Jerusalem; where he preaches in the temple; vindicates his conduct and mission; and the Sanhedrim attempt to apprehend him; John vii. Next morning he returns to the court of the temple; declines judging in the case of the adulteress; represents himself as the light of the world; warns his hearers against unbelief and a dependance on their descent from Abraham; and declares his own pre-ternity; whereupon the Jews attempt to stone him; John viii. The seventy disciples return with a joyful account of their success; he shews the scribe the way to eternal life; delivers the parable of the good Samaritan; and, leaving Jerusalem, comes to Bethany, where he commends Mary's attention and choice; Luke x. 17—42. Returning to Galilee, he instructs his disciples how to pray; delivers the parable of the importunate friend; dining with a Pharisee, he admonishes him and his brethren of their sin and danger; Luke xi. 1—13, 37—54; cautions his disciples against hypocrisy and the fear of man; declines to decide a case of property between two brothers; pronounces the parable of the rich fool; repeats the cautions against covetousness which he had given in his sermon on the mount; inculcates watchfulness for his second coming, and care to entertain his present message; Luke xii.; urges the necessity of repentance; delivers the parable of the barren fig tree; cures a deformed woman on the sabbath; and, regardless of Herod's hatred, prosecutes his work; Luke xiii. Invited to dine with a Pharisee, he cures a man of a dropsy on the sabbath, and vindicates himself; recommends humility and generosity; in his parable of the marriage supper, foretells the rejection of the Jews and calling of the Gentiles; and urges a deliberate resolution in religion; Luke xiv. To vindicate his familiar converse with publicans and sinners, he pronounces the parables of the lost sheep, lost piece of silver, and prodigal son; Luke xv.; and of the unjust steward and rich glutton; Luke xvi.; and exhorts his disciples to simplicity, forgiving offences and humility; Luke xvii. 1—11. Travelling through Samaria to Jerusalem, he rebukes the intemperate zeal of James and John against the Samaritans; and heals ten lepers; Luke ix. 51—56; and xvii. 12—19. Coming near to Jerusalem, he warns the Jews against expecting a pompous kingdom of the Messiah; and foretells their approaching miseries; Luke xvii. 20—37; and, by his parables of the importunate widow and the humbled publican, he recommends importunity, perseverance, and humility, in prayer; Luke xviii. 1—14. At Jerusalem, during the feast of dedication, he opens the eyes of one born blind; encourages him when excommunicated by the Sanhedrim; admonishes the proud Pharisees of their danger;

	represents himself as the Messiah and Shepherd of God's flock, and as one with his Father; and, to avoid being stoned as a blasphemer on that account, retires beyond Jordan. 4036 33 Here he declares against rash divorces; blesses the little children; tries the young ruler's obedience; represents the danger of riches; Mat. xix. Mark x. 1—31; Luke xviii. 15—30; and, by the parable of labourers in a vineyard, warns the Jews not to envy the Gentiles' admission to fellowship with God in his church; Mat. xx. 1—16. Informed of Lazarus' sickness, after his death he returns to Bethany near Jerusalem, and raises him from the dead: the Sanhedrim having agreed he should for this be put to death, he retires to a city called Ephraim; John xi. Returning towards Jerusalem, he foretells his sufferings; rebukes the ambition of James, John, and their mother; and passing through Jericho, cures two blind men; Mat. xx. 17—34; Mark x. 32—52; Luke xviii. 31—43. He converts Zaccheus the publican; and, by the parable of the pounds, represents the misery coming on the Jewish nation; Luke xix. 1—28. At Bethany he is feasted by Lazarus and anointed by Mary; John xii. 1—11; Mat. xxvi. 6—13; Mark xiv. 3—9. On the first day of the week he rides in triumph to Jerusalem; weeps over it upon sight of it; drives out the traders from the court of the temple, and works miracles there; converses with some Greeks, and retires to Bethany. Returns to Jerusalem; next morning curses the barren fig tree, and again expels the merchants from the temple, which exasperates the priests; and at even returns to Bethany; Mat. xxi. 1—19; Mark xi. 1—19; Luke xix. 28—48; John xii. 12—50. Returns to Jerusalem on Tuesday morning; the fig tree is withered; he confounds the Jewish rulers who had questioned his authority; delivers the parables of the two sons, the vineyard let out to husbandmen, and the marriage dinner; Mark xi. 20—33; and xii. 1—12; Luke xx. 1—19; Mat. xxi. 20—46; and xxii. 1—14; confounds the Jews in their attempt to ensnare him about paying tribute; proves the resurrection of the dead; shews what is the great commandment; silences the Pharisees with respect to the Messiah's divinity; and repeats his denunciations against them; Mark xii. 13—40; Luke xx. 20—47; Mat. xxii. 15—39; and xxiii. Going out of the temple at even, he applauds the liberality of the poor widow; foretells his coming to destroy Jerusalem and to judge the world, and the signs thereof; and, by the parables of the servants, the ten virgins, and talents, and by the description of the last judgment, inculcates watchfulness, sincerity, and activity, in religion; Mark xii. 41—44; Luke xxi. 1—36; Mat. xxiv. xxv.; and warns his disciples that he should be betrayed in two days to his enemies. That same night the Jewish rulers plot his death; and Judas, coming in at the very time, agrees to betray him; Mat. xxvi. 1—5, 14—16; Mark xiv. 1, 2, 10, 11; Luke xxi. 37, 38; and xxii. 1—6. On Thursday he directs two of his disciples to prepare the passover; and, having spent that day, and perhaps most of the Wednesday in solemn prayer, he sits down with his disciples at night, and eats the passover; rebukes their ambition; washes their feet; intimates that Judas should betray him, who thereon retires to the Jewish rulers; he exhorts them to brotherly love; foretells Peter's denial of him; administers the Eucharist; Mat. xxvi. 17—29; Mark xiv. 12—25; Luke xxii. 7—27; John xiii.; and entertains his disciples with a consolatory discourse, which he concludes with a solemn prayer; Luke xxii. 28—32; John xiv.—xvii. After singing an hymn, and warning Peter and his fellow-disciples of their future trial and fall, he retires to the garden of Gethsemane; where, after terrible inward trouble and prayer, he is betrayed by Judas; but makes his apprehenders fall backward, and heals Malchus' ear. Being carried to the palace of Caiaphas, he is examined and abused, and Peter thrice denies him; Mat. xxvi. 30—75; Mark xiv. 26—72; Luke xxii. 31—71; John xviii. 1—27. On Friday morning the Jewish rulers remit him to Pilate, who, after examination, sends him to Herod, as tetrarch of Galilee. After some insolent abuse, he is returned to Pilate as an Innocent Person. After several attempts to release him, Pilate, protesting his own innocence, condemns him to be crucified, to please the Jews; Mat. xxvii. 1—26; Mark xv. 1—15; Luke xxiii. 1—25; John xviii. 28—40; and xix. 1—16. While Judas repents and hangs himself; Mat. xxvii. 3—10; Acts i. 16—20; Jesus is led to Calvary, bearing his cross, and there nailed to it. While his garments are divided, and himself insulted, he converts a fellow sufferer; recommends his mother to the care of John his beloved disciple; supplicates pardon to his murderers; recommends his departing soul to God; and expires in triumph. Amazing prodigies attend his death: his body, being pierced but not a bone of it broken, is begged and buried by Joseph of Arimathea. And his enemies secure the grave by a large stone sealed, and a strong guard; Mark xv. 16—47; Luke xxiii. 26—56; John xix. 16—42; Mat. xxvii. 26—66. Early on the first day of the week Jesus rises from the dead, his grave being opened by angels, who affrighted the guard, and made them run from the sepulchre. Mary Magdalene, finding the grave open, calls Peter and John, who enter into it and return. Mary staying at the grave, Jesus appears to her; Mark xvi. 1—4; Luke xxiv. 1, 2, 12; John xx. 1—17. Leaving her, he appeared to the other women whom the angel had before informed of his resurrection. This they reported to his incredulous disciples; Mat. xxviii. 5—10; Mark xvi. 2, 5—11; Luke xxiv. 3—11; John xx. 18. While the guard report to the Jewish rulers how they had been terrified by the earthquake and angels, and are instructed to use an ill-formed falsehood, Jesus appears to Peter, and then to the two disciples on their way to Emmaus; and, in fine, to ten of them that evening; Mat. xxviii. 11—15; Mark xvi. 12, 13; Luke xxiv. 13—43; John xx. 19, 23; 1 Cor. xv. 4, 5. On that day week he appears to all the eleven, and cures Thomas of his unbelief; John xx. 24—29. Some time after he appears to his disciples at the sea of Tiberias; tries Peter's affection, and foretells his martyrdom; John xxi. 1—24. He appears to the whole body of his followers in Galilee; and afterwards, on several occasions, to his disciples. At last, leading them out of Jerusalem to the mount of Olives or Bethany, he, in their sight, ascends into heaven; 1 Cor. xv. 6, 7; Mat. xxviii. 16—20; Mark xvi. 15—20; Luke xxiv. 44—52; John xx. 30; and xxi. 25; Acts i. 1—12. The apostles return to Jerusalem. Upon Peter's motion, Matthias is elected in the place of Judas; Acts i. 15—26. On the tenth day after Jesus' ascension the Holy Ghost is poured out upon his disciples, to guide them into all truth, direct them to work miracles, and to speak the languages they had never learned. That very day the apostles preach, and all the different tribes, assembled at Pentecost, hear them in their own language, and 3000 are converted to Christ; Joel ii. 28—32; Luke xxiv. 49.—Mark xvi. 17, 18; John vii. 39; xiv. 16—20, 26; xv. 26, 27; and xvi. 7—15; Acts ii. Peter and John cure a lame man. Peter adds an affecting discourse to the spectators; Acts iii. Behaving courageously before the Sanhedrim, they are threatened; but, returning to their brethren, they thank God, and are again filled with the Holy Ghost; Acts iv. 1—31. The number		and zeal of the converts still increasing, many devote their substance to the Lord. God's striking Ananias and Sapphira dead for keeping back a part of the price of their lands, and other miracles, promote the enlargement of the church; Acts iv. 4, 32—37; and v. 1—16. Enraged hereat, the Jewish rulers imprison the twelve apostles; but an angel liberates them. Being again apprehended, they are, by Gamaliel's advice, dismissed with their life; Acts v. 17—42. The converts daily increasing, seven deacons are chosen to manage their sacred donations. Stephen, one of them, confounding the Jews with his proofs of Jesus' Messiahship, is called before the Sanhedrim as a blasphemer; and, while he was making a long defence, is interrupted and tumultuously stoned; Acts vi. vii. A violent persecution ensues at Jerusalem, which scatters all the preachers but the apostles. Philip, another deacon, preaches to the Samaritans. Peter and John, sent by the apostles, go there, and communicate the miraculous influences of the Holy Ghost. Simon, a pretended convert, offers them money for such power; but his offer is detested.—Philip baptizes the Ethiopian eunuch, and preaches along the west borders of Canaan; Acts viii. 4038 35 Saul, who had assisted at the stoning of Stephen, and had been a most furious persecutor, is miraculously converted near Damascus, and becomes a most zealous preacher there; preaches in Arabia; returns to Damascus; escapes a snare laid for his life.—After three years he repairs to Jerusalem; sees Peter and John: but the Jews being enraged at his bold discourses, he is sent to Tarsus in Cilicia, his native place; Acts vii. 58; viii. 1—3; xxii. 3—21; xxvi. 4—20; and ix. 1—30; 1 Cor. xv. 8—10; Gal. i. 12—24; 1 Tim. i. 12—16. The persecutions ceasing, the Jewish converts greatly increase. Peter cures Aeneas of a palsy at Lydda, and restores Dorcas to life at Joppa. Called by the order of an angel, encouraged by a vision of animals, and directed by the Holy Ghost, Peter preaches to, and baptizes, Cornelius and other Gentiles at Cesarea; and, to the great joy of his brethren, accounts for his conduct; Acts ix. 31—43; x. and xi. 1—18. The gospel is preached at Antioch in Syria with great success. Barnabas and Saul, for about a year, labour in confirming the converts there. Agabus, foretelling a famine, a collection is made for the poor saints, at Jerusalem; Acts xi. 19—30. 4047 44 Herod Agrippa murders James the apostle and brother of John; and imprisons Peter, who is liberated by an angel. When Herod had just displayed his pride, and accepted blasphemous flattery, he is smitten by an angel, and eaten up of worms; Acts xii. 4048 45 Having delivered the collection, Barnabas and Saul return from Jerusalem to Antioch along with John Mark. By the direction of the Holy Ghost they are separated to preach to the Gentiles. They preach in Cyprus, where Elymas the sorcerer is struck blind, and Sergius the Roman governor is converted; and in Pamphylia, at Antioch in Pisia, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe, and all places in Lesser Asia, &c.; and in all meet with opposition; Acts xiii. xiv. 4052 49 Some Jewish preachers insisting that the Gentile converts ought to be circumcised and keep the law of Moses, the dispute is referred to a synod of apostles and elders at Jerusalem; whose determination being given, is dispersed among the churches, to their great joy; Acts xv. 1—35; and xvi. 4, 5. Peter, coming down to Antioch, sinfully dissembles, and is rebuked by Paul; Gal. ii. 11—21. Paul with Silas, and Barnabas with John Mark, separate, and visit the churches which they had lately planted; Acts xv. 36—41. Paul, Silas, and Timothy, travel through much of Lesser Asia. Directed by a vision, Paul crosses the Mediterranean sea into Macedonia in Europe; preaches at Philippi, where Lydia is converted and the devil dislodged from a sorceress; on which account they are cast into prison, but quickly liberated, and the jailer converted; Acts xvi. 4057 54 They plant churches at Thessalonica and Berea; Paul preaches at Athens; proceeds to Corinth, whence he writes his epistles to the Thessalonians, and perhaps that to the Galatians; and where Gallio takes their part against the furious Jews; Acts xvii. and xviii. 1—18. An Egyptian Jew pretends to be the Messiah, and is followed by 30,000, whom Felix disperses; Acts xxi. 38. 4059 56 Paul returns from Europe to Asia; touches at Ephesus; leaves there Priscilla and Aquila, who had followed him from Corinth; and hastens by Cesarea to Jerusalem, against the time of the passover; Acts xviii. 18—22. 4060 57 After visiting the regions of Galatia and Phrygia, Paul preaches a considerable time at Ephesus; whence Apollos, an Alexandrian, had been sent to Corinth; but is opposed by Demetrius the silversmith and his mob; writes his first epistle to the Corinthians, if not also that to the Galatians; Acts xviii. 23—28; and xix. 1 Cor. i.—xvi. Gal. i.—vi. 4063 60 Departs from Ephesus to Macedonia in Europe; collects a contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem. Informed of the good success of the former, writes his second epistle to the Corinthians, and perhaps the first to Timothy; comes to Corinth, whence he writes his epistle to the Romans; Acts xx. 1—3; 2 Cor. viii. 1, 2, 6, 9; and i.—xiii. 1 Tim. i.—vi. Rom. xvi. 1; and i.—xvi. 4064 61 Paul purposes to sail directly to Syria with the collection; but, being informed that the Jews laid wait for his life, he travels through part of Europe and Lesser Asia; earnestly exhorts the elders of Ephesus to faithfulness and diligence in their office;—arrives at Jerusalem; is apprehended in the temple; claims the privilege of a Roman, and escapes scourging; pleads his cause before the Sanhedrim.—To prevent his assassination by the Jews, Lysias the Roman captain sends him to Felix the governor of Judea at Cesarea; who, though he trembled at his discourse, kept him prisoner two full years; Acts xxx.—xiv. 4066 63 Paul is pannelled before Festus the new governor; appeals to Cæsar; pleads his cause before Festus and Agrippa.—After a dangerous passage, and shipwreck on the isle of Malta, he arrives at Rome, where he is continued a prisoner at large for two years; Acts xxv.—xxviii; and writes his epistles to the Philippian, Philemon, Colossians, Ephesians, and Hebrews; Phil. i.—iv. Col. i.—iv. Eph. i.—vi. Heb. i.—xiii. 4068 65 About the end of this year he is set at liberty; preaches in Crete, and leaves Titus to set things in order; perhaps preaches in Spain. 4069 66 From Rome he writes his epistle to Titus, and at least the second to Timothy. About this time Nero begins the first imperial persecution of the Christians, after the gospel had, for more than thirty years, been spreading and taking deep root in the empire. About this time James, Peter, and Jude, wrote their epistles to the dispersed Hebrews. 4077 70 Jerusalem was utterly laid waste by the Romans, and the Jewish nation destroyed in the most miserable manner. This, together with the disasters which followed under Trajan about A. D. 116, and under Adrian about 134 or 136, plainly marked God's abolition of the Levitical ceremonies, as none of the principal ones could be any more observed; and so weaned the Christians from their attachment to them; Mat. viii. 11, 12; and xxiii. 34—39; Luke xxix. 42—44; and xxi. 20—26, &c. 4093 90 About this time, or some years after, John wrote his Revelations, and perhaps also his Epistles. From A. D. 66 to 312 particularly about 66, 95, 107, 120, 160, 202,

		235, 250, 257, 272, and 303, the Christian church was terribly persecuted by the Roman emperors : and heresies and contentions, especially in the interval of persecution, rendered her state very miserable. Meanwhile the Roman empire, by the murder of emperors, by the ravages of the Scythian tribes, and by famines and pestilences, was no less unhappy. These things were foretold by the opening of the second, third, fourth, and fifth seals ; Rev. vi. 3—11 ; and xii. 1—4.			earth. At the same time the Mahometan delusion and Saracenic empire were at their highest summit of power ; Dan. vii. 8, 24, and xi. 37, 40 ; 2 Thess. ii. 4 ; Rev. xiii. 2, 12.
4316	313	After a terrible persecution of the Christians for ten years, the heathen emperors and their armies are quite overthrown by Constantine ; heathenism is abolished, and Christianity made the established religion of the empire ; Rev. vi. 12—17 ; and xii. 5—12 ; Ps. xxi. 8—12 ; and ex. 5, 6 ; and lxviii. 28—31.	4803	800	The German empire is founded by Charles the Great ; Rev. xiii. 3, 14, 15.
4326	323	The church began to enjoy a considerable calm of fifteen years, in which multitudes were converted to Christ ; Rev. vii. and viii. 1.	5058	1055	After pouring themselves south-westward into Persia for several ages, the Seljukian Turks about this time formed the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Iconium, Aleppo, and Damascus, near the Euphrates ; but, by their own contentions, and by the Tartar invasions, and by the war of the European Crusades, their power was restrained for two hundred years ; Rev. ix. 14.
4341	338	After Constantine's death, by means of the partition of the empire into the Western and Eastern , and by the ravages of the Goths and other Barbarians (especially after 395, till the western empire was utterly abolished in A. D. 476, and the whole power of Rome extinguished about 566) the Roman empire was generally miserable. And in the same period, by the schism of the Donatists ; by the heresies of the Arians, Pelagians, Nestorians, and Eutychians, and the contentions and persecutions attending the same ; and by the gradual introduction of Antichristian hierarchy and superstition ; the church became more and more miserable ; Rev. viii. 5—12 ; and xii. 13—17.	5281	1281	The Ottoman Turks began their conquests upon the Christians ; and for about 390 years gradually carried it on, murdering an infinity of men, and forming a very extensive empire, which still subsists ; Dan. xi. 40—43 ; Rev. ix. 15—19.
4483	480	By this time ten toes , horns , or kingdoms, were formed out of the Roman empire ; which, though often altered in their particular extent or form of government, have ever since continued ; and have for the most part been subject to the power of the POPE ; Dan. ii. 41, 42 ; and vii. 7, 20, 24 ; Rev. xii. 3 ; xiii. 1 ; and xvii. 3, 10, 12.			Claude of Turin and his followers, in the ninth and tenth, the Waldenses in the twelfth and thirteenth, the Wickliffites in the fourteenth, and the Hussites in the fifteenth centuries, and others, amidst poverty and persecution, faithfully testified against the popish abominations.
			5869	1866	About this time, or 150 years later, Christ's witnesses, who have been much persecuted, and often reduced very low, will be almost utterly extirpated by Antichristian influence. But God,—who has already scourged the Antichristians by the wars of the Saracens, Seljukian and Ottoman Turks, and by the contests between the popes and emperors of Germany, or between rival popes ; or by the Protestant reformation,—will, by terrible wars, or some other means, continued perhaps for thirty years, pull down the Antichristian and Mahometan powers, and introduce the glorious THOUSAND YEARS REIGN of the saints ; Psalm ii. 9 ; xxi. 8—12 ; and cx. 5, 6 ; Isa. lxvi. 6, 15, 16 ; Dan. ii. 34, 35, 44, 45 ; vii. 14, 26, 27 ; xi. 45 ; and xii. 11, 22 ; Rev. xi. 2, 7—19 ; xiv. 8—20 ; xvii. 14—17 ; xvi. xviii. xix. and xx. 1—6 ; Ezek. xxxvii—xlvi. &c.
4759	756	An hundred and fifty years, or five months, after their rise, and 666 years after John received his Revelations, and about seventy years after a most dreadful pestilence in Asia and Europe, the popes became civil lords in Italy, and gradually extended their civil power over all the ten kingdoms of their subjects, and claimed it over all the	6900	2900	Or about 150 years later, there will perhaps be a great decay of religion, and the final war of Gog and Magog against the church ; Luke xviii. 8 ; Rev. xx. 7—10.

WEIGHTS, MONIES, MEASURES, AND TIMES,

MENTIONED IN SCRIPTURE.

OF WEIGHTS, a Jewish SHEKEL weighed a little more than nine-twentieths of an ounce Troy. A MANEH or POUND weighed sixty shekels, or two pounds three ounces and a third part of an ounce. Fifty MANEHS, a talent, weighed 3000 shekels, or a little more than 113½ pounds Troy. All the Greek Minas or Roman pounds, were much less than the Hebrew MANEH : but some of the talents were considerably heavier than the Hebrew one ; that of Antioch amounted to 390 pounds and almost four ounces Troy.

II. Of MONIES, a MITE was scarcely the tenth part of a farthing, or about a forty-third part of the value of a penny. The CHALCOS, or BRASS PIECE, was equal to seven mites, or near two-thirds of a farthing English. The OBOLUS was equal in value to eight of these, or fifty-six mites, which is one penny farthing and a sixth part of a farthing. The GREEK DRACHME and Roman PENNY were in value seven pence three farthings. The STATER was equal in value to fifteen pence halfpenny. The Jewish GERAH to one penny and about the third part of a farthing. The Bekah, to almost fourteen pence, or ten Gerahs. The Shekel, or Silverling, to twenty Gerahs, or almost twenty-seven pence halfpenny. A MANEH, or pound of silver, was equal to fifty shekels, or five pounds fourteen shillings sterling ; and a TALENT, or sixty MANEHS, to three hundred and forty-two pounds three shillings and ninepence. A shekel of gold to thirty-six shillings and sixpence ; and a talent of gold to five thousand four hundred and seventy-five pounds, or sixty Manehs.

III. Of MEASURES of length, and HAND-BREADTH amounted to about three inches and an half. A SPAN, or three hand-breadths to almost eleven inches. A CUBIT, or two spans, to almost twenty-two inches. A FATHOM, or four cubits, to seven feet and about three inches and an half. A measuring REED, or six cubits, to almost eleven feet. A MEASURING LINE, or eighty cubits, to almost one hundred and forty-six feet. A FURLONG, or STADIUM, contained four hundred cubits, or almost one hundred and forty-six paces. Five of these STADIAS, or two thousand cubits, made a SABBATH-DAY'S JOURNEY ; and ten of them an Eastern MILE. Twenty-four miles, or two hundred and forty furlongs, or ninety-six thousand cubits, equal to thirty-three miles one hundred and seventy two paces four feet English, made a DAY'S JOURNEY.

IV. Of MEASURES of CAPACITY, the Jewish LOG held about two-thirds of an English pint, corn measure, or two ninths of the Scotch pint. Their CAB, or four logs, contained near three pints English. Their GOMOR, or OMER, a little more than five pints. Their HIN, a little more than eight pints. Their SEAH, or SATUM, about seventeen pints. Their EPHAH, or three seahs, fifty-one pints and one-third. The CHOMEK, or COK, five hundred and seventy-five pints and an half ; or eight bushels one pint and an half English corn measure. The Greek CHOINIX held one pint and a third. The Roman SEXTARIUS about a pint ; and their MODIUS, or Bushel, sixteen pints and one-fifth, or a peck and near eight solid inches.

N. B. The English pint here mentioned is about a third of the Scotch pint ; not the wine pint, which is little more than a fourth part of the Scotch pint.

V. Of TIMES. The Jewish HOURS were but introduced about the time of their captivity in Babylon. Their ordinary ones were of the same length as ours.—Their DAY, beginning at Six o'clock in the morning, they divided into twelve hours ; of which our Nine o'clock in the morning was the third, our noon their sixth, our Three o'clock afternoon their ninth, and our Five o'clock their eleventh. But they seem also to have at last divided their day into four great hours or watches, each containing three of the ordinary ones ; and of these their third hour was from noon to Three o'clock. Their NIGHT, they divided into four WATCHES, each consisting of three hours. The first ended about Nine o'clock, the second at midnight, the third at Three o'clock or cock-crowing, and the fourth about Six o'clock in the morning. Their WEEK, copied from God's example in the creation of the world, began on our Sabbath and ended on Saturday. Their MONTHS were regulated by the changes of the moon ; and each third year consisted of thirteen of these months or MOONS ; their names were ;

1 Abib, or Nisan	{ March	7 Ethanum, or Tisri	{ September
	{ April		{ October
2 Zif, or Jair	{ April	8 Bul, or Marchesuan	{ October
	{ May		{ November
3 Sivan	{ May	9 Chisleu	{ November
	{ June		{ December
4 Thamuz	{ June	10 Thebeth	{ December
	{ July		{ January
5 Ab	{ July	11 Shebeth	{ January
	{ August		{ February
6 Elul	{ August	12 Adar, 13 Veadar	{ February
	{ September		{ March

Their CIVIL YEAR, originating from the creation of the world, began with Ethanum or Tisri, in our September ; and by it their releases and jubilees were regulated. Their SACRED YEAR, originating from their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage ; Exod. xii. began with Abib or Nisan, in our March.

FIRST BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

* That is, GENERATION. Heb. BERESHITH, in the beginning.

In this Book we have the inspired history of the great events of 2369 years, viz. the creation of all things; the original happiness and fall of mankind; the fate of Adam and his posterity, before the flood; the general corruption of mankind, and the deluge sent to punish it; the preservation of Noah and his family in the ark, and their repeopling the earth: God's confounding of languages at the building of the tower of Babel, with his marvellous providences towards the families of Lot and Nahor, but especially of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, and their improvement of the same.

CHAP. I.

All religion being founded in our relation to God, as the Maker of all things, we have here (1) A general account of the divine persons making the heaven and earth out of nothing; and of the state of this lower world while the earth and water were joined in one confused mass; verses 1, 2. (2) A particular account of God's formation of light, of the firmament, and their use; 3—8. His separation of the earth from the water, and causing it to produce herbs, grass, and trees; 9—13. The upper firmament is furnished with sun, moon, and stars, for enlightening the earth, and distinguishing the seasons of day and night, summer and winter, &c. 14—19. The waters are furnished with fishes, and the air with fowls; the former created of the water, and the latter of water mingled with earth; 20—23. The earth is furnished with tame cattle, creeping things, and wild beasts; 24, 25. And, in fine, man is formed after the image of God, as a middle creature between angels and animals, and to be God's deputy in this lower world; 26—30. (3) God's approbation of particular things as good; i. e. perfect in their kind, and suited to answer their particular ends; and of man, and all things as connected with him, and with one another, as very good; 4, 10, 12, 18, 21, 25, 31.

IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 1. That is, In the beginning of time and things, the three Divine Persons, in one Godhead, made of nothing the third heaven, or residence of the blessed, and the whole matter out of which the air and starry heaven, the sea and earth, were afterwards formed. Heb. xi. 3. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Psal. cii. 25. "Of old thou hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands." 2 Pet. iii. 5. Jer. x. 12. and li. 15. Exod. xxxi. 17. and xx. 11. Psal. xxxiii. 6, 9. lxxxix. 11, 12. cxlvi. 6. and cxlviii. 1—6. Isa. xlv. 24. Zech. xii. 1. Acts xiv. 15. xvii. 24. and iv. 24. Isa. xlii. 5. Rev. iv. 11. x. 6. and xiv. 7. Rom. i. 19, 20. and xi. 36. The word ELOHIM, here rendered God, is plural, and denotes the WORTHY ONES, the Divine persons, who equally concurred in the creation of all things. 1 Cor. viii. 6. "The Father of whom are all things." Mat. xi. 25. "He is Lord of heaven and earth."—Eph. iii. 9. "God created all things by Jesus Christ." John i. 1—3. "In the beginning was the Word (the Son) and the Word was with God, and the Word was God—all things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made."—Col. i. 16. Prov. viii. 27—30. Job xxvi. 13. "By his Spirit he garnished the heavens." Psal. xxxiii. 6. "All their hosts were made by the spirit of his mouth." And civ. 30.

Ver. 2. Earth, deep, and waters, signify the same mingled mass of earth and water; 2 Pet. iii. 5. "The earth standing out of the water, and in the water."—It was without form; without any agreeable shape, order, or ornament; and void; without either vegetables to furnish it, or animals to inhabit it. And not the wind, which was not yet formed, as there was no air, but the Holy Ghost, in his almighty influence, moved, or sat brooding upon this mingled mass, to prepare it for the intended separation of earth and water, and for the production of vegetables and animals.

2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God saw the light that it was good: and God divided ^{*}the light from the darkness.

5 And God called the light †Day, and the darkness he called ‡Night. ¶ And the evening and the morning were the first day.

6 ¶ And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters,

7 And God made the firmament, and

Ver. 3. 2 Cor. iv. 6. "God commanded the light to shine out of darkness." It, as well as all things else, was produced by Christ, who is God's personal word, John i. 3. his wisdom and power, 1 Cor. i. 24.—This light was some bright shining body, perhaps somewhat like the pillar of fire in the wilderness; and out of it the sun and stars appear to have been afterwards formed.

Ver. 4. God divided the light from the darkness, by making them to take different places by turns; the light always shining upon the one half of the mingled mass, and the darkness covering the other; in much the same manner as our sun, by turns, illuminates the one half of the globe, and leaves the other in darkness.

Ver. 5. The time of the first revolution of the darkness and of the light were the first day; for both the light and the darkness existed together at the same time, but on different parts of the mingled mass.

Ver. 6. This firmament includes the region of the sun, moon, stars, and comets: and the air or atmosphere which surrounds our earth, and separates between the water which is in the clouds, and that which is in the seas and rivers. Psal. xxxiii. 6, 9. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast." Job xxxvii. 18. "He spread out the sky which is strong, and as a molten looking-glass." Job xxvi. 13. Psal. cxxxvi. 5. Jer. x. 12. and li. 15. Zech. xii. 1. Jer. x. 13. "There is a multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the—earth."—Job xxvi. 8. "He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them." And xxxviii. 22—26. "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, and of the hail, which I have reserved?—Who hath divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters—to cause it to rain upon the earth?" Job xxxvii. 11. Eccl. xi. 3. Psal. cxlviii. 4.

divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were *above the firmament: and it was so.

8 And God called the firmament† Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

10 And God called the dry land‡ Earth: and the gathering together of the waters called he ||Seas: and God saw that it was good.

11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth §Grass*, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide §the day from the night: and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days and years:

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great lights; the greater light *to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth,

18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 ¶ And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the †moving † Or, creeping. creature that hath §life, and fowl that § Heb. soul. may fly above the earth in the ||open || Heb. face of the firmament of heaven. firmament of heaven.

21 And God created †great whales, † Some of them are an hundred feet, or according to some, an hundred fathom long. and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind; cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multi-

Ver. 9. Job xxxviii. 9—11. "Who shut up the sea with doors—when I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling band for it, and brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors; and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further?" And xxvi. 10. "He compassed the sea with bounds." Psal. xxiv. 1, 2. "The earth he founded upon the seas, and established it upon the floods." And cxxxvi. 6. "He stretched out the earth above the waters." Psal. civ. 5—9. and xxxiii. 7. 2 Pet. iii. 5. Jer. v. 22. Prov. viii. 29. But the whole globe of earth and sea was hung upon nothing. Job xxvi. 7. The approbation of the second day's work was deferred till the separation of the waters was completed, and we have it—ver. 10.

Ver. 11. Psal. civ. 14, 15. "He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth—wine—and oil—and bread." Job xxviii. 5. In this first production of vegetables, the solar heat had no influence, as it was not yet formed; nor had there been any rain. These vegetables have seed in themselves; viz. have a power in their root, branch, leaves, buds, or fruit, to propagate their kinds.

Ver. 14. God now formed more glorious and useful enlighteners of the now well-ordered and adorned earth than had been formed on the first day. The sun is in itself a very extensive body of light; and the moon, though it hath no light in itself, enlightens our earth, by reflecting the light of the sun; and both are called great lights, since, by reason of their nearness, they appear to us much larger than any of the stars. These lights not only form the day and night, but also form or mark out the seasons of sowing, planting, reaping, sailing, travelling, or the like; and are for signs of the weather, and sometimes of remarkable providences. Psal. cxxxvi. 7—9. God made great lights— "the sun to rule by day, and the moon and stars to rule by night." And lxxiv. 16, 17. "The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun. Thou hast made summer and winter." And civ. 19, 20. "He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down. Thou makest darkness, and it is night." Deut. iv. 19. "The sun, moon, and stars, even all the host of heaven—God hath divided unto all nations," for use. Job xxxviii. 12. Psal. viii. 3, 4. cxdviii. 3, 5. and cxix. 91. Jer. xxxi. 35. and xxxiii. 25.—Mat. xvi. 2, 3. "When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, ther, for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowring." Luke xxi. 25, 26. "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars—men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Mat. xxiv. 29. "So is this great—sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts.—There is that leviathan," whales, crocodiles, and other sea monsters. Psal. l. 10, 11. "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine," by creation.—Job xl. 15. God's blessing gave the animals a power to propagate their kinds. Psal. cvii. 38. "He blesseth them, so that they are multiplied greatly." Job xlii. 12. Psal. cxliv. 13, 14.

Ver. 26. The plural is not here used for the singular in the manner of some modern kings. There is not in scripture one instance of a sovereign's speaking of himself only in the plural number, we, us, our. But the plural us here denotes a consultation of the Divine Persons, concerning the production of that species of creatures which was to be the most perfect under heaven, and in which the glory of God was to be for ever most illustriously manifested in his work of redemption.—The image of God on man includes, (1) The resemblance of his soul, in respect of spiritual substance, understanding and will: (2) The happiness of his state, and his honourable dominion over the creatures: (3) And chiefly the moral conformity of his soul to God, in spiritual knowledge, righteousness, and holiness. Eccl. xii. 1. "Remember thy Creators," Heb. i. e. Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "in the days of thy youth." Job xxxv. 10, "Where is God my Makers?" Heb. Is. liv. 5. CHAP. II.

Is an appendix to the preceding history of the creation; more particularly explaining that part of it which relates to man, the favourite of God, in this lower world. We have in it an account (1) Of God's institution and blessing of the Sabbath, which was made for man, to promote his holiness and comfort; 1, 2, 3. (2) Of the extraordinary manner in which the first vegetables were produced, and Adam formed; 4—7. (3) Of the garden of Eden, and of God's placing man in it under the form of a law and covenant; 8—17. (4) Of Adam's dominion over the animals on earth, and their acknowledgment of it, in coming to him for their respective names; 18, 19, 20. (5) Of the need and the making of the woman; of God's marriage of her to Adam, with the nearness of their connection, and their happy fellowship between themselves; 21—25.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Stand still, my soul, and consider this wonderful work of God! O how his eternal power and Godhead shine forth in forming so vast, so well furnished worlds of creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate! What infinite wisdom appears marked in the vast variety; the comely order, and the mutual subserviency, of all things to the good of one another, and to his glory! What goodness, in forming such multitudes of beings to partake of his bounty as their all in all! and especially towards man, in forming him after his own image, and in so preparing this lower world to be a commodious lodgment for him in his way to the mansions of light! Let me then, in all things, in heavens, in earth, in air, in sea, and in land; in grass, in herbs, in trees, in sun, in moon, in stars, in fishes, in fowls, in cattle and creeping things; in angels, and in man; behold the excellencies of my God! Let me enjoy God himself in all things, and all things in God! Let me use them all as his property, his product, and for his glory and honour! And, notwithstanding my nothingness, confusion, darkness, and deadness, let me hope that my all-creating God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, will fashion me, as an abridged world, into a monument of redeeming mercy, to the praise of the glory of his grace! Am I a Christian Philosopher? Let me, as I have access, contemplate the creatures of God, in their almost infinitely diversified natures, qualities, and uses!—LIGHT and CELESTIAL LUMINARIES, in their mysterious nature, extensive range, prodigious but duly proportioned distance, rapid motions, and powerful influences—AIR, fixed and unfixed, inflammable and unflammable, in its fluidity, weight, elasticity, and usefulness for forming of wind, promoting of animal life, transmission of light, and the like—WATER, in its fluidity, plenteousness, dispersion, saltness or freshness, penetration, and fitness for forming rains, dews, sea-productions; and for promoting trade and connections between nations—EARTHS, stones, metals, moulds, in their adhesion, ductility, forms, colours, and uses—VEGETABLES, in their structure, growth, curious parts, almost infinitely diversified forms, colours, and uses—ANIMALS, in their curious parts, connected structure, mysterious life, and dependence on food; their motions in limits, fitness for procreation, and self-preservation, beautiful forms, melodious, awful, or plaintive sounds, exquisite and diversified smell and taste: and, along with these, the UNLIMITED DIVISIBILITY of matter, the LAWS of air, attraction, gravitation, electricity, magnetism, of muscular motion, and of nervous influences—RATIONAL SPIRITS, in their powers of thinking, willing, recollection, sociability, and union with bodies—as proofs of the existence and manifestations of the mysterious nature and manifold perfections of God, my God in Christ; of whom, through whom, and to whom are all things. Let me always consider his creatures as memorials of his creating, preserving, and ruling powers, and as means of delightfully and awfully impressing my heart with his presence, observation, and influence. Let me rejoice to view all creatures as formed and fitted for subserving and promoting God's great and principal work of our redemption through Christ, and multitudes of them as instituted emblems of his persons, perfections, relations, and operations, as manifested in it. Let me by faith appropriate a particular new covenant-right to, and property in them all, in and through Christ, as my head and husband, as means of my present, and pledges of my future and everlasting enjoyment of God as my ALL IN ALL: as means of exciting and leading me habitually to think on, admire, adore, and live to his glory, while I remain here in his lower sanctuary on earth; and to be always mild and humble as a brother and sister to, and dependant on, the meanest animal, insect, or atom in it.

CHAP. II. Ver. 6. God by his creative power, brought the vegetables at first to perfection without seed, and without concurrence of the soil, sun, rain, or any other natural cause.

Ver. 7. Ver. 16, 17. Here we have God entering into a covenant of works with Adam, and with all his natural posterity in him. This is the covenant afterwards published from Sinai, and which gendereth to bondage. Gal. iv. 24. This is the covenant which Adam transgressed. Hos. vi. 7. The breach of this covenant was necessarily supposed by the REMEDIAL ONE, published after the fall. Gen. iii. 15. Rom. v. 12—21. The annexing of death to a positive command of abstinence from fruit, indifferent in itself, by an infinitely good, gracious, and wise God, inferred likewise the annexing of a glorious reward to his obedience: and in this the form of a covenant consists. The adjoining of the tree of life, and of knowledge of good and evil, to this transaction, as confirmatory seals of life or death; the frequent republication of the moral law, in a covenant form, to men when they could not keep it as such, Lev. xviii. 5. Deut. xxvii. 26. Mat. xix. 17. Gal. iii. 10, 12. Rom. x. 5. and iii. 27. but especially the imputation of Adam's first sin to his natural posterity, Rom. v. 12—19; plainly establish this point. Here we have the parties of a covenant; God, manifesting his supreme authority, his unbounded goodness, and infinite condescension, on the one hand; and Adam, as perfectly holy and righteous, capable of performing whatever God required, Gen. i. 26, 27. and v. i. Eccl. vii. 29. and as the common head and representative of all his posterity; Rom. v. 12—19. 1 Cor. xv. 22. on the other.—Here we have a condition required; abstinence from the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, which supposed and implied perfect obedience to the whole law of God written on man's heart, or revealed to him. The end of this covenant being to render mankind happier than the duties of the natural state necessarily entitled them to be, it was proper that some positive institution should be added to the natural laws inscribed on the heart of Adam at his creation, and which might promote obedience to them. This institution relative to the tree of knowledge, which, being in the midst of the garden, was almost continually in his view, was extremely proper; as it tended, (1) To manifest the high sovereignty of God over men, as one who could enact his mere will into an awful law: (2) To render Adam's obedience or disobedience, and consequently the justice of God in rewarding or punishing him, more conspicuous, Rom. iii. 4: (3) To mark that, even in paradise, he held all which he enjoyed of God, as his great proprietor and landlord, and ought to do nothing without his allowance: (4) To be a standing monitor to Adam, that he was fallible, and needed to take heed to his ways, and watch against every spiritual enemy; that he was not come to his full happiness and rest, since, even in paradise, he was under remarkable restraint; that his happiness lay in God himself alone; and that nothing was to be desired, but in submission to his will, and for his sake: (5) To be a summary of the law of nature; by obedience to which he might honour God, loving him with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and loving himself, and his posterity as himself. Here is a penalty threatened in case of disobedience; certain, manifold, and dreadful death, viz. (1) Death legal, or a sentence of condemnation, fixing upon the covenant-breaker in the very moment he begins to transgress. (2) The execution of this sentence in real death; which is either spiritual, comprehending every thing relative to the soul's loss of God's favour and image, and to its defilement and misery in this life, Rom. i. 28—31. iii. 10—18. and viii. 7, 8. Eph. ii. 1, 3, 12; or natural; which comprehends every calamity on the body, and whatever its comfort depends upon, in this world, Gen. iii. 16, 19. Deut. xxviii. Eccl. xii. 7. 2 Pet. iii. 12; or eternal, comprehending all the misery of loss or of pain, to which the damned are for ever subjected in hell, Mat. xxv. 41. Rev. xiv. 10, 11.—In the express annexing of so great a death, especially to the breach of the positive part of the law of the covenant, a promise of a life directly opposite, as the reward of perfect fulfilment of the condition, was implied; comprehending the continuance of the natural and spiritual life, which he had, in all the vigour, comfort, and prosperity of it: and the enjoyment of a more glorious and eternal life in heaven; in consequence of his finishing his course of unflinching obedience. Thus the sum of the covenant was, Mat. xix. 17. "If thou wilt enter into life eternal, keep the commandments." Gal. iii. 12, 10. "The man that doeth these things shall live in them.—Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." Ezek. xviii. 4. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—The fruit of the tree of life, as a seal of the covenant, confirmed the promise of life upon condition of perfect obedience: and the fruit of the tree of knowledge confirmed the threatening of death annexed to disobedience.—The representation of all Adam's natural posterity in him was most reasonable and kind: as it was the shortest, and, humanly speaking, the safest means of securing their eternal happiness.—The whole tenor of this covenant was so highly equitable and gracious, that man's uncorrupted conscience could not but approve of it; his love to himself and his posterity could not but incline him to it: his perfect conformity to the divine image could not but make him content to whatever terms God proposed, and to receive his favours in a method so answerable to the divine perfections.

Ver. 21—24. God formed the woman of a rib, with the flesh thereon, out of Adam's side, to note the wife's equality with her husband, and that she is his companion, and to be treated with the utmost kindness and affection. He brought her to Adam, to honour the institution of marriage, and to teach us that children ought to marry by the disposal or consent of their parents, and all only in the Lord, Ch. xxi. 21. xxiv. 4. and xxviii. 2. Judg. xiv. 2. 1 Cor. vii. 38, 39.—Adam accepted her as an help meet for him, suitable to his nature, acceptable to his person, and useful on all occasions for their mutual comfort, and the propagation of their species. And God, by Adam, declared the general law of marriage, requiring the most affectionate cohabitation, inseparable union, and intimate communion, during life; as if the parties were but one person. 1 Pet. iii. 1, 7. "Wives, be in subjection to your husbands. Husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life." Eph. v. 22—28. "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife.—Let the wives be subject to their own husbands in every thing.—Husbands love your wives: as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it, so ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself."—Gen. iii. 16. 1 Cor. xiv. 34. and vii. 16. Tit. ii. 5. Col. iii. 18, 19. 1 Tim. v. 8. and ii. 11, 12, Mal. ii. 14—16. Mat. xix. 3—9. 1 Cor. vii. 14, 15.

Ver. 25. They had no cause of shame; as there was neither deformity in their bodies, nor guilt on their consciences, nor any sinful inclination in their hearts.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—In the faith of God's institution and blessing of the Sabbath, let me always observe it as in his sight, ceasing from my own work, as he did from his. Let me never prefer the example of a wicked generation to that of God: nor prefer the pleasures of recreation or sloth, or the profits of carnal labour, to fellowship with, and enjoyment of, God and his blessings. Let my care be to receive out of his fulness, and grace for grace; to remember his mighty works of creation and redemption, and to worship him in the beauties of holiness. How easy is it for him to work, with or without means, as he pleaseth!—But, O how great his kindness to man! In him the animal and the angelical natures were united: the best of this world was allotted him for his residence: and, while its choicest fruits were assigned him for his food, the multitudes of its animal inhabitants were subjected to his dominion and service. A woman, every way perfect, was provided for his comfort, and for the increase of mankind. Nay, God himself entered into familiar fellowship, and a gracious covenant, with him, in which everlasting happiness was promised to him and his posterity upon the easiest terms.—But in this first Adam, as in a figure, do I not behold the second, the Lord from heaven, Jesus the Redeemer! He is indeed the Son of God, the express image of his Father's person: the image of the invisible God; the new thing created in the earth, and the blessed fruit of it, excellent and comely. He, as Mediator, is the great product of JEHOVAH's counsels, the illustrious ornament, and glorious centre, of all his works. He is our Head and Representative in the second and better covenant, established upon better promises. He is our spiritual Parent, who communicateth to us his indelible image, and entitles us to all the fulness of God. He is our great Prophet, Priest, and Governor, to whom all things in heaven and earth are subjected for our sake. Having by his blood purchased, and by his Spirit planted, a gospel-church, he dwells there, and cultivates the same; and having regained the celestial paradise, there we shall be for ever with the Lord. In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge; and, having all life and fruitfulness in his own person, he giveth to us power to eat of himself, the Tree of life.—Being, by the determinate counsel of God, cast into the deep sleep of debasement and death in this world, his church was formed out of his broken body and pierced side. She is divinely brought and espoused to him: and to her he cleaves, at the expence of once leaving his Father in heaven, and of now leaving his mother, the people of Israel.

CHAP. III.

But man being in honour abode not. Here we have an account of Adam's, nay, of mankind's fall; and of God's demonstrations of his mercy and justice in consequence thereof; particularly (1) Of Satan's crafty and successful temptation of the woman, and by her of Adam, to eat the forbidden fruit; and of the sin and shame which immediately followed; 1—8. (2) The Lord's gracious arraignment of Adam and his wife, notwithstanding their attempt to hide themselves from him; and his convincing them of their guilt, notwithstanding the excuses which they made; 9—13. (3) God's condemnation of the serpent, which had been instrumental in the temptation; of Satan the tempter; and of Adam and his wife; to their respective punishments; 14—19. (4) Having received a promise of the future manifestation of the Son of God in human nature, to destroy the works and power of the devil; and being clothed with skins of sacrificed beasts, which prefigured his future atonement; Adam and Eve are, in a mixture of mercy and wrath, excluded from the garden of Eden; 15, 21—24.

NOW the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made: and he said unto the woman, *Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4 And the ^aserpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die.

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof then your eyes shall be opened: and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶ And when the woman ^bsaw that the tree was good for food, and that it was [†]pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise; she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they [‡]sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves ^{||}aprons.

8 And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the [§]cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God, amongst the trees of the garden.

9 And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, The woman^d, whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, ^eWhat is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—6. Serpents in general have a natural subtlety beyond other creatures. Mat. x. 16. "Be wise as serpents." But this one had an extraordinary measure of it, being actuated by a fallen angel, who had just apostatized from his holy and happy state. Rev. xx. 2, 3, 8. "The dragon, that old serpent—the devil and Satan—goeth out to deceive the nations." 2 Cor. xi. 3. "The serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety." John viii. 44. "The devil was a murderer from the beginning—a liar, and the father of it." 2 Cor. ii. 11. "We are not ignorant of his devices." And xi. 14. "Satan—is transformed into an angel of light."

In the temptation of our first parents Satan acted with the utmost subtlety (1) He chose a serpent, which was seemingly simple, but really subtle, and perhaps beautiful, which might make Eve take it for an angel, to be his instrument. (2) He accosted the woman, who perhaps had only heard the terms of the covenant from Adam, in the absence of her husband. (3) According to some, he improved their being more naked than the wild beasts of the earth, to render them discontented with their condition. But it is more certain that he moved the doubt relative to God's prohibitory charge in such ambiguous terms, that it was hard to discern whether he intended merely to ask if God had really forbidden the use of that fruit—or to insinuate that the forbidding could not be the true God who had kindly created them but just before—or to suggest that God was an hard master, who had forbidden them to eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden in which he had placed them. (4) Finding that the woman adhered to the command, he endeavoured to make her believe that the threatening was dark in its meaning, and uncertain or false with respect to its execution. (5) He pretended a great regard for her and her husband's welfare, as if he had been extremely desirous of promoting their knowledge and happiness. (6) Perhaps he pretended that himself had acquired what knowledge he had above other brutes by eating of that prohibited fruit. It is certain he attempted to confirm his contradiction of the threatening by a solemn appeal to God. (7) Having prevailed with the woman, he by her means tempted her husband; who complied, not from any such fondness for her as rendered him willing to be damned with her, but as deceived; and the rather, as he saw she did not immediately die upon her eating of the fruit.

This sin of our first parents in eating this forbidden fruit was exceeding great. It contained, (1) Horrid unbelief to such a degree, that the devil, in the form of a beast, was believed in opposition to the solemn declaration of God. (2) The most presumptuous pride, ambition, and bold curiosity; they were in paradise, and lords of the lower world; they knew and enjoyed very much; but nothing would content them, but to be as God in knowledge and happiness. (3) The most shocking ingratitude and discontent; God had given them every thing proper for convenience and delight. He had made them the lords of animals and earth, the companions of angels, and yet they revolted at the inconsiderable reserve of a tree. (4) The most contemptuous apostasy from and rebellion against God. They renounced his covenant of friendship, and threw off all subjection to and professed dependance on him. (5) In this one act the whole law of God was transgressed.—The authority of God, which is the foundation of it, was trampled under foot; the love, which is the complete fulfilment of it, was neglected, and hatred established. Jam. ii. 10. The symbolical law, which was a summary of, and a fence to the moral, was expressly contemned and violated. Nay, each of the moral precepts was plainly broken.—The aggravations of this sin were no less remarkable. (1) It was committed by persons newly made after the image of God; perfectly holy and righteous, and capable of continuing so. (2) It was committed by them just after he had graciously received them into the most honourable covenant of friendship with himself. (3) It was very early committed; perhaps on the same day they were created. Psal. xlix. 12. Heb. (4) It was committed against God's most express command, and when they had the fullest warning of the danger thereby incurred to them and their seed. (5) It was committed in paradise, where God dwelt as in his temple; and where every thing concurred to proclaim his infinite kindness to mankind, and invite to obedience. (6) It was committed upon a very slight, and but one single temptation. (7) It was occasioned by an object of very small importance, which man had no need of in paradise. (8) It respected what had been solemnly separated to the service of God, and so amounted to a sacrilegious robbing of him.—In this manner, 1 Tim. ii. 14. "The woman being deceived, was first in the transgression." Rom. v. 12—19. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for, or in whom, all have sinned.—Death reigned—over them which had not sinned actually after the similitude of Adam's transgression.—Through the offence of one many be dead.—The judgment was by one to condemnation.—By one man's offence death reigned by one.—By the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation.—By one man's disobedience many were made sinners." 1 Cor. xv. 22. "In Adam, by his first sin, all die."

Ver. 7—13. Here we have their wretched evasions after their fall. (1) When their eyes were opened—their consciences being touched with a sense of the heinousness of their sin whereby they had defiled their souls, and of the greatness of that misery which they had brought upon themselves and their posterity, they began to be ashamed of their nakedness, which they now found to be an occasion of sinful motions and affections: and covered with fig-leaves those parts by which the corruption of nature is propagated, upon which for that reason God hath put the deepest impression of shame, that fruit of sin;—and to which he appointed circumcision, the sacrament of remission; regeneration, and mortification, to be applied, ch. xvii. 11. (2) When the son of God, probably in human shape, as a presage of his future incarnation, came to seek and save them, they, sensible of guilt, and dreading punishment, foolishly sought to hide themselves from him.—But, "there is no darkness nor shadow of death where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves," Job xxxiv. 22. Amos ix. 3. Psal. cxxxix. 7—9. Prov. xv. 3. Jer. xxiii. 24. (3) When, to convince them further, he questioned them concerning their conduct, they attempted to excuse themselves and shift the blame upon their tempters; and Adam appears inclined to lay the blame of his fault upon God himself, as if he had given him a tempter under the character of an help meet for him. Job xxxi. 33. Prov. xix. 3.

Ver. 14—19. In this condemnation of the criminals, the serpent, which had been only an irrational instrument, is cursed, as a mark of God's high detestation of the crime; as Exod. xxi. 28, 29. Lev. xx. 15. Perhaps he had formerly moved upon the hinder part of his body, and so was numbered among the wild beasts which eat herbs, and are distinguished from creeping things, ch. i. 25, 30. But now he, and all his kind, must henceforth be reckoned most despicable and detestable. They must creep along the earth, take down part of its dust with their food! Is. lvi. 24. Mic. vii. 17. And must be the stated objects of the hatred of mankind.—But this sentence, directed against the serpent, chiefly respected Satan and his angels. He is cursed above all the irrational animals; is left under the power of invincible folly and malice; and is in disgrace depressed below the vilest of beasts, and appointed to misery, when they have perished in death. He goes on his belly, and eats dust. His actions are base and troublesome to himself, he can never ascend higher than this world. He is trampled under the feet of Christ and his people. His power is restricted to earthly men, or to killing of the bodies of believers; for their soul he cannot kill; nay, their temporal death promotes the destruction of sin in them. He takes such pleasure as he is capable of, in seducing reprobates to the basest wickedness, and in vexing the godly with his abominable temptations. God further threatens, that the very woman whom he had seduced, and many of her posterity, should, by their free justification, and their reconciliation and conversion to God, be made stated enemies to him and his friends, and enabled, through Jesus Christ, to tread on his policy, power, and his life of permitted authority on earth, to his great grief and agony of mind, notwithstanding all he should be able to do to oppose them by temptation or persecution.

But the principal part of Satan's curse lay in the ruin brought on him by Jesus Christ, the eminent seed of the woman, in his redemption of mankind. Jesus Christ is called the seed of the woman; not only to import the reality of his manhood, and his close connection with believers, who are also called her seed, as followers of her in faith and holiness: but chiefly to signify that he was none of Adam's natural posterity represented in the covenant of works, and that he would be born of a virgin. He, by fulfilling the broken law, which is the strength of sin, in our stead, by making atonement for sin, and by removing the curse, has undermined the whole power and authority which Satan had over an elect world, as the executioner of God's justice. And as, by the word of his power, he dislodged him from the bodies of multitudes; and by the word of his grace, in the ministration of the gospel, did and will expel the worship of him from multitudes of nations; so, by the powerful application of his word, Spirit, and blood, to men's consciences and hearts, he casts him and his works down from their throne in them: and, by the influences of his grace, enables his people to resist the devil, and make him flee from them; and to mortify the deeds of the body, that they may live. Thus, 1 Pet. v. 8. "Our adversary the devil goeth about—seeking whom he may devour." Job i. 7. "Going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it." John viii. 41, 44. "Wicked men are of their father the devil, and the lusts of their father they will do." Acts xiii. 10. 1 John iii. 8, 10. Mat. xiii. 38. Rom. ix. 8. "Only the children of the promise are counted for Eve's seed." Gal. iv. 29.—Prov. xxix. 27. "An unjust man is an abomination to the just; and he that is upright in the way is an abomination to the wicked." John xv. 18. Mark xiii. 13.—But, 1 John iii. 5, 8, "The son of God was manifested to take away sin—to destroy the works of the devil." Is. vii. 14. "A virgin did conceive, and bring forth a Son—Immanuel." Dan. ix. 24, 26. "The Messiah shall be cut off, not for himself—but to finish transgression, and make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in an everlasting righteousness." Psal. xci. 13. "The lion—adder—and dragon, shall be trampled under feet." Col. ii. 15. "Having spoiled principalities and powers he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in his cross." Heb. ii. 14. "That through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil."—John xii. 31. "Now shall the devil, prince of this world, be cast out" of his kingdom and authority in and over men. John xvi. 11. Is. xlix. 24—26. Luke x. 18, 19.—Rom. xvi. 20. "God—shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." 1 John ii. 13.—"Ye have overcome the wicked one." 1 Pet. v. 9. Jam. iv. 7. Psal. xci. 13.—While Satan receiveth the ruinous bruise in his head, he bruise the heel of the seed of the woman; that is, he assaults by temptations, stirs up persecution and trouble against the human nature of Christ, and against his people, while they continue on the earth, or their bodies, crushed to the dust of death by his influence, lie in the grave. But at the last day he, and his agent death, shall be quite overthrown, and swallowed up in eternal victory. Heb. iv. 15. 2 Cor. xiii. 4. Is. liii. 4, 5. John xvi. 33. Acts xiv. 22. Is. xxv. 8. 1 Cor. xv. 25—57.

The woman was condemned to a multitude of sorrows and pains, particularly in the conception, bearing, and bringing up, of her children, and to a further degree of subjection to her husband, whom she had overlooked, in parleying with the serpent as her instructor. 1 Tim. ii. 12, 15. 1 Cor. vii. 28. and xiv. 34. Tit. ii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 6. Eph. ii. and iv. Matt. xix. 8, &c. To punish Adam, the proprietor, the whole ground was cursed with respect to its soil and product. The whole lower world, being defiled under its inhabitants, was devoured by the curse, and subjected to the bondage of corruption. Is. xxiv. 5, 6. Rom. viii. 20—22. Gen. v. 29. Job xxxi. 40. Heb. vi. 8. Jer. xii. 13. Himself was condemned to much grief and sorrow. Psal. cxxvii. 2. To eat the herbs of the field instead of the delicious fruits of paradise, and to be occupied in hard labour in the cultivation of them till he died. 1 Thes. 3. 10. Eph. 14. 28. Eccl. i. 2, 13, 4. and ii. 1, 17, 21, 26.

Thus, in these few verses, we have a predictory description of the agency and success of Satan, the destroyer; and of the incarnation, office, state, and work, of Jesus our Redeemer; and, in fine, of the whole fate of this lower world, particularly of mankind, from the fall of Adam till the end of time. Nor can any one seriously review the state of the world—of fields, of persons, of families, of churches, or nations, for almost six thousand years past, but he must perceive a constant and exact accomplishment thereof. Nor are the subsequent predictions, whether of mercies or judgments, any thing else but a gradual opening and explication of this, the latter always pointing out more clearly and circumstantially what had been contained in the former: nor are the histories aught else but an account of the fulfilment.—But one thing is remarkable, that in this declaration of JEHOVAH now before us, the first intimation of a Saviour, and salvation through him for mankind, is not directed to Adam or Eve, but is included in a threatening directed to Satan: plainly intimating that the work of our redemption remarkably aggravates the misery of our original destroyer, and that we are not immediate parties in the covenant of our recovery; nor doth it, either in point of purchase or application, depend on our free will, but on the blood of Jesus Christ, and the free grace of God manifested in him. Rom. v. 20, 21. Eph. ii. 1—8.

Ver. 20. Having heard, and perhaps believed, the promise relative to the seed of the woman, Adam gives his wife a new name, importing her being the mother of Jesus, the quickening spirit, and author of eternal life, and of his living members. John x. 10. and xi. 25.

Ver. 21. The Lord, who had taught them to offer animals in sacrifice, as a figure of Jesus's oblation of himself for the salvation of men, taught them to make coats of the skins, as a memorial, that, by sinfully hearkening to the serpent, they had made themselves as the beasts which perish; and that there could be no salvation from shame and danger but by the garment of Jesus's imputed atonement. Is. lxi. 10. Rom. xiii. 14.

Ver. 22. Perhaps we have here no ironical derision of man's folly, in attempting to become wise as God; but God's affectionate lamentation over his ruined condition, and gracious resolution to turn him out of paradise, lest his vain hopes to fortify himself against death, by eating of the tree of life, should tempt him to neglect the great salvation which was offered to him in the covenant of grace. Rom. ix. 30—32, and x. 2, 3.

Ver. 23, 24. The words used for the turning of man out of paradise import, that he was turned out as a divorced woman from the house of her husband, never to be admitted back to a state of happiness under the broken covenant of works.—Perhaps, while the flaming sword turned every way to keep men from the tree of life, the Divine Majesty, as reconciled in Christ, manifested himself between the cherubims as on his throne of grace, to encourage them to humble and familiar fellowship with himself. Heb. iv. 16.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Be sober, be vigilant, my soul, lest thine adversary the devil get an advantage of thee, and beguile thee through his subtlety. Never encounter him, separated from Jesus, or in thy own strength. Never dally with, but boldly and immediately resist him, and he will flee from thee. Never indulge the smallest doubt of the veracity or importance of what the Lord hath spoken. Let me be always content with such things as I have. It is not in becoming a God, but in enjoying God, as my ALL AND IN ALL, that my happiness consists. In what shame, what misery, sin always issueth! behold how the offended Majesty of heaven flies on the wings of infinite love and mercy for the immediate relief of self-ruined men! and to proclaim, offer, and bestow upon them, redemption through the blood of his Son! But, alas! how they flee from him! and, by covering their transgression, endeavour even to evade his favours!—Blessed Jesus, if thou arraignest me, let me always fly into thy bosom of mercy and kindness; let me gladly entertain thy convictions, and acknowledge my offence, that I may not fall into the condemnation of the devil. Let all the troubles which affect this world call my sin to my remembrance, and deeply affect me with it.—Blessed be JEHOVAH, that his only-begotten Son became the seed of the woman, Immanuel, God with us—that he had his heel bruised;—travailed in pangs of woe, at Love's delivery of an elect world;—was made sin,—made a curse,—a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; was crowned with thorns; and being in an agony did sweat great drops of blood,—that dust he was, and to dust he returned; and all for men,—all for ME! Let my naked soul put on, not the fig-leaves of my self-righteousness, but his law-magnifying atonement.—Bewailing the tremendous FALL of my race, and turning my back on the law as the ministration of death and on this blasted world, as emptied of all enjoyments, let me embrace the better covenant founded on better promises, and seek a better

CHAP. IV.

Already the world is deep marked with the enmity put between the seed of the serpent and the believing progeny of Eve. Here is an account, (1) Of the birth and employ of Cain and Abel, Adam's two eldest sons; 1, 2. (2) Of their religious oblations to God, perhaps on the Sabbath, and of God's acceptance of believing Abel and his offering, and his rejection of Cain and his offering on account of his unbelief and wickedness; 3—5. (3) Enraged at the preference given to his brother, and notwithstanding God's remonstrance of the equity thereof, Cain hates and murders Abel, and insolently denies the fact to God himself; but upon conviction is condemned to banishment from the church, and to be a restless and lasting monument of God's detestation of murderers; 6—15. (4) Banished from the presence and the church of God, Cain in vain attempts to quiet his mind and defeat his curse by building a city, and rearing up a numerous family, in which Lamech was noted for introducing a plurality of wives, and his sons Jabal, Jubal, and Tubal-cain, for tent-making and management of cattle, and for music and smith-work; 16—24. (5) The loss of Abel, a child of promise, is made up to his mother by the birth of Seth; and the public worship of God is more solemnly established, for distinguishing the children of God from those of the serpent; 25, 26.

1 AND Adam knew Eve his wife: and she conceived, and bare *Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

2 And she again bare his brother †Abel. And Abel was †a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.

3 And †in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

4 And Abel, he also brought of †the firstlings of his †flock, and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect unto Abel, and to his offering:

5 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, *Why art thou wroth, and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not †be accepted? and if thou doest not well, †sin lieth at the door. And †unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 And Cain †talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and *slew him.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Cain, *Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I *know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

paradise, where not merely angelical cherubims, but divine arms of infinite and everlasting love, shall for ever shut me up to the most immediate fellowship with Jesus the Tree of Life, which beareth twelve manner of fruits every month, and whose leaves are for the healing of the nations.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. If Eve thought that in Cain she had gotten the man—JEHOVAH, the Messiah, as the words in the Hebrew may bear, she found herself sadly mistaken.

Ver. 3. By instruction from God, more or less express, several of the Mosaic rites were practised long before the giving of the law at Sinai; as the distinction between clean and unclean beasts, chap. vii. 2: priests, altars, burnt-offerings, and drink-offerings; viii. 20. xiv. 18. xxii. 13. and xxxv. 14; abstinence from blood, ix. 4; oil for consecration, xxviii. 18. and xxxv. 14; marriage of brother's widows, xxxviii. 8, 9, 20.

Ver. 4. Heb. xi. 4. "By faith—as to the divine appointment, of which their father had informed them, and by faith, in the promised Messiah, signified thereby, Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; perhaps more proper in its matter, and certainly so in its manner, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts." Perhaps the Lord testified his respect by consuming his sacrifice with fire from heaven; as in the case of Aaron, Lev. ix. 24: Gideon, Judg. vi. 21; David, 1 Chron. xxi. 26; Solomon, 2 Chron. vii. 1; and Elijah, 1 Kings xviii. 38.

Ver. 5—15. Full of rage against God and his brother, Cain's looks became sour, dejected, envious, and angry.—To convince him of his fault, God shewed him that it was his own want of faith and sincerity which hindered his accept-

10 And he said, 'What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's †blood crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou *cursed from the earth, which hath opened her †mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

12 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a †fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, *My punishment is greater than I can bear.

14 Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a †fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

15 And the LORD said unto him, *Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him †sevenfold. And the LORD set *a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

16 ¶ And Cain went out *from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of †Nod, on the east of Eden.

17 And Cain knew his wife, and she conceived, and bare †Enoch: and he builded a city, and *called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch.

18 And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat †Lamech.

19 ¶ And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the †father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the †father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an *instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah.

ance; and that, if he did not repent, his sin would quickly subject him to punishment; And that in temporals Abel continued as subject to him, and was as affectionate as ever. While they talked in the field, Cain, still enraged in his heart, murdered his righteous brother, on account of his piety, Psal. lv. 21. 1 John iii. 12.—Abel's blood cried to God for just vengeance upon Cain, Heb. xii. 24. God, notwithstanding Cain's denial and insulting pretence that he had given him no charge of his brother, condemned him to punishment, and cursed the fields which he should cultivate into a farther degree of barrenness, Psal. ix. 12. Cain never lamented the heinousness of his sin, but complained that it could not be pardoned, and that his punishment was too great; and that now every body would be ready to kill him as the public enemy of mankind, and devoted of God to destruction. But God marked him with some visible token, and denounced a still heavier vengeance against the person who should kill him. Thus, Job xviii. 11. and xv. 20—24. "Terrors made him afraid on every side, and drove him to his feet. He travelled in pain all his days," &c.—Lev. xxvi. 17, 36. "But God slew him not, lest his people should forget;" Psal. lix. 11.

Ver. 19. Contrary to God's original institution of marriage, and the stated equality preserved by his providence among the males and females of mankind, Lamech the descendant of Cain, to gratify his intemperate lust, first took a plurality of wives, and introduced a custom which still remains in many places of the world; and with which not a few of the pious Hebrews, inadvertent to the sinfulness thereof, complied; Gen. xvi. and xxix. 2 Sam. iii. v. 1 Kings xi. &c. But Christ fully laid open the iniquity of this practice, and restored marriage to its original form; Gen. ii. 18—24. Mal. ii. 14, 15. Mat. xix. 8.

23 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice; ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for *I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt:

24 If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, truly Lamech †seventy and seven fold.

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name †Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another ||seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name §Enos: then began men to *call upon the name of the LORD.

* Or, to call themselves by the name of the LORD.

CHAP. V.

Contains a brief account of the woman's seed, the patriarchal progenitors of Christ, in the line of Seth, from Adam to Noah, and his sons. The chief things remarkable are (1) The sad change of the human nature, through the loss of the divine image, in Adam's fall, 1—3. (2) The pious conversation of Enoch, and God's translation of him to heaven without tasting of death; 21—24. (3) The prediction of Lamech, the descendant of Seth, concerning Noah's becoming a distinguished comfort and blessing to the world; 28, 29. The rest merely remarks the time of the birth, life, and death of the patriarchs.

by his brethren the Jews, issued in the curse of their country, the rejection of their church, and the scattering and misery of their nation, as a lasting monument of the vengeance of heaven!

CHAP. V. Ver. 3. Seth was begotten, not in the image of God in which Adam had been created, but in the image of fallen Adam; that is, guilty of and depraved with sin. "He was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did his mother conceive him." Psal. li. 5. "A child of disobedience—by nature a child of wrath, even as others," the profane descendants of Cain not excepted; Eph. ii. 2, 3.—What was born of flesh, corrupted parents, was flesh infected with sinful corruption; John iii. 6. Job xiv. 4. Observe—Believing parents produce children according to their nature, not according to their grace.

Ver. 22—24. The pure use of conjugal life does not hinder the strictest practice of holiness. Amidst all the cares and pleasures of a family Enoch walked with God, as his intimate and glorious Friend and Companion, who manifested to him his amiable perfections in their new-covenant form, and bestowed his gracious blessings and influences upon him; Mic. vi. 8. Gen. vi. 9. He walked after God, imitating him as his perfect and engaging pattern, and always dependant on his drawing and supporting grace; Deut. xiii. 4. Song i. 4. and viii. 5. He walked before God as his Master, Witness, and future Judge, always deeply impressed with a lively sense of his authority, presence, and purity; ch. xvii. 1. and xxiv. 40. Psal. xvi. 8. and cxvi. 9. He walked worthy of the Lord, fruitful in every good word and work; answerable to what God was to him, and had done or had promised to do for him; Col. i. 10;—answerable to his clear foresight of the future judgment; Jude xiv. 15. 2 Pet. iii. 11, 14. He walked in Christ, living by faith on him, and through the grace of God denying ungodliness and worldly lusts: and living soberly, righteously, and godly; Col. ii. 6. Gal. ii. 20. Tit. ii. 11, 12. Publicly to approve and reward his holiness, and to render him a type of Christ's ascension, and a pledge of the complete and eternal glorification of the saints, God took him out of this world to heaven, both soul and body! Heb. xi. 5. "By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death; and was not found on earth, for God had translated him to heaven; for he had this testimony—that he pleased God."

CHAP. VI.

In the days of Enosh we heard of the professors of the true religion distinguishing themselves for the Lord. Now we see them, to their own ruin, mingling themselves with the wicked. Here is (1) God so highly provoked with the unequal marriages contracted by the descendants of Seth and other professors of the true religion, with the profane and heathenish daughters of the Cainites, and with the violence and oppression ensuing thereon, together with the universal corruption of nature indulged by them, that he condemned them and the whole earth to be drowned with a flood—after they should have had an hundred and twenty years given them for a space to repent, 1—7. 11, 12, 13, 17. (2) Noah, a man eminently righteous in that generation, highly favoured of God, and made the publisher of his purpose, and the mean of preserving a sample of every living creature on the earth by the ark which God directed him to build; 8—10.

Ver. 29. Noah brought rest and comfort by the building of his ark, in which the seminary of both the world and the church did rest, and was saved; Gen. vii. viii. and ix. And, by his inventions in husbandry, he freed men from much of their toil; occasioned by the curse on the ground; Gen. ix. 20. with iii. 17, 18. And, as a type and a preacher of righteousness, he was a mean of directing them to everlasting rest and consolation in Christ; 1 Pet. iii. 18—20.
Ver. 32. Japheth was the eldest of Noah's sons; ch. x. 21. and Ham the youngest, ch. ix. 24; but Shem is first mentioned; because of his piety and his being one of the Messiah's progenitors; and because his posterity are the principal subject of Moses' writings: for the same reason Abram, though born sixty years later than Haran, is put first in the family of Terah; ch. xi. 26. with xii. 4.

In the early ages of the world, Providence wisely ordered it that people should live long, for the speedy replenishing of the world, and for the more effectual propagation of the true religion and other useful knowledge; and, no doubt, the superior wholesomeness of the air, and of their diet, and their temperance in the use of it, contributed to promote this longevity.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Whilst I read, let me with deep concern cry out, How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed! Behold, how death reigns, through sin, from Adam to Noah; and how sure, though sometimes slowly, it strikes!—Ah! what a nothing must I, my age, and all my labours, be in his sight, before whom the long, long lives of ten patriarchs, and a replenished world, make so insignificant a figure! To be born, to breathe, to rear up a family, and give up the ghost, how mean! Yet this is all of man! And how few, in a replenished world, are worthy of God's notice! Let therefore Enoch, who walked with God, or rather Jesus, the dedicated servant of God;—Jesus, who set the Lord always before him, and did always the things which pleased the Father;—Jesus, who foretold the breaking forth of the floods of wrath upon Judah, and the world of the ungodly;—Jesus, who clearly predicted the last judgment, and the procedure in it: and who, having by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;—be my pattern in life, and my forerunner to glory! And let him be my rest and consolation, to comfort me concerning my labour and toil, to take away the curse from all my enjoyments, to afford security and rest through all my trials, till he bring me to his new world of righteousness and glory!

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1, 2. The descendants of Cain, or other profane persons who had joined them, are here called men, because they had quite cast off all regard to God and his ways, and the professors of the true religion are called the sons of God; they had a visible relation to him, lived in his church, and professed to be born from above, and to be ready to yield a cheerful and evangelical obedience to his commands; ch. iv. 26. Dent. xiv. 1. 2 Cor. vi. 18. These wantonly gazed upon the daughters of Cain, who seem to have been extremely handsome and jovial: Judg. xiv. 1. 2 Pet. ii. 14. Mat. v. 28: and regardless of God's direction or allowance, they followed their fancies and 14—16. 18—21. (3) In the faith of God's predictions of the flood, and in obedience to his command, Noah prepares the ark for that effect; 22.

AND it came to pass, when *men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,
2 That the †sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all whom they chose.
3 And the LORD said, †My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his †days shall be an hundred and twenty years.
4 There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after †that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them: the same became mighty men, which were of old men of †renown.
5 ¶ And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that †severy imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil* continually.
6 And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.
7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; †both man and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.
8 But Noah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.
9 ¶ These are the †generations of Noah: Noah was a just man, and †perfect in his generations, and Noah †walked with God.

married them.—Such unequal marriages of professors with the carnal and profane are expressly prohibited by the law of God, and have been a common plague to families, nations, and churches: 1 Cor. vii. 39. 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15. Mal. ii. 11. Deut. vii. 3, 4. Exod. xxxiv. 16. Josh. xxiii. 12. Gen. xxiv. 3. xxvi. 34, 35. xxvii. 46. xxviii. 1, 2. and xxxviii. 2 Sam. iii. 3. with xiii. 28, 29. and xv. 1 Kings xi. Ezra ix. 1, 2, 3, 12. Neh. xiii. 24—27.

Ver. 3. God's Spirit strove with them by his inward good motions, by the checks which he caused their consciences to give them, and by the counsels and warnings given them by Noah, the preacher of righteousness, or others; 1 Pet. iii. 18, 19. 2 Pet. ii. 5. Neh. ix. 30.—They were flesh, not only frail and weak in their nature, but exceedingly and obstinately corrupt, carnal, and sensual in their heart and life,—under the reign of indwelling sin, which is called flesh; Rom. viii. 1, 4, 7; 8. Jude 19. and mad on practising the manifest works of the flesh;—adultery, fornication, &c. Gal. v. 19—21.

Ver. 4. These giants, or huge-bodied men, in the pride and confidence of their stature and strength, became despisers of God and goodness, and oppressors of mankind.

Ver. 5. Jer. xvii. 9, 10. “The heart is deceitful above all things, and †desperately wicked. I, the Lord, search the heart, and try the reins, to †give to every man according to his works.” Rom. vii. 7; “The carnal mind †is enmity against God, and is not subject to his law, neither indeed can be.” Mat. xv. 19; “Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, †fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies.” Psal. lvi. 3; “The wicked †are estranged from the womb; they go astray as soon as they are born.” And liii. 1—3: “The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God—corrupt †are they, they have done abominable iniquity—God looked down from †heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God. Every one of them is gone back, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no not one.” Psal. xiv. 1—4. Is. i. 2—6. Hos. iv. 1, 2. Mark vii. 21—23. Rom. i. 28—31. iii. 10—19. and viii. 8. Gal. v. 19—21. Eph. 2. 1—3. Tit. iii. 3.

Ver. 6, 7. God's repentance denotes not any change of his purpose or will within himself.—In this respect he is unchangeable, and cannot repent; Mal. iii. 6. Num. xxiii. 19. 1 Sam. xv. 29. Jam. i. 17. But it denotes the change of his providence correspondent with his fixed purpose; 1 Sam. xv. 11. Psal. cvi. 45. Jer. xviii. 10. Deut. xxxii. 36. Hos. xi. 8. It is a word suited to our capacity; and here it denotes God's detestation of sin, and his fixed resolution to punish it, after man had made himself quite another thing than God had made him at first.

Ver. 8. To find grace in the eyes of the Lord is to be freely loved and delighted in by him, in order to preservation from some remarkable destruction, or to the bestowal of some distinguished blessing; Gen. xix. 19. Exod. xxxiii. 12, 13. 2 Sam. xv. 25. Luke i. 30. Acts vii. 46. 2 Tim. i. 18. Heb. iv. 16. Thus, Prov. viii. 35; “Whoso findeth Christ findeth life, and shall obtain †favour of the Lord.” And xii. 2. “A good man obtaineth favour of the †Lord.”—And iii. 4. and xviii. 22.

Ver. 9. Noah was a just man, justified by faith in the imputed righteousness of Christ; Hab. ii. 4. Heb. xi. 7. Rom. i. 17. iii. 22, 24. v. 1. and viii. 33.

The ark being finished, (1) Noah and his family, with seven pair of those animals that were fit for food and for sacrifice, and one pair of others, after holding themselves seven days in readiness, enter the ark, on the 17th day of the 2d month of the 600th year of Noah's life; and God so shut them in as no water could penetrate to them, 1—9. 13—16. (2) Hereupon the fountains of the great depth, which is in the bowels of the earth, brake forth; and the clouds, especially for the space of forty days, poured down such torrents of rain, that, in five months time, the highest mountains in the world were covered with water to the depth of nine yards and a quarter; by which the whole of mankind, which might amount to twelve, if not to eighty thousand millions, and all the terrestrial animals, perished, those few in the ark only excepted.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Behold the dreadful fruits of professors' intimacy and matrimonial connexions with the carnal and prophane! How sin transforms this world into a kind of hell, filled with corruption, wickedness, and disorder! Behold how quickly it ripens it for a destructive deluge of divine wrath! How long and how patiently God bears with the manners of these monsters of impiety, after they seem ripened for ruin! but how sad their case when his Spirit ceaseth to strive with their consciences for their conversion and reformation!—What a blessing are upright saints in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation! How highly regarded and honoured of God! And what distinguished means of preserving families, nations, churches, or even the world, from utter ruin!

CHAP. VIII.

In the preceding chapter, we left the world in ruins and the church in straits. Here the former is repaired and the other enlarged. (1) God, by a wind, dispels the clouds, while the fountains are restrained. Hence the water gradually returned to the bowels of the earth, or was exhaled into the air, and the surface of the earth was dried. After sixteen days ebbing the ark rested on the top of a mountain. After sixty the tops of the mountains became visible. After forty, or perhaps rather an hundred, Noah sent forth a raven and dove to procure him intelligence of the abatement of the water. After one hundred and sixty-eight the earth was mostly cleared of the water; but, being still soft and muddy, it took fifty-seven days more to render it habitable for men; 1—14. (2) At God's command Noah and his family, and all the animals, go forth from the ark, after they had been in it a year and ten days; 15—19. (3) Hereupon Noah erects an altar, and offers a thank-offering, which the Lord accepts, and promiseth never more to drown the world for man's sin, but to give the respective seasons of seed-time and harvest, summer and winter, day and night, in their due order; 20—22.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Behold, my soul, the goodness and severity of God! His goodness—in saving the man whom his own grace had qualified for that mercy—in saving others, even the wicked part of his family, for his sake!—in saving the brute animals in proportion to their serviceableness to man!—in adding seven days space of repentance to the wretched profligates who had abused the former reprieve of 120 years! and, after all, bringing the flood gradually on them, for their awakening, and to give them still further space to repent! But let me tremble at his righteous judgments! How the clouds from above, the wells from below, so long beneficial to mankind, now concur to destroy them! What multitudes, who had despised his warnings, now perish by his hand! And how ineffectual is every attempt to escape! While the ark of God's testament, his new covenant, is open, let me escape thither for my life, and bring with me, of my fellow sinners, all whom I can. The day is at hand when the earth and the works thereof shall be burnt up, and the door of mercy for ever shut. CHAP. IX.

Here we have (1) God's covenant of preservation with Noah and his family further explained, importing, that they should be multiplied for replenishing the earth; that the brute animals should stand in awe of them; that they might eat the flesh of animals, but not with the blood; that the earth should never more be drowned with a flood—of which the rainbow, though a sign of rain, should be the infallible token; 1—17. and requiring them to take care of human life, by punishing murderers with death; 5, 6. (2) An account of Noah, his family, his employment, his drunkenness, the behaviour of his sons towards him in it, and their correspondent blessings and curse; and, in fine, of his death; 18—29.

Ver. 20. It was common for the patriarchs to erect altars and offer sacrifices of thanksgiving for mercies received, and for the expiation of their own guilt; as in the case of Abraham; ch. xii. 7, 8. and xiii. 18; Isaac, xxvi. 25; and Jacob, xxxv. 7; and Moses, Exod. xvii. 15. These were typical of Christ, our New Testament altar, as the sacrifices were of his oblation of himself; Heb. xii. 10—15.

"Though we have sinned with our fathers—have committed iniquity—have done wickedly—nevertheless he saved, for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known." Ezek. xvi. 60—63.—"Nevertheless, notwithstanding innumerable and grievous provocations, I will remember my covenant with thee—I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done." And xx. 4—44. "I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings." Compare xxxvi. 16—32. Rom. v. 20, 21. "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound;—that as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign through righteousness unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Ver. 22. How remarkably exact over all the world hath been the fulfilment of this prediction for more than 4000 years past.

merciful designs! As he never wants instruments of affliction and ruin, neither of gracious deliverances. Whatever means I may use of information or of affecting my conscience and heart, let me in all my ways acknowledge God, and wait for his direction out of straits as well as in them! If I receive deliverance, let my heart be lifted up in his way, and my thanksgiving be for him in Zion! Let my hopes of future favours wholly depend upon his sovereign mercy, not on my own or others reformation: for, alas! blessed chastised, we are flagrant rebels still! But, in this patriarch's ark, do I discern Jesus Christ! He is the absolutely necessary mean of our escaping the justly deserved and destructive floods of God's everlasting wrath. Every thing in his mediatorial person and office was devised and appointed of God. He was gradually reared up in promises before he was actually incarnate, and gradually he finished his all-covering atonement. How wide is the gate of access to him revealed in the gospel! and what abundant room is there in his saving power, his love, his blood, his intercession, his covenant and promise, for the dangerous sinners of mankind! His stories are his ancient undertakings, humiliation, and his endless glory. No light is in him but what is of a spirit and heavenly nature. By exposing himself to the deluging rains, the fearful billows of his Father's wrath: to depths wherein was no standing, till at last he rested in his grave, and at his Father's right hand; he bears up and saves the chosen. How many despise him and his atonement! But, by the power of God, what multitudes, both of Jews and Gentiles, are saved by him, and made heirs of new promises, inhabitants of a new-covenant state and an eternal world of blessedness!—And is not the same a figure of the gospel-church, in which, reared by Jesus' labours of love, the nations of them that are saved do live this world, till the winter be past, and the floods be over and gone! And here, period, when, after tossings unnumbered, the Lord shall call us forth into the fields, our house eternal in the heavens, where rains, where storms, where night, where winters, where curses, never enter!

To manifest the efficacy of God's blessing on Noah's family in the multiplication thereof, and to prepare us for observing the accomplishment of Noah's predictions concerning his seed, we have here an account, (1) Of the posterity of Japheth; 2—5. (2) Of the posterity of Ham, particularly of Nimrod, the first monarch; 6—20. (3) Of the posterity of Shem; 21—32. With some hints of their respective residences; 5, 10, 19, 30.

NOW these are the "generations of the sons of Noah; Shem, Ham, and Japheth: and unto them were sons born after the flood.

* They were Greeks.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 25—27. These predictions are greatly extensive; almost every prediction in scripture relative to the Egyptians, Canaanites, Tyrians, and Zidonians, is comprehended in this repeated curse of Canaan. Almost every prediction relative to the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Arabs, and especially what relates to the Jewish nation, and Jesus Christ, is included in the blessing of Shem. Almost every prediction relative to the Greeks, Romans, Goths, Tartars, and Turks, and especially what relates to the gospel-church among the Gentiles, is contained in the blessing of Japheth—The fulfilment of these predictions is no less remarkable. Much of the scriptures of the Old and New Testament, much of the history of nations, is no more than an account of it.

The descendants of Ham, by his sons Cush, Mizraim, Phut, and Canaan, peopled Africa and part of Western Asia.—For about four thousand years past the bulk of the Africans have been abandoned of Heaven to the most gross ignorance, rigid slavery, stupid idolatry, and savage barbarity. Scarcely ever hath a state formed of them made any respectable figure, the Egyptians and Carthaginians excepted; and even they had little dominion over any part of the descendants of Shem or Japheth. For many ages the northern parts of Africa were enslaved or harassed by the Assyrian, Chaldean and Persian, descendants of Shem; and next by the Greeks, but especially the Roman and Vandal descendants of Japheth. For eleven hundred years past they have been enslaved by the Ishmaelite Saracens descended from Shem, or by the Seljukian and Ottoman Turks descended of Japheth. And what multitudes of the Western Africans are annually bought for slaves by the English, the Spaniards, the French, Portuguese, or Dutch, and condemned to the hardest drudgery in their American plantations! It was Canaan, I suppose, who first saw the nakedness of Noah, and told his father of it. His posterity first settled in the west of Asia, and the curse had pursued them in a still more remarkable manner. About A. M. 2079, Chedorlaomer, and his Elamite descendants of Shem, rendered tributary the Canaanitish kingdoms of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar. Upon their revolt, he invaded and pillaged their country; Gen. xiv. Not long after they, Zoar excepted, were destroyed with fire and brimstone from heaven, for their unnatural lewdness and other abominations; Gen. xix. The Hebrews, chiefly under Moses, Joshua, and Barak, cut off most of the other Canaanites, and seized on their country; Num. xxi. Josh. vi.—xix. Judg. iv. The Gibeonites and others, whose lives were spared, were subjected to slavery; Josh. ix. Judg. i. 2 Sam. v. Solomon had more than 150,000 of them employed as slaves in the building of the temple, 1 Kings ix. 20, 22. and v. 15, 16. They who settled in the north-west of Canaan, and formed the once flourishing states of Tyre and Sidon, were, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Persians, but chiefly by the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and Turks, reduced to great misery and bondage, till at last they were totally ruined. Is. xxiii. Ezek. xxvi—xxviii. They who fled from Joshua, or afterwards to Northern Africa, and formed the Carthaginian and other states, were after much contention and mutual enslavement, reduced by the Romans to the basest servitude and misery: and for about two thousand years that country hath been one continued scene of slavery to the Romans, Vandals, Saracens, or Turks. The Phœnician Canaanites, who, pushing their fortunes, settled in the Mediterranean islands, or in Greece, Italy, or on the border of the Euxine sea, have shared a similar fate of thralldom and misery from the Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Normans, or Turks.

But the countries of Persia, Assyria, Chaldea, Lydia, Syria, Arabia, India, and I suppose most of China, were peopled by the posterity of Elam, Ashur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram, sons of Shem. The blessings bestowed upon them by God have been remarkable. The most rich or fertile parts of the world fell to their share. They formed the Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, and Saracen monarchies, which in their turns enslaved the offspring of Canaan. For two thousand years, from the death of Noah to that of Christ, the knowledge of the true religion, and the new-covenant relation to God as his church and people, were almost wholly confined to them, particularly to the Jews; and from them the Messiah the Lord from heaven, had his human descent; and from them the apostolic founders of the gospel-church did spring.

The sons of Japheth were Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras. Their descendants, the Celts or Gauls, the Tartars, Medes, Greeks, Romans, Goths, Turks, &c. prodigiously multiplied and peopled the whole of Europe, the northern half of Asia, and I suppose most of America. For many ages they have been settling themselves in the original habitation of the posterity of Shem. The Medes, assisted by the Chaldeans, overturned the Assyrian empire: and afterwards assisted by the Persians, whom they had subdued, ruined the Chaldean. Perhaps it was their Scythian brethren, who about two hundred years after founded the powerful monarchy of the Parthians in Persia, and the places about; while multitudes of the overstocked Gauls from Europe invaded Asia, and partly took up their residence in Mesopotamia. About three hundred and thirty years before the birth of our Saviour, the Greeks under Alexander overrun Asia to the river Indus, and for several ages held it in subjection. Next, the Romans pushed their conquests into Syria, Assyria, and Canaan; and for more than seven hundred years retained what they could of it. For many ages the Tartarian Huns and Turks continued to pour themselves into Persia and the countries about. In the eleventh century of the Christian reckoning, the Seljukian Turks formed themselves into the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, and quickly extended their dominion as far as the Indus. Meanwhile Mahmud-Gazni, with an army of Tartars and others, invaded India and founded there a mighty empire, which continued about two hundred years. In the 13th century Jenghiz Kan and his sons, with their Tartar troops, conquered the greater part of Asia. The empires which they founded in China and in Persia continued about nine generations. In the beginning of the 15th century, Tamerlain with his Tartars overran great part of Asia, and founded an empire in Persia, and another in Western India, which still subsists under the Great Mogul. For about three hundred years the Ottoman Turks have been masters of Assyria, Syria, Canaan, and the places about; while the Portuguese, the Spaniards, the English, the Dutch, the Danes, and French, have been rendering themselves masters of islands or settlements, almost innumerable, in the East Indies. Thus there is scarce one single country of note which originally pertained to the offspring of Shem, but is now possessed or governed by the enlarged posterity of Japheth, Arabian Hejaz excepted.

Multitudes too of the posterity of Japheth in Asia and America, but chiefly in Europe, have been PERSUADED of God to embrace the true religion and become his church, ever since the Jews were rejected. The far greater part of that race known to us do, and for many ages have, at least in word, made profession of the Christian faith, while very few of the descendants of Shem or Ham have so much as pretended it. Nor do I remember that the Christian religion ever had a public establishment from one of them, the Abyssinians excepted.—What an exact, an expiatory, and confirming counterpart is the whole providence of God to his word! What understanding of the divine authenticity of the scriptures, and of the love and faithfulness of God, may I attain by a wise and careful observation thereof!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—Lord, what is man, that thou shouldst be so mindful of him and his concerns! that thou shouldst so care for his welfare and his life! that thou shouldst so familiarly covenant with him, and so often repeat thy declarations, for the strengthening and confirmation of his faith! May I always accept thy favours with thankfulness, and obey thy commandments with cheerfulness. But ah, how quickly do we forget his mighty works! how fearfully do the best stumble and fall, if the Lord uphold them not mightily! How readily do fools trample on every tie of relation or duty, in order to make a mock of sin! But dreadful is the curse, lasting and extensive the vengeance, which awaits those who condemn and deride their aged parents; while blessings shall be on their head who regard them, and cover their infirmities. But let me not bid adieu to the dying patriarch, till in him I contemplate the great God my Saviour! His name is a bed of rest, and source of comfort. He is the distinguished favourite of heaven. In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation he dared to be singularly good: at once he gave an unblemished pattern of uprightness, and boldly preached righteousness in the great congregation. To him mankind owe their recovery from ruin. By him the church is gradually built up as the mean of our salvation, and his little flock are rendered true members thereof.—Upon the saviour of his sweet-smelling sacrifice God hath promised no more to curse the elect. With him and his seed is the new covenant infallibly established; and to them are the inheritance and rules of the new-covenant state conferred. By him is the church, the vineyard of the Lord of hosts, planted and cultivated; and in his word is irreversibly declared the everlasting fate of his professed seed. Behold how those who love his person, and hide the infirmities of his saints, are blessed with all spiritual blessings! Behold how the curse of sin pursues both wicked Jews and carnal professors, who stumble at this corner-stone, who turn his grace into licentiousness, and the infirmities of his saints into ridicule! and what everlasting ruin it entails upon them!

CHAP. XI.

Already the seed of the serpent, and the believing seed of the woman, again distinguish themselves. Here is, (1) A joint attempt of Nimrod and the wicked part of mankind to render themselves famous; and rebelliously to prevent their being scattered on the earth, by building a city and a tower—with the Lord's display of his equity, wisdom, and power, in confounding their language, and obliging them to stop their work, and spread themselves through the world; 1—9. (2) The history of the church and the progenitors of Christ, particularly in the family of Terah, who died after he set out for Canaan, at the commandment of God, to Abram his son; 10—32.

3 And they said one to another, *Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had ^bbrick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.

4 And they said, *Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach ^cunto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

5 And the LORD ^ccame down to see the city, and the tower, which the children of men builded.

6 And the LORD said, ¶Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

7 Go to, let ^cus go down, and there ^cconfound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.

8 So the LORD ^cscattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called †Babel, because the LORD did there REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—How quickly God can repair the remarkable breaches in external things, and make families increase and spread when he pleaseth. But alas! how soon human pride, and lust of dominion revive, notwithstanding the most tremendous judgments of God upon them! Neither floods, nor flames, nor sword, nor famine, nor pestilence, but Je- blood and Spirit alone, can extirpate our sinful inclinations. How insatiable do carnal men covet and grasp at power or property! and the more they have, the more they hunt after! But let me remember, that all my hunting after these vanities is against, as well as before, the Lord. How often God prospers the wicked under his curse, that he may ripen them for destruction, and spare their wealth for his people! But much happier is it to be with Eber, father of saints, than to be with Ham, a parent of ambitious and tyrannical hunters; or of numerous Canaanites, devoted to misery and ruin.

two hundred and seven years, and begat

2126. 25 And Nahor lived after he begat
Terah an hundred and nineteen years,

2056. 26 And Terah lived seventy years, and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

2056. 27 ¶ Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chaldees.

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: the name of Abram's wife was Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah and the father of Isaac.

30 But Sarai was barren; she had no child.

31 ¶ And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son, Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan: and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there.

32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

CHAP. XII.

Abram had begun to wander from his native soil, but had stopt by the way. Here, (1) authorized by the trying call and encouraged by the promises of God, relative to the multiplication and blessing of his family, and the blessing of all nations in Christ his seed, he and Lot his nephew with their families, remove from Haran in Mesopotamia to Canaan; whither the Lord welcomes him, and encourages him amidst his bad neighbours, by a new visit, and by a solemn grant of the country;
here therefore he builds two altars for the service of God;
1—9. But, (2) distrusting the providence of God in a famine, without asking counsel of the Lord, he retires into Egypt;
and there, doubting of the divine protection, he and Sarai pretend to be brother and sister: in consequence hereof Abram is loaded with presents, but Sarai's chastity is endangered: till at last the providence of God, by plagues, convinced the king of the truth, and disposed him to restore her to her husband, and send them both in safety out of his kingdom, with all that they had; 10—20.

NOW the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

2 And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 ¶ So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How awful the presumption of sinners, who dare attempt to withstand the known command and purpose of the Almighty! Deeply should it affect us that we find the serpent's seed so harmonious and active in wickedness, while the children of promise are so divided and inactive in holiness! But with equity and ease the Lord frustrates the devices of the crafty, and turneth the counsel of the froward headlong, while he causes men's sinful attempts towards fame and power effectually to issue in their infamy and weakness. What a mercy that, as the confusion of tongues effected the dispersion of mankind, the miraculous gift of tongues contributed to spread the gospel, to gather sinners to Jesus, and to build up his church throughout the earth! Behold how the blessing of Noah begins to operate in the family of Shem, and will do till after the ascension of Christ!

How proper to remark the providences of God in the names of our children, or otherwise! How precious are the saints, the churches, in God's sight! They are allowed far more room in his inspired registers than all the world besides.
If Terah, who set out for Canaan, died by the way, let me tremble, lest, a promise being left me of entering into God's rest, I should seem to come short of it!—tremble, lest I should be almost, but never altogether, a Christian!
not far from the kingdom of God, but never a true member thereof here, or partaker of it hereafter!

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. While Abram was in Ur of the Chaldees God appeared to him, probably in human shape; Acts vii. 2. as he did at least eight times afterwards; Gen. xii. 6, 7. xiii. 3, 4. xv. 1. xvii. 1. xxi. 12. and xxii.

some time past had been infected with idolatry; Josh. xxiv. 2. 2 Cor. vi. 17.
Rev. xviii. 4. Is. xli. 2. Neh. ix. 7. He readily surrendering all for the sake of Christ, Psal. xlv. 11. Luke xiv. 26. in obedience to the divine command, and relying on his direction and protection, went forth, not knowing whither the Lord intended to lead him; Heb. xi. 8. But as they had stopt too long in Haran, I suppose the call here mentioned was one which he received anew after the death of his father.

Ver. 2. Abram was made a great nation. His posterity by Ishmael, by the sons of Keturah, and by Esau, were exceedingly numerous; ch. xvi. 10. xvii.

20. xxi. 13. xxv. 1—18. and xxxvi. Num. xxxi. Judg. vi. and vii. His seed of promise, by Jacob, were as the stars of heaven and the dust of the earth in multitude; ch. xiii. 16. xv. 5. xxii. 17. xxviii. 3. 14. and xxxii. 12. Num. i. and xxiii. 10. Heb. xi. 12. 1 Chron. xxi. 1 Kings iv. 20. 2 Chron. xvii. Jer. xxxiii.
22. His spiritual seed, followers of his faith and obedience, are still more numerous, a multitude which no man can number; Psal. ii. 8, 9. xxii. 27—30.
lxii. and xcvi. Is. xlii. xlix. and lx. Rev. vii. 4—9. and xi. 15.—All the spiritual children of Jesus, his eminent seed, are included herein; Is. liii. 10—12.
God blessed Abram, (1) with the numerous seed mentioned; (2) with Canaan as the future property of part of them; (3) with Christ, as his eminent seed;
Gal. iii. 16; (4) with all spiritual blessings in Christ; Gal. iii. 14. with Eph.
i. 3. Abram was a blessing, (1) to his friends and servants, who were instructed by him; Gen. xiv. 14. and xviii. 19; (2) to his posterity, who were blessed for his sake; Exod. iii. 6—8. Lev. xxvi. 42. Gen. xvii. 20; (3) to the world, as an eminent pattern of faith and holiness; Rom. iv. and as the progenitor of Christ the Saviour; Gal. iii. 13. 16.—God did and will remarkably befriend and prosper the friends of Abram and his natural seed, but especially of Jesus Christ and his spiritual seed; and did and will remarkably punish their enemies; Josh.
ii. 9. Gen. xv. 13, 14. Exod. xvii. 8—16. Mat. x. 42. and xxv. 41—46.—All the families of the earth are blessed in Abram. He was of great service to the Canaanites in imparting revelation to some of them, or in setting before them all an engaging example of virtue. His seed of promise, and especially his spiritual seed, are useful on that account, and have been and are still the means of the prosperity or protection of nations; Is. vi. 13. and xix. 24, 25. Mat. xxiv.
22. But it is properly in his seed (Christ) that men are blessed. Multitudes of nations receive much outward happiness, and the dispensation of gospel ordinances, in consequence of his undertaking for his people; Mat. xxiv. 24. Is. xxxv. xlix. lx. and vi. 13. And believers, gathered out of all nations, are blessed in him, with temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings; Gal. iii. 16.
Acts iii. 25, 26. Eph. i. 3. Psal. lxxii. 17—19. Is. xlv. 17, 25. It is easy to see that the subsequent promises and threatenings, nay the doctrine and laws mentioned in scripture, are but an enlarged exposition of these two verses: and the whole fate of the Jewish and gospel church, nay of the saints in heaven and damned in hell, are but one continued fulfilment thereof.

five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram passed through the land unto the place of 'Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the 'Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of 'Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

9 And Abram journeyed, *going on still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was a 'famine in the land: and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the 'famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art 'a fair woman to look upon:

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife: and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

13 "Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister; that it may be well with me for thy sake: and my soul shall live because of thee.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians beheld the woman, that she was very fair.

15 The 'princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before 'Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house.

16 And he entreated Abram well for her sake; and he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and she-asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD^s plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, 'What is this that thou hast done unto me? Why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

CHAP. XIII.

Here (1) Abram, with great riches, returns to Canaan, and by slow marches arrives at the altar he had built near Beth-el, where he again solemnly worships the Lord; 1-4. (2) While the Heathen Canaanites and Perizzites retain the best pastures, Abram's and Lot's herdmen contend about the rest; but by the prudence and condescension of Abram, the difference is composed; 5-9. (3) In consequence of this agreement, Lot, for the sake of fat pasture, retires among the wicked Sodomites, and Abram removes further westward into Canaan; 5-9. (4) Abram is scarcely deserted by Lot his nephew when God pays him a new visit, gives him a new promise of Canaan, and of a numerous seed; in consequence of which Abram retires southward to the plain of Mamre, where he erects another altar for the service of God; 14-18.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the south.

2 And Abram was^b very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys from the south, even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto the 'place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there Abram called on the name of the LORD.

5 ¶ And Lot also, who went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

6 And the 'land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 And there was a 'strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle. And the 'Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, 'Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be^{*} brethren.

9 Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will Surely no discouragement, or apparent enemy, should ever make us to distrust the promise or protection of such a God! How gracious, frequent, and familiar, are the visits of God to such as remember him in all their way! May his kindness attach my heart to his service, as the first, the principal part of all, of my business in life! Let no earthly enjoyment, no not a land flowing with milk and honey, be the portion of my cup; but JEHOVAH himself, as the Canaan above, where wants are never known! Never let me, for the sake of carnal relief or advantage, quit the place or the station in which God has fixed me without his plain warrant. If I presume to direct my own way, I chuse out my own lot, let me dread snares to my conscience, and plagues upon my concerns! If in such cases the Lord hath ever granted me deliverance, let me bewail my folly, and praise him for the sovereignty of his grace!

Noah's curse on Canaan takes effect, and Lot finds reason to repent his carnal choice of his dwelling. Here are, (1) Five kingdoms of Canaan reduced to servitude by the Elamite descendants of Shem, and the neighbouring countries greatly ravaged; 1—11. (2) Informed that Lot his nephew had shared in their fate, was stripped of his substance, and carried off a prisoner, Abram arms his own servants, and with these and some allies routs the conquering army, recovers Lot with the rest of the captives, and the spoil; 12—16. (3) In his return he is solemnly blessed by Melchizedek, an extraordinary priest of God, and his fatigued troops are feasted and refreshed; while he, in his generosity, refuseth to take for himself any part of the spoil, though the whole of it is offered to him: 17—24.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, ^bAbram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.

2 And Abram said, LORD God, 'what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, 'Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, ^cone born in my house is mine heir.

4 ¶ And behold the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but 'he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, [§]So shall thy seed be.

6 ¶ And he ^bbelieved in the LORD; and he counted to him for righteousness.

7 ¶ And he said unto him, I am the LORD ⁱthat brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees[†], to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, LORD God, ^kwhereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another; but the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcasses Abram drove them away.

12 ¶ And when the sun was going down, a ^ldeep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety ^mthat thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years:

14 And ⁿalso that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance.

office from any creature, nor leaves it to another. In and by him we are blessed of God with all spiritual and everlasting blessings: and with his bread and wine, presented in the gospel, his flesh, which is meat indeed, and his blood, which is drink indeed, he refresheth our souls, while we are engaged in and after our warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. And to him is due, from every minister and saint, the voluntary tithes of everlasting praise.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. Fear not; indulge no slavish or excessive terror on account of thine enemies, wants, or dangers; or on account of the awful appearances of God; Is. xliii. 1. and xli. 10. Mat. xxviii. 5. Rev. i. 18. I am thy shield, infallible to protect thee; Psal. iii. 3. lxxxiv. 11. and xci. 4.; and thy exceeding great but gracious reward of thy piety and love, giving myself, in all that I am and have, to thee, as thine everlasting all and in all; Prov. xi. 18. Ver. 2, 3. What avails it what outward comforts be promised me, so long as I have no child of my own, but only this Syrian servant, to be my heir.

Ver. 8—17. Moved by the Spirit of God, he asked this sign.—The beasts he presented to God were emblems of his seed:—the heifer prefigured them in their patience, labour, and proneness to back-sliding; Hos. iv. 16: the goat in their mischievousness and lust; Jer. v. 7, 8; the ram in their strength and fortitude; Num. xxiv. 8, 9; the doves in their simplicity and harmlessness, in their purest state; Ps. lxxxiv. 19. The division of the four-footed animals (1) represented the torn condition of his seed, by the division of their kingdom, &c. 1 Kings xi. 12, 13; (2) ratified the covenant made with him and his seed, in God's passing between the pieces, in the symbol of the burning lamp.—The pieces being laid over against one another imported that God would in due time join the separated and scattered Hebrews into one body; Ezek. xxxvii. 15—22. The fowls, which attempted to light on the pieces, denoted the Egyptians, and other enemies of Israel, which should in vain attempt to devour them; Ezek. xvii. 3, 7, 12. The horror of great darkness which fell upon Abram, signified their great distress and vexation in Egypt, and under their subsequent oppressors; Psal. lv. 3—5. Dan. x. 8, 9; and hence they are like to a bush burning, and not consumed; Exod. iii. 2, 3. The burning lamp denoted their manifest and joyful deliverance; Judg. vi. 21. Is. lxii. 1; the smoking furnace their affliction in Egypt; Deut. iv. 20. Jer. xi. 4.—Abram went to his fathers in death, his soul to the world of spirits, and his body to the grave, where they were gone before him; Heb. xii. 23. Eccl. xii. 7. ch. xxv. 8, 17. and xlix. 29. "the most high God, met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all the spoil; first being Melchizedec, which is, by interpretation, king of righteousness; and after that also king of Salem, which is king of peace: without father, without mother, mentioned in history, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, recorded in scripture, but made like unto the Son of God, who abideth a priest continually.—Consider how great this man was unto whom even Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils—and who blessed him that had the promises. And, without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the greater.—Levi, who received tithes, paid tithes in Abraham.—After the similitude of Melchizedec there ariseth another priest, even Jesus, who is made not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life—and, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood."

Ver. 22. In matters of importance, it is sometimes necessary to interpose an oath for the confirmation of our assertions or engagements; Heb. vi. 13—17. ch. xxi. 31. xxvi. 31. and xxxi. 53. 1 Sam. xx. 17. Num. v. 21. Exod. xxii. 11. 1 Kings viii. 31. 2 Chron. vi. 22. &c. All oaths are to be sworn by God alone, and import a taking of him to witness the truth of what we declare or engage, and calling him to avenge himself upon us if we utter falsehood, or neglect to perform our engagement; ch. xxxi. 53. Deut. vi. 13. and x. 20. Is. xlv. 23. and lxxv. 16. Jer. xii. 16. Psal. lxxiii. 11. Heb. vi. 13—17.—In some cases, the putting of the hand of the inferior under the thigh of his superior was the declaratory sign used in swearing; ch. xxiv. 9. and xlvii. 29; but lifting up of the hand was the common sign; Exod. xvii. 16. Deut. xxxii. 40. Dan. xii. 7. Rev. x. 5, 6.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—How dreadful is the curse of God! After four hundred years respite, it breaks forth upon the sinners of Sodom, and the places about.—From what distant quarters does God bring the executioners of it!—How short-lived is that pleasure or quiet, which saints attempt to procure by unnecessary connections with wicked men!—How becoming and God-like to forget the injuries which we have received; and to risk, or even to lay down, our lives for the brethren! What honour—what comfort—what blessings—attend such a conduct!—But in this Melchizedec, king of Salem, and priest of the Most High God, let me behold Him who is a priest for ever—Jesus without father as man; without mother as God:—the Lord from heaven! He is King of Righteousness.—In his obedience and suffering he made reconciliation for iniquity, and brought in an everlasting righteousness: in righteousness he rules his subjects, and causes them to work righteousness. He is King of Peace.—By his blood he purchased our peace with God, with our conscience, and with one another: in his intercession he pleads for it; and by his word and spirit he effects it. He is our incomparable High Priest, who received not his REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Blessed indeed are they whose God is the Lord! There is no wo, no want, to them that fear him! How happy the issue of familiar intimacy with God! Before they call he answers; and whilst they are yet speaking he saith, Here I am. Scarcely will he do any thing important without revealing his secrets to them.—How he condescends to our weakness, in giving us signs in ordinances, signs in providence, for the confirmation of our faith in his promises!—But even his chief favourites must often wait long for the beginning or the full accomplishment of these promises; and through manifold trials it must be obtained. Meanwhile, then, let me wait with patient expectation; and with the patriarch, look beyond a numerous seed, and an earthly Canaan, to Jesus, and the travail of his soul, and to the better country above; the everlasting pleasures of which shall more than balance all the discouragements I can meet with by the way.

Ver. 10—12. Here it is foretold that Ishmael and his seed should be wild free men, like wild asses; mischievous to all around them, and extremely numerous. around them; infamous for theft, robbery, revenge, pillage, and murder. It hath therefore been the continued and common interest of mankind to extirpate them from the earth.—But though almost every noted conqueror, who hath appeared in the world, whether Hebrew, Egyptian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Grecian, Roman, Tartar, or Turkish, hath pushed his conquests to their borders, or even beyond them into Egypt, or Arabia Felix, not one hath ever been able to subdue these Ishmaelites, or deprive them of their freedom. The mighty Shishak, king of Egypt, was obliged to draw a line along their frontiers, for the protection of his kingdom from their ravaging inroads. The Assyrians under Shalmanezar, and Sennacherib, and the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, greatly harassed them, and almost extirpated some of their tribes; Is. xxi. 11—17. Num. xxiv. 22. Jer. xxv. 23, 24. and xlix. 28—33. Provoked with their contempt, Alexander the Great made vast preparations for their utter destruction; but death cut short his purpose. Antigonus, one of his valiant captains and successors, provoked with their depredations, more than once, but to his repeated dishonour, attempted to subdue them.—Flushed with his eastern victories, Pompey, the famed Roman general, attempted to reduce them; but his army being recalled, when they had hopes of gaining their purpose, these wild Arabs pursued them, almost at their heels, and dreadfully harassed the Roman subjects in Syria.—Augustus, the renowned emperor, made one or more fruitless attempts to subdue them. About A. D. 110, Trajan, one of the most powerful emperors, and valiant generals, that ever filled the Roman throne, with a mighty army, determined, if possible, to subdue them, and laid siege to their capital. But storms of hail, which is scarcely ever seen in that country, thunder, lightning, whirlwinds, swarms of flies, and dreadful apparitions in the air, terrified or repulsed his troops as often as they repeated their attacks.—About eighty years after, Severus, another warlike emperor, determined to punish their siding with Niger, his rival, by an utter reduction of them. But, after he had made a breach on the wall of their principal city, an unaccountable difference between him and his beloved and faithful European troops obliged him to raise the siege, and leave the country.—In the seventh century of the Christian æra, these Ishmaelites, under Mahomet, their famed impostor, and his successors, furiously extended their empire, and their new and false religion, through a great part of Asia and Africa, and even some countries of Europe; Rev. ix. 1—11. Since the fall of their empire, the Turks have made repeated attempts to subdue them; but, instead of succeeding, they have been obliged for near three hundred years past, to pay them a yearly tribute of forty thousand crowns, for procuring a safe passage for their pilgrims to Mecca, the holy city where Mahomet was born. If, to fulfil his promise, God hath done so much for protecting the temporal liberty of miscreants, what will he not do for the salvation of his people!

CHAP. XVII.

For about fourteen years after Abram's misconduct with Hagar, the immediate visits of God to him appear to have been suspended. Now, (1) God renews his wonted familiarity, enters into a solemn covenant with him, and promises, 1. To make him a father of many nations; in token of which his name is changed into ABRAHAM; 1—6. 2. To be a God to him, and to his seed; as a token and seal of which, circumcision is prescribed, under pain of a cutting off from the blessings of this covenant; 7—14. 3. That while Ishmael prospered, and became a great nation, Sarai should bear a son, with whom, and his seed, this covenant should properly stand fast; in token of which her name is changed into SARAH; 15—22. (2) With joy and wonder, believing the divine declaration, and embracing the covenant-proposals, Abraham circumcises himself and his family, in token of their hearty consent; 23—27.

AND when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.

5 ¶ Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.

7 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

9 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man-child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man-child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—The best of saints too often degrade themselves to obtain what they desire before God's time; and with some plausible pretexts endeavour to conceal their guilt. An easiness of temper, and too much affection to creatures, often induce us to comply with their sinful proposals. But the best-intended transgressions will quickly issue in shame and trouble to the guilty, especially if saints; while our tempters prove our first and principal accusers. How transcendent the mercy of God, in visiting transgressors in the very troubles which they had drawn upon their own heads! Yet remember no happy deliverance is to be expected but in the way of returning to our duty. Let me never therefore hope for comfort in children, or in any thing besides, but in the Lord's way. Let me always leave it to him to give his promise a proper and honourable accomplishment in the season which he thinks fit. And if he grant me undeserved visits, while the yoke of my transgressions is wreathed about my neck, let me with wonder remark his kindness, and take to myself shame and confusion of face.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. The name Shaddai, rendered Almighty, denotes all sufficiency, as well as infinite power. And what strong encouragement to the study of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord is it, that God is all-sufficient and almighty to prepare us for, assist us in, and reward us for it; 2 Cor. xii. 8.—“My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness.” Phil. ii. 12, 13.—“Work out your salvation with fear and trembling: for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do, of his good pleasure.” 1 Cor. xv. 58.—“Be steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; knowing that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.”

Ver. 2. God's making a covenant here, and in many other places, denotes the enlargement, renewal, establishment, or confirmation of it. It cannot be imagined that, in the various instances in which this phrase is used, he had not respect to his former declarations of the same kind as still in force; Ps. cv. 8. 9, 10. Gen. xv. 18. Exod. xxxiv. 10—27. 1 Kings viii. 9. Jer. xxxi. 33. Hos. 2. 18. Gen. vi. 18. ver. 7, 19, 21. Exod. vi. 4. Lev. xxvi. 9. Deut. 8. xviii. Ezek. xvi. 60, 62.

Rom. iv. 16, 17. Gal. iii. 28, 29.

Ver. 5. God's giving names to persons, imports his making them to correspond with them in their condition or usefulness; ch. xxxii. 28. 2 Sam. xii. 25. Is. lxvii. 2, 4, 5. Rev. ii. 17. Jer. xx. 3, 4. xxiii. 6. and xxxiii. 16. Mat. i. 21. Abram signifies high father; Abraham, the high father of a multitude; Sarai, my princess; Sarah, princess of a multitude.

Ver. 6. The Ishmaelites, Midianites, Edomites, Hebrews, and their kings;

ver. 20. Num. xxxi. Gen. xxxvi. Mat. 1. but chiefly Jesus and his spiritual subjects; Rev. xvii. 14. xv. 3. xi. 15. and i. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 9. Psal. xlv. 16.

Ver. 7, 8. Isaac, and his Hebrew descendants, were properly the natural seed with whom this covenant was established; ver. 21. By it God in Christ became, to the Hebrews in general, the head of their nation and church, and assumed them for his peculiar people: he bestowed upon them the land of Canaan as his land; in the enjoyment of which they tasted his goodness, and had access to contemplate the glories of the new-covenant-state, and of the heavenly blessedness; Exod. xix. 5, 6. and xx. 12.—But as it respects Christ and believers in him, it implies God's interesting them, in all his persons and perfections, by every amiable relation, and his giving them all that he hath and doing all his works for their happiness and comfort; Ps. lxxxix. 27. Eph. i. 3. Heb. viii. 10. Ps. cxliv. 15. and xvi. 5, 6. This covenant, as it respected the Hebrew nation, together with the possession of Canaan, and the various ceremonial ordinances by which they were marked the peculiar people of God, and in the observance of which they were to enjoy their rest and prosperity in Canaan, is represented as everlasting, or for ever: but in these passages more than a long time is meant; ch. xlviii. 4. Exod. xii. 14. xxi. 6. xxxi. 1. xxxii. 13, and xl. 15. Lev. xvi. 34. and xxv. 23, 30, 46. Num. x. 8. xv. 1. xviii. 18, 19, and xxv. 13. Deut. iv. 40. xv. 17. and xviii. 5. Josh. iv. 7. and xiv. 9. &c. But as this covenant respected Christ, and believers in him, and all the spiritual blessings contained in it, are everlasting in the strictest sense; Heb. 13. 20. and ix. 12, 15. 1 Pet. i. 4. 2 Pet. i. 11. And it is perhaps chiefly because the covenant of peculiarity with Israel, and the ordinances and blessings thereof, prefigured these eternal relations and privileges, that they are represented as everlasting.

Ver. 9—13. Circumcision is called God's covenant, because it was a token and confirming seal of it. On God's part, it imported that he would give them the promised Messiah out of the loins of Abraham; who, being a true man, should be cut off for the salvation of his people; that, being reconciled in Christ, he gave himself to be their God, accepted them for his people, and promised them pardon of sin and sanctification of their nature and life; Rom. iv. 11. Exod. xix. 5, 6. Deut. x. 15. and xxx. 6. Col. ii. 11. On the part of the persons circumcised, it imported their acceptance of God as their God, and of redemption through the blood of his Son; and their engagement to have no longer intimate friendship with the world, which lie in wickedness, but to mortify their lusts, and to apply themselves to the most internal and spiritual piety; Phil. iii. 3. Jer. iv. 4. Rom. ii. 29. Females were considered as represented in the males, with respect to this ordinance. If children were not to be circumcised till the eighth day:—to teach us that neither circumcision nor baptism is absolutely necessary to salvation; and to cause till that time children and other animals were reckoned too weak and impure for dedication to God; Exod. xxii. 30.

Ver. 14. Not infants, who could not circumcise themselves, but such as were fully neglected this ordinance when they were grown up, were exposed to cut off from their people. Such renounced the distinguishing badge of Abraham's seed, renounced their covenant alliance with God, and fellowship with his people. Nothing could therefore be more reasonable, than that they should be excluded from the privileges of the Hebrew church and nation, and accounted as Heathens.—And this is perhaps the whole import of cutting off from

CHAP. XVIII.

Scarcely had Abraham complied with the law of circumcision, when (1) The Son of God, attended by two created angels in the likeness of men, visit him, and receive a kind and generous entertainment; 1—8. (2) After inquiry for Sarah, the Angel JEHOVAH intimates that by that time nine months she should people, in most of the passages where we find it; Exod. xii. 15, 19. and xxx. 33, 38. Lev. vii. 20, 21, 25, 27. xvii. 4, 9, 10, 14. and xxii. 3. Num. ix. 3. and xix. 13, 20. But, in some cases, death, by the immediate hand of God, or of the magistrate, is certainly included, or therewith connected; Exod. xxxi. 14. Lev. xviii. 20. xix. 8. and xx. 3, 5, 6, 17. Num. xv. 30, 31. And surely there is no injustice that a presumptuous and obstinate rebel against a fundamental law of the church and nation of God should be punished with death.

Ver. 18. Let Ishmael live, and prosper in thy favour and under thy special care; chap. xlviii. 15. Ps. xxxi. 22.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—How infinite the extent, how rich the mercy, of God's granting himself, as God Almighty, God All-sufficient, to be my God, and the God of my seed! Let me by faith heartily and hastily catch the word at his mouth, and cry—My Lord and my God, and the God of my seed! Thrice blessed heritage of the hosts of nations, secured to us as our portion for ever! Though neither my house nor my heart be so with God as they ought, yet he hath made with me the everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure: and this is all my salvation, and all my desire. Upon this foundation let me and mine be sealed to the day of redemption, by receiving the circumcision which is of Christ.—Through his blood shed for us, and his Spirit, bear a son; and sharply reproves her for her unbelieving laughter at the promise; 9—15. (3) To put honour on Abraham, for his ready belief of his former intimations, and for his careful and religious education of his family, he acquaints him with his purpose to destroy Sodom and the cities about; 16—22. (4) While the created angels set off for Sodom, Abraham intercedes with the Son of God for the sparing of these cities, if fifty, forty-five, forty, thirty, twenty, or even ten, righteous persons could be found therein; to which the Lord graciously condescends.

26 And the LORD said, "If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, ^uBehold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, who am but dust and ashes:

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous; wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

31 And he said, ^yBehold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there? And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

32 And he said, ^zOh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: ^aPeradventure ten shall be found there? And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

33 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: and Abraham returned into his place.

CHAP. XIX.

Contains an account of Sodom's ruin, Lot's deliverance, and misimprovement of it. (1) Upon trial, the two angels, who had just come from Abraham, find Lot pious and kind, earnest to lodge and entertain them; and the Sodomites so mad upon, and shameless, in their unnatural lust, that they attempt to force them; 1—9. (2) From regard to Abraham and kindness to Lot, the angels protect him from the Sodomites' assaults, and smite them with blindness: they warn him of the destruction of the city, and require him to escape from it directly with all his relations: and, while his sons-in-law mocked at the warning, they hasten him, his wife, and two virgin-daughters out of the place: and, at his request, Zoar is reprieved from ruin, for a refuge to him; 10—23. (3) While Abraham from a distance beholds, Sodom and the cities about are destroyed with inflamed brimstone from heaven; and Lot's wife, for her disobedient look towards Sodom, is turned into a pillar of salt; 24—29. (4) Afraid to continue in Zoar, Lot retires to the mountain, where his daughters, whom he had rashly offered to prostitute, seduce him into drunkenness and incest; and gave rise to the Moabites and Ammonites, who afterwards so plagued Israel: 30—38.

AND there came ^atwo angels to Sodom at even: and Lot ^bsat in the gate of Sodom: and Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he ^cbowed himself with his face toward the ground;

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and ^dwash your feet, and ye shall rise up early and go on your ways. And they said, ^eNay, but we will abide in the street all night.

3 And he ^fpressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house: ^gand he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

4 ¶ But, ^hbefore they lay down, the men ⁱof the city, even the ^jmen of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, all the people from every quarter:

5 And ^kthey called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which his messages of peace should be laughed to scorn!—laughed to scorn by a saint O what infinite mercy and patience, that he did not strike her—that he doth not strike us—dead in the very act of unbelief! How great is the honour and kindness which God hath prepared for such as are careful to win souls!—While his procedure to punish the most abandoned transgressors is gradual and slow—readily he grants whatever forbearance his favourites can ask on their behalf—but much more what is asked in behalf of his children. What a deep sense of their own meanness and pollution, familiar intercourse with God produceth in the choicest saints! His presence must always fill them with a holy fear, while as their covenant God, they dare to plead before him, assured of a ready audience and a gracious answer.

came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.

6 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him.

7 And said, I pray you, 'brethren do not so wickedly.

8 Behold now, "I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

9 And they said, "Stand back. And they said again, This° one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee than with them. ||And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with *blindness, both small and great: so that they^p wearied themselves to find the door.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, 'Hast thou here any besides? son-in-law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place:

13 For 'we will destroy this place, because the cry of them is waxed great before the face of the LORD; and the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, who married his daughters, and said, 'Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city; but he 'seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

15 And, when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, "Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which †are here; lest thou be consumed in the *iniquity of the city.

16 And *while he lingered the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the LORD^y being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

17 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, 'Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain: escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

18 And Lot said unto them, "Oh, not so, my Lord:

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou^b hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest 'some evil take me, and I die:

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: oh, let me escape thither (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, "See, I have accepted ||thee concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for 'I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.

23 ¶ The 'sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 Then^s the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

25 And he overthrew those cities, and^b all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

26 ¶ But his wife 'looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the^k place where he stood before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and lo, the 'smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God "remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot "went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in °Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

31 ¶ And the first-born said unto the younger, our father is old, and there is 'not a man in the earth 'to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

32 Come, let us make our father^r drink wine, and we will 'lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

33 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the first-born went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the first-born said unto the younger, Behold, 'I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine

CHAP. XX.

Scarcely was the promised Isaac begotten, when his parents sinfully endangered his character or life. (1) Abraham removing to Gerar, a place which belonged to the Philistines, and pretending Sarah to be his sister, she is taken into king Abimelech's court in order to be taken to his bed; 1, 2. (2) The Lord, in a dream, warns Abimelech of his danger, accepts his excuse, and charges him, under pain of death to himself and family, to restore her; 3-7. (3) After warning his servants, chiding Abraham for the cheat which he had put upon him, and hearing his pitiful excuse, Abimelech restores Sarah, with several presents; 8-16. (4) Upon Abraham's intercession, God removes the plague which had been inflicted upon Abimelech and his family to punish his rash tampering with Sarah; 17, 18.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—In my wanderings through this world

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—What an advantage it is for the world, that, in very wicked places, some persons truly pious may be found! How encouraging to entertain strangers, when some have thereby entertained angels unawares! To what shocking impudence, in the vilest abominations, men's corruptions can carry them; and that notwithstanding sharp corrections, or remarkable deliverances! Ch. xiv. How readily those who reprove sin, by their godly conversation, are an eye-sore to the wicked! How quickly the protectors of God's messengers are rewarded with remarkable protection, or with rescue from danger. How prone are hardened sinners to sport with the most serious warnings of ruin, near and terrible!—and even saints, if strongly attached to worldly things, to defer or shift the means which have been prescribed by God for their safety! But let us remember, that it is infinitely hazardous to be under the reigning power, or even the prevalence, of a carnal and unbelieving heart; for, though God wonderfully restricts the range of his judgments for the sake of his people, and in answer to their prayers, yet he is and will be just in depriving them of that wealth, which they sinfully attempted to increase by mingling themselves with the wicked; ch. xiii. 10, 11. Yea, he causes men to be quickly wearied of the shifts which themselves devised for their safety, and obliged to take that at last which he at first prescribed them. But how dangerous is drunkenness! for it readily issues in whoredom and lasting shame!

comforts Hagar, and shows her a well. There they take up their abode: and Ishmael becomes an archer, and marries an Egyptian; 9—21. (3) Afraid of Abraham's excessive prosperity, Abimelech solicits, and obtains, a covenant of friendship with him, and restores him a well; 22—32. (4) Abraham, chiefly regarding God's covenant with him, plants a grove, for devotion, and establishes the public worship of God at his residence; 33, 34.

AND the LORD visited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah as he had spoken.

2 For Sarah^b conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

3 And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, ^cIsaac.

4 And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac, being eight days old, ^das God had commanded him.

5 And Abraham was an ^ehundred years old when his son Isaac was born unto him.

6 ¶ And Sarah said, ^f'God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear will laugh with me.

7 And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born ^ghim a son in his old age.

8 And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a ^h'great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.

9 ¶ And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, whom she had born unto Abraham, ⁱ'mocking.

10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, ^j'Cast out this bond-woman and her son; for the son of this bond-woman shall not be heir with my son, ^keven with Isaac.

11 And the thing was very ^l'grievous in Abraham's sight because of his son.

12 And God said unto Abraham, ^m'Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bond-woman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; ⁿ'for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

13 And also of the son of the bond-woman ^o'will I make a nation, because he is thy seed.

14 And Abraham ^p'rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave ^qit unto Hagar (putting ^rit on her shoulder) and the child, and sent her away: and she departed, and ^s'wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba.

15 ¶ And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

16 And she went, and sat her down over against ^thim a good way off, as it were a bow-shot: for she said, ^u'Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against ^vhim, and lifted up her voice, and wept.

17 And ^w'God heard the voice of the lad: and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? ^x'fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for ^y'I will make him a great nation.

19 And God ^z'opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And ^{aa}'God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer.

21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran: ^{ab}'and his mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And it came to pass at that time, that Abimelech and Phichol the chief captain of his host spake unto Abraham, saying, ^{ac}'God is with thee in all that thou doest:

23 Now therefore ^{ad}'swear unto me here by God that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: ^{ae}but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said ^{af}'I will swear.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech ^{ag}'because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.

26 And Abimelech said, ^{ah}'I know not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I ^{ai}of it but to-day.

27 And Abraham ^{aj}'took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What ^{ak}mean these seven ewe-lambs? Which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For ^{al}these seven ewe-lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that ^{am}'they may be a witness unto me that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he called that place ^{an}'Beer-sheba; because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus they made ^{ao}'a covenant at Beer-sheba. Then Abimelech rose up, Ver. 25—30.—In these hot countries a well was of great value; ch. xxvi. 18, 20, 21. Abimelech's acceptance of the seven ewe lambs imported his renunciation of all claim to this well.

Let me commit myself, and all my concerns, to God as my God! If JEHOVAH my God, my shield, and my exceeding great reward, I have no need of assistance or protection from Satan, nor of any evasive arts to shelter me from danger. Never therefore, let remarkable favours from God be immediately followed with sinful unwatchfulness, and fear of man, which causeth a snare? and if I have been once overcome by them, let me take heed to my steps, lest my last error be worse than my first: but especially if I have real grace, let me beware of becoming a tempter to the profane or graceless.—How much I detest uncleanness! To prevent it, he inflicts judgments upon, and gives extraordinary warnings even to, Heathens. How pitiful are the best excuses which men, particularly saints, can make for their sinning! And it must be considered as an infinite mercy that God, though he sometimes puts his people to shame for their folly, takes more care of their honour, and especially of the honour of his promises, than they do. And the prayers of penitent saints are profitable to the greatest men upon earth.

33 ¶ And Abraham planted a grove in Beer-sheba, and called there on the name of the LORD, the everlasting God.

34 And Abraham sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

CHAP. XXII.

Isaac being now, perhaps, thirty-three years of age, we have here, (1) God's sharpest trial of Abraham's faith and obedience, by his strange command to go and sacrifice his promised son, in whom his seed was to be called, in the most open and deliberate manner; 1, 3. (2) Abraham's remarkable faith, and ready obedience to this trying command; 3—10. (3) The Lord's gracious reward of it, in preventing the intended slaughter of Isaac, providing a ram in his stead, and solemnly confirming his covenant with Abraham and his seed. (4) Upon his return thence, Abraham is informed of the remarkable increase of his brother Nuhor's family, out of which God intended wives for Isaac and Jacob; 19—24.

AND it came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham. And he said, Behold, here I am.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

3 ¶ And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the lamb for a burnt-offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering. So they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order; and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 ¶ And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham. And he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, in the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

15 ¶ And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time;

16 And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

17 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying, I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

18 And in thy seed shall all the na-

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—What a pleasure God sometimes takes to delay the fulfilment of promises, till it becomes, humanly speaking, improbable, if not impossible, for the trial of our faith and patience; but he never defers it a moment beyond the due time; and the joys which attend the seasonable fulfilment thereof are great and certain; and yet even then our attempts to anticipate it often mingle our joys with wormwood and gall! How proper, in all our straits, to consult the Lord; and to request and hope for his watchful care over our relations, particularly such as are exposed to dangers! Let my care be to honour God in all my conduct, and he will take care to honour me before the world, as is good in his sight.—And, while Sarah and her family rejoice over her son, let me, let all the redeemed, rejoice that to us a Child is born, to us a Son is given, whose name is Wonderful; and that God in him hath made us, like Isaac, children of the promise! Let us Gentiles rejoice that, while the Hebrews are, like Ishmael, cast out to be wandering, wild, and hated, we are called to the fellowship of the sons of God! Here, likewise, let us observe how sharply God corrects those who have been insolent despisers of others; and how near the most seasonable mercies may be, whilst we perceive them not!

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1. God tempts no man by enticing him to sin; Jam. i. 13. nor doth the word Nissah, here used, ever signify any such thing, but to try exquisitely: nor doth God try men in order to promote or confirm his own knowledge of them, but to manifest what they are to themselves and to the world, that his rewarding or punishing them may appear the more wise and equal, or his blessing them the more gracious; Deut. viii. 2. and xiii. 3. Judg. ii. 22. 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. Ps. cxxxix. 23, 24. 1 Cor. x. 13. Exod. xv. 25. and xvi. 4. Jam. i. 12. 1 Sam. iii. 4, 6. By this command, God tried the faith of Abraham with respect to his believing that in Isaac his seed should be called; and that, through the death of the Messiah, he, and other believers, should obtain everlasting salvation: and tried his obedience in the most tender point

Ver. 16—18. Heb. vi. 13—18. "When God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself, saying, 'I will bless thee, &c.—an oath for confirmation is—an end of strife; wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that, two immutable things, his word and oath, in which it is impossible for him to lie, we might have a strong consolation.'—The promises here solemnly confirmed by oath almost wholly related to his Hebrew and his spiritual seed; ch. 21. 12. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—How necessary to count the cost when we enter upon a religious life! for who knows how many and how great our trials in it may be, since trials are increased in proportion to men's faith and spiritual comfort. Those trials are most afflicting to the believer, which not only fly in the face of natural affection, or of outward honour and pleasure, but even threaten to frustrate the promises of God: yet thrice happy are they, who, under the sorest trials, heartily acquiesce in the will of God, and firmly trust to his promise! who, though he slay them, yet will still trust in him! or often, when the nights of trial are at the very darkest, the Lord steps in, and compasseth them about with songs of deliverance, and blesteth with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. But, while I admire the faith and obedience of Abraham, and the cheerful submission of Isaac—while I place these bright examples before me—my faith directs me to more glorious objects—let me with a triumphant think of JEHOVAH bringing his only begotten Son into this world, and binding him on the altar, and making his soul an offering for our sins! Let me behold Jesus caught, seasonably caught, in the thickets of our Father's commandment, of his own engagement, and of our transgressions imputed to him, and offered in our stead. Let me listen to the New Testament his blood, in which Jehovah swears that men shall be blessed in him and nations shall call him blessed.

19 So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Beer-sheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

20 ¶ And it came to pass after these things that it was told Abraham, saying, Behold, Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

21 Huz his first-born, and Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of Aram, 22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

23 And Bethuel begat Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

24 And his concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bare also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah.

CHAP. XXIII.

(1) Scarcely was Isaac restored from death in a figure, when Sarah dies and Abraham mourns; 1, 2. (2) Upon Abraham's request of a burying-place, the Hittites freely offer him his choice of their sepulchres; but he insists upon purchasing the cave of Machpelah from Ephron, for its full value; 3—18. (3) Having bought it, he inters Sarah in it, and retains it for a burying-place; 19, 20.

AND Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in Kirjath-arba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

4 I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: thou art a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth;

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and entreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar,

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for as much money as it is worth he shall give it me for a possession of a burying-place among you.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth: and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate of his city, saying, 11 Nay, my lord, hear me: the field I give thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron, in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

17 And the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure 18 Unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 ¶ And after this Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a burying-place by the sons of Heth.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 3—20. Abraham wanted to purchase a burying-place in Canaan, and to have the claims thereto ascertained, that he, and his nearest relations, might have their dust laid there apart from the Heathen natives; and might have it as a pledge and earnest to confirm their faith in God's promise of their possession of the whole country in his due time; ch. xxv. 9. xlvii. 20, 30. xlix. 31, and l. 13, 24, 25.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Ponder, my soul, how the clouds of trouble return after the rain; how death parts the nearest and most affectionate relatives! The marriage-state is but the forerunner of death and sorrow—it is but a porch of entrance into eternity! Tears and grief are the tribute which we owe to our departed friends. But if they and we be Christ's, let us not mourn as those that have no hope. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—they are not lost, but gone before us. How death changes the comely countenance, and makes the dearest body loathsome! Let the death of others always remind me of my own; and let me live as a stranger and sojourner in this world. Let me so behave as to make my friendship valued and sought for by all around me. Never let Hittites, or other Heathens, outstrip me in humanity or kindness; but let good manners, civility, modesty, and the strictest regard to equity, adorn my profession, and mingle themselves with all my behaviour. Let me carefully avoid being a burden to my neighbours, or being too much indebted for favours to carnal men; and, though I be heir of the world through the righteousness of faith, let me be content with little of it now, and rejoice that the Canaan above, where neither death, nor famine, nor war, even enter, is my inheritance. If my flesh rest in hope, it is enough if I am allowed a grave on earth.

CHAP. XXIV.

Here (1) Abraham about three years after Sarah's death, depending on the directive providence of God, appoints his principal servant to fetch a wife to his son from his friends in Mesopotamia; binds him by oath to bring no Canaanitess to him; and peremptorily charges him to beware of engaging Isaac to go back to Mesopotamia; 1—9. (2) His servant, with great dispatch, accomplishes his journey; and, with earnest supplication, begs that the Lord would point out the proper object by a token which he mentions; 10—14. (3) Answerable to his prayer, the Lord directs him into acquaintance with Rebekah, the daughter of Isaac's cousin-german; 15—28. (4) With great fidelity and diligence he represents his master's wealth, and his care to have Isaac, his sole heir, well married; and the token himself had obtained, that Rebekah was the woman chosen by God for him; 29—49. (5) The treaty of marriage is finished with the consent of all her relations; 50—60. (6) Isaac and Rebekah happily meet, and the marriage is consummated; 61—67.

AND Abraham was [†]old and [†]well stricken in age: and the LORD had blessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his [†]eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all that he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

3 And I will make thee [†]swear by the LORD, the God of heaven and the God of the earth, [†]that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, [†]Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 The LORD God of heaven, which [†]took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he [†]shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be [†]clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again^k.

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels, of the camels of his master, and departed; (for all the goods of his master were in his hand:) and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto [†]the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to [†]kneel down without the city, by a well of water, at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.

12 ¶ And he said, O LORD [†]God of my master Abraham, I pray thee [†]send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.

13 Behold, [†]I stand here by the well of water, and the daughters of the men of the city [†]come out to draw water:

14 And [†]let it come to pass that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down the pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she whom thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, [†]before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her [†]pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel was [†]very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man [†]known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink [†]a little water of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man, [†]wondering at her, held his peace, to observe whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden [†]ear-ring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of [†]ten shekels weight of gold;

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

25 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man [†]bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, [†]Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's [†]brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

29 ¶ And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the ear-rings and bracelets upon his sister's hands; and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man, and behold he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, I will not eat until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 ¶ And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And the LORD hath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses.

36 And Sarah my master's wife bare a son to my master when she was old: and unto him hath he given all that he hath.

37 And my master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell:

38 But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

39 And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.

40 And he said unto me, The LORD, before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house:

41 Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go:

43 Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

45 And before I had done speaking^a in mine heart, behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the ear-ring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands^b.

48 And I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

49 And now, if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

50 ¶ Then Laban and Bethuel answered, and said, The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot speak unto thee bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

53 And the servant brought forth jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother precious things.

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night: and they rose up in the morning, and he said, Send me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

56 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way: send me away, that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and inquire at her mouth.

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

59 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse^d, and Abraham's servant, and his men.

60 And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

61 And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

of the well Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the south-country.

63 And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and behold the camels were coming.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac she lighted off the camel.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a veil and covered herself.

66 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

67 And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.

CHAP. XXV.

Isaac having set up for himself, we have here an account of (1) Abraham's descendants by Keturah, his second concubine: his disposal of his wealth; his age; death; and burial; 1—10. (2) Ishmael's twelve sons, and their residence; and his death and burial; 12—18. (3) Isaac's prosperity: the conception of his sons in answer to prayer; their early struggling, different tempers, and exchange of birthright; 11, 19—34.

THEN again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah.

2 And she bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah.

3 And Jokshan begat Sheba and Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were Ashurim, Letushim, and Leummim.

4 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Ephher, and Hanock, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.

5 ¶ And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.

6 But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son (while he yet lived) eastward, unto the east-country.

7 ¶ And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

8 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people.

9 And his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

10 The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac: and Isaac dwelt by the well Lahai-roi.

12 ¶ Now these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham.

13 And these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: The first-born of Ishmael Nebajoth, and Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam.

14 And Mishma, and Dumah, and Massa,

15 Hadar, and Tema, Jetur, Naphtish, and Kedemah:

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; twelve princes according to their nations.

17 And these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he gave up the ghost and died, and was gathered unto his people.

18 And they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest towards Assyria: and he died in the presence of all his brethren.

19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son. Abraham begat Isaac:

20 And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padan-aram, the sister to Laban the Syrian.

21 ¶ And Isaac entreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: and the LORD was entreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived.

22 And the children struggled together within her: and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? and she went to inquire of the LORD.

23 And the LORD said unto her, Two to woo a bride for his dear Son! How little fervent prayer, and accurate observation of his word and providence, they mingle with their work! How often their own temporal provisions lie nearer their heart than that sinners should be made willing in the day of his power! May God make them equally faithful, and equally successful!

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1—4, 6. The natural vigour wherewith God had endowed Abraham, for the procreation of Isaac, continued with him for the further enlargement of his family.—These children of Keturah, and their posterity, peopled a considerable part of Arabia, to the south and east of the promised land, under the name of Midianites, Shuhites, Sabeans, and Ashurites.

Ver. 5. Isaac was his only heir by his complete wife, and his only child by promise; ch. xxiv. 39. and xxi. 12. and is herein a type of Jesus Christ and his seed, who are heirs of all things by promise; Heb. i. 2. John iii. 34. Rev. ii. 10. Gal. iii. 29. Rom. viii. 17.

Ver. 18. They dwelt all along the south of the Moabites, eastern Midianites, Edomites, and Israelites, almost from the river Euphrates on the east to the border of Egypt on the west.

Ver. 21—23. For almost twenty years Isaac continued praying for children.—Their struggling in their mother's womb presaged, that they and their posterity would live at variance one with another, and exceedingly differ in their religion, laws, manners, &c.—The Edomites, descended from Esau, were at first the strongest people; ch. xxxvi. but the Israelites, sprung from Jacob, under David, 2 Sam. viii. 14. under Amaziah, 2 Chron. xxv. 11, 12. and under Hircanus, subdued them. Nay, Jacob's obtaining the birthright and blessing, ver. 29—34. and 27, 29, 37, 40. rendered him and his posterity superior to Esau and his Edomite seed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—What a mercy is it to have at once a good servant, a good son, and a gracious God! A noble foundation these for truly happy success in our designs! In weighty cases, it may be proper to interpose an oath, but that carefully explained, solemnly administered, and judiciously taken. The marriages of true believers, on which the temporal and eternal happiness of multitudes may depend, should be formed with remarkable and religious attention; for an unconverted partner in life often proves a dreadful and a dangerous snare. Happy the families which have praying and pious members! In difficult cases, it is best to begin with prayer, if we wish to succeed. And it manifests no small prudence to look for, and follow, the direction of God's providence; for the Lord kindly answers the prayers of faith, when put up in behalf of his dear favourites. In order to obtain a truly happy marriage, how much more efficacious are a single regard to the glory of God, and a dependance on his direction, than all the wanton dalliances, or false and fulsome flattery, in the world! In religious courtship, plain dealing is the best wooing: and they who are most humble, kind, and industrious, in the house of their father, are likely to prove most amiable and useful in the house of their husband. In children's marriages, parents ought to advise, but not to constrain. It is useful to commemorate past mercies, to encourage us in a present dependance on God's care and kindness for future ones; and the more mercies we receive, the more we ought to praise and worship God. New relations need new prayers; for new joys on earth are connected with new griefs. But doubly sweet are the blessings of providence when we receive them with a devout temper of spirit. How useful for the soul is devout retirement! None will ever feel the want of company, who have learned, through the medium of sensible objects, to converse with God himself.—Alas, that so few deep-sworn servants of JEHOVAH should so little resemble Abraham's, in their endeavours 34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread, and pottage of lentiles; and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright‡.

CHAP. XXVI.

Here (1) While Isaac is distressed by a famine in Canaan, the Lord directs him to continue there, and renews with him the covenant made with his father Abraham; 1—5. (2) Distrustful of God's protection, Isaac, at Gerar, pretends Rebekah to be his sister; but king Abimelech, observing their familiarity, discovers her to be his wife, rebukes his dissimulation, and charges all his subjects to beware of injuring them; 6—11. (3) While the Lord remarkably prospers Isaac in his crops and flocks, the Philistines envy him, and contend for his wells; 12—22. (4) Encouraged by a new visit from God, Isaac, having returned from Gerar to Beer-sheba, erects an altar for solemn worship; 23—25. Ver. 25. That redness and hair marked the present strength of Esau's body, and the savage and cruel disposition of him and his posterity; ch. xxvii. 11, 41. Obad. 10. Ezek. xxv. 12. xxxv. 5.

Ver. 26. Jacob took hold of his heel, as if he would have drawn him back, that himself might be born first, or as if he would overthrow and suppress him, as he afterwards did; ver. 33. ch. xxvii. ; and rightly was he named Jacob, a heel-holder, or supplanter, on that account, ch. xxviii. 36.

Ver. 27. Esau was a wild savage kind of man, spending most of his time in hunting, learning the art of war, and the like; ch. x. 9. and xvi. 12. Jacob was a sincere, mild, plain-dealing man, keeping much at home, attending to his household affairs, and to his father's flocks and herds; ch. vi. 9. and xlv. 74.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Before I part with Abraham, the celebrated patriarch, let me, in him, contemplate Jesus, the everlasting Father! how astonishing his meekness! his kindness to men! his intimacy with, fear, obedience to, and trust in, his God! He is the chosen favourite of JEHOVAH; the father and covenant-head of innumerable millions of saved men. To him the promises relative to the evangelical and eternal state of his church were originally made. All obedient, at his Father's call, he left his native abodes of Canaan, and became a stranger and sojourner on earth, not having where to lay his head. At his Father's call, he offered himself an acceptable sacrifice to God; by his all-prevalent intercession, and supernatural influence, he delivers his children (ah!) too ungrateful friends from the hand of their enemies; and after long tribulation, he obtains a numerous seed in the Jewish and gospel church. In his family are many professors, children of the bond-woman, the covenant into a covenant of peace; 26—33. (6) But Esau's marriages with two Hittite women greatly interrupt his parents' comfort; 34, 35.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines, unto *Gerar.

2 ¶ And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of:

3 Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father*;

4 And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar:

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said, She is my sister: for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

of works; who, in the issue, are like Ishmael or the modern Jews, rejected and cast out into a state of misery and woe: others are children of the free-woman, the covenant of grace; and are, like Isaac, begotten to God by the powerful influence of the promise.—Now let me observe, how invigorating is a strong faith in God's promise: for God delights to add abundant blessings to such as, by courageous believing, give him the glory of his power and faithfulness. Often the best of men have little remarkable fellowship with God in old age: but must live even to the end by faith, and not by sight; while wicked families are loaded with temporal mercies, for the sake of their pious progenitors. Promised events are often ushered in by the most discouraging appearances: and mercies must be long prayed and waited for ere they be granted. It is good when husbands and wives unite their supplications; for to spread our griefs before a throne of grace is the greatest and the surest relief. How often much trouble and vexation attend what is too eagerly desired! But how sovereign is God, in fixing the temporal, and even eternal, states of persons before they are born; and how early are children known by their doings; yet in their education great care is to be taken in consulting their tempers and dispositions. Parents frequently expose themselves to future troubles by their partial regard to children. But why should we set our hearts on them, or any other worldly comfort, when we must so quickly leave them by death! At that time it should be the concern of parents so to dispose of their effects, that there may be no disputes after they are gone; and such deserve to have most assigned them as are likely to make the best use of it. How often the wisest worldlings act the most foolish part, while the Lord preserveth the simple! How marvellously God overruleth even the sins of men, to the accomplishment of his purpose or promise, and the advancement of his glory! How dreadful, when men, even those who have had a religious education, gratify their sensual appetites at the expense of the temporal and eternal ruin of themselves and their seed; and when God permits them to be afterwards hardened in their sin, and standing monuments of that affecting truth, that numbers of the descendants of God's favourites are sometimes left out of his church, and unacquainted with their parents' blessings!

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and *received in the same year °an hundred fold: and the LORD blessed him.

13 And the man waxed great, and went †forward, and grew until he became very great:

14 For he †had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of †servants: And the Philistines †envied him.

15 For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had †stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we.

17 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he †called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of †springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well §Ezek; because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it *Sitnah.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it †Rehoboth; and he said, For now the LORD hath †made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence to *Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, †I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he †built an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then †Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, and Phicol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, †seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, †We saw certainly †that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there be now †an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 ¶ That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have †not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now the †blessed of the LORD.

30 †And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up †betimes in the morning, and †swore one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, †We have found water.

33 And he called it §Sheba: therefore the name of the city is †Beer-sheba unto this day.

34 ¶ And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife †Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

35 Which were †a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.

CHAP. XXVII.

(1) Still fond of Esau, Isaac, contrary to the oracle of God, (chap. xxv. 23.) attempts to confer on him his principal blessing; 1—5. (2) Directed by his mother, Jacob anticipates Esau with savoury meat to his father; and, pretending to be Esau, obtains the blessing of sovereign dominion, and of a church-relation to God, for himself and his seed; 5—29. (3) Returning from the field with his venison, Esau and his father, with deep concern, find that Jacob had already got the principal blessing. After much entreaty, Esau obtains a subordinate one, of a competent livelihood, and of a recovery of liberty for himself and his seed; 30—40. (4) While Esau projects the murder of Jacob, Rebekah contrives to send him to her brother's family till Esau's rage should abate; 41—46.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was *old, and his eyes †were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my death^b:

3 Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go out to the field, and †take me some venison:

4 And make me †savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die.

Ver. 18. This was typical of Christ's reforming his church, and reviving the oracles, ordinances, and influences of grace; Ezek. xlvii. 1—10. John iv. 10. Zech. xiii. 1. and xiv. 8.

Ver. 24. Not for the sake of Abraham's merit, but from respect to the covenant, made with him; Gen. xii. 2, 3. xv. 8. and xvii. 6, 7.

Ver. 29. And, since God hath so abundantly blessed thee, we hope that thou wilt not remember the small unkindness which we did thee.

Ver. 34. This was contrary to the will of God; Exod. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3. Josh. xxiii. 12. Ezra ix. 1—3. Neh. xiii. 23—25. 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15. 1 Cor. vii. 39. and of his grandfather and parents; chap. xxiv. 31. xxvii. 40; and xxviii. 1, 2, 6; See chap. vi. 2.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—A mixture of providential smiles and frowns is ordinarily in the lot of God's principal favourites. But what a mercy it is to have the covenant of grace established between God and our progenitors, that it may be renewed with us! The fear of men, the fear of temporal death, often causeth a snare: and we readily rush into the same snares in which others before had almost ruined themselves.—Yet the kindness of God infinitely great in rescuing his people, when they are thus busied in entangling themselves! But what a scandal to a saint to be discovered a dissembler! how painful to have the snares, which we laid for the innocent, entangling ourselves, or their sins charged to our account before God! To what trouble expense will envious men put themselves, in order to gratify their lust! how often are the most flourishing outward enjoyments, imbittered by the evil which attends them! What a mercy to have God smiling on us when we are frowns! For, when our ways please the Lord, he maketh even our enemies to be at peace with us, and to pursue the friendship which they once refused. The wickedness of children who break their parents' hearts, when they ought to be their comfort, is great, and observed by God; and his curse frequently tends those marriages which are made without the consent of parents.

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son: and Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son:

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

17 And she gave the savoury meat, and the bread which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? and he said, I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine:

29 Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father; and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau.

33 And Isaac trembled very exceedingly; and said, Who? where is he that hath taken venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, and he shall be blessed.

34 ¶ And, when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birthright; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless 40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass, when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41 ¶ And Esau hated Jacob, because of the blessings wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand; then will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 ¶ And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban, my brother, to Haran;

44 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send and fetch thee from thence. Why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these who are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

CHAP. XXVIII.

Having by fraud obtained the blessing, Jacob is tossed from one place and from one trouble to another. Here we have, (1) Jacob sent off by his parents to Syria with a parting blessing, and a solemn charge to take no wife but of his own kindred; 1—5. (2) Esau attempting to please his parents, and, if possible, entitle his seed to the privileges of the birthright, by his marriage with a daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's eldest son; 6—9. (3) God appearing to Jacob in his flight, and graciously ratifying to him the blessing which he had obtained, and ascertaining him of his gracious protection; 10—15. (4) Deeply impressed with the vision of the ladder, and with the promises, Jacob dedicates himself to God's service by a solemn vow; 16—22.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

Ver. 39, 40. This blessing imported that Esau and his seed should inhabit mount Seir, a soil then moderately fertile; Heb. xi. 20. ch. xxxvi. 6—8, that they should live much by war, violence, and rapine; Mat. x. 34; should, by David, Amaziah, and Hyrcanus, &c. be subjected to the Hebrew yoke; Deut. xxxiii. 29. Ver. 41. In this manner Esau hoped to recover both birthright and blessing; but Isaac, nevertheless, lived about 43 years after.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—When dimness of sight, or other harbingers of death, fasten upon us, it is high time for spiritual diligence, particularly in committing ourselves and our families to God. But even then it is hard to rectify the partial affection which we have conceived for our children. How unseemly for parents, especially if godly, to become tempters of their children to offend God, and to despise the awful curse which he hath annexed to sin! Their evil counsels are a most entangling snare; and it is unnatural for the dearest relations to become deceivers of one another; especially as one sin so naturally leads to another still worse; and nothing but disorder, grief, or other murderous consequences, can justly be expected!—The sovereignty of God is often remarkably evident in accomplishing his great designs through means of the wicked practices of men; but the heirs of promise, notwithstanding, entail upon themselves the most fearful perplexity and trouble, in taking sinful methods to obtain their promised benefits.—With what earnestness will the most carnal men pursue after spiritual things, for the sake of the carnal advantages which they hope will attend them! But, if disappointed, readily they pervert their way, and their heart fretteth against the Lord, while

2 Arise, go to Padan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother.

3 And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;

4 And give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land where-in thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶ When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing that the daughters of Canaan pleased not Isaac his father;

9 Then went Esau unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.

12 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and:

with malice and murder they think to defeat the purposes of God. How readily this malice reduces to great perplexity and fear such as have been the sinful instruments of their disappointment!—Stand in awe, my soul; seek the Lord's blessing only in his own time and method! Let lying lips be an abomination to me! Never let me despise the heavenly birthright, lest I be denied the blessing when afterward I seek it carefully with tears. Is any provoked by, or even unjustly enraged at me, let me, by yielding, pacify great offences; or, by flight escape for my safety. Perhaps what now seems base or bitter to my corrupt heart, may yield me consolation in the latter end. Let intimacy, therefore, and especially marriage-connection, with the wicked, be always the detestation of my soul.

to the north, and to the south: and in thee and 'in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

15 And, behold, ^aI am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place, and ^aI knew it not.

17 And he was ^aafraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is ^anone other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob ^arose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and ^bset it up for a pillar, and ^cpoured oil upon the top of it.

19 And he called the name of that place ^cBethel: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.

20 And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, ^dIf God will be with me, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on;

21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the LORD be my God:

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's ^ehouse: and of all that thou shalt give me ^fI will surely give ^ethe tenth unto thee.

CHAP. XXIX.

Here the promise, which God had made to Jacob, begins to be accomplished in (1) His safe conduct to Haran, where, at a well for watering the flocks, he meets with Rachel his cousin, and is by her introduced to her father; 1—14. (2) His comfortable marriage with Rachel, attended with an imposition of Leah her sister in her stead; 15—30. (3) The building up of his family with four sons, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, by Leah; and the notice she took of the providence of God therein; 31—35.

^a Heb. lifted up his feet. Ps. 119. 32, 60. THEN Jacob ^awent on his journey, and came into ^athe land of the ^bpeople of the east.

2 And he looked, and behold ^ba well in the field, and, lo, there were ^cthree flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of ^dHaran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the ^ason of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, ^b'Is ^bthe well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, ^cit is yet ^chigh day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, ^dWe cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

9 ¶ And while he yet spake with them Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob ^ekissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, ^fand wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's ^gbrother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the ^htidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and ⁱkissed him, and brought him to his house. ^jAnd he told Laban all these things.

14 And Laban said unto him, Surely thou ^kart ^kmy bone and my flesh. And he abode with him ^lthe space of a month.

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou ^mart my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? Tell me, what ⁿshall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well-favoured.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, ^oI will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

19 And Laban said, ^pIt is better that I give her to thee than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel: and they seemed unto him but a few days, ^qfor the love he had to her.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—How crosses and crowns are mingled together in the lot of the saints! But it is comfortable when the blessing of parents and of God prepares men for their trials; and to have a godly friend's house to lodge in, amidst our distress, alleviates the grief. What care both parents and children ought to take to prevent unequal marriages with the ungodly! How shrewd the contrivances of carnal men to promote their temporal advantage! But they who aim only at pleasing men often meet with the most bitter disappointments. They who rest on partial reformatory lie down but the more securely under the wrath of God. It is too late to be wise when the opportunity is lost. How amazing the mercy of God, in graciously visiting such as, by their sin, have made their own homes dangerous for them to tarry at. Easily he renders even trouble sweet with his kindness; and happy they who have him and his angels to be their protectors! No danger can come near them. And, if he love, he will never leave us.—He is often nearer us than we are aware: and his comfortable presence in ordinances is the very gate to celestial joys. How effectually nearness to God humbles us under a sense of our own vileness and corruption! and happy is it when our fellowship with God leaves a lasting impression on our spirits; powerfully constrains us, by solemn engagement, to surrender ourselves, and all that we have, to his service; and renders us content with a moderate share of the good things of this life! But while I thus regard the kindness of his providence, let me here contemplate the person and the work of my glorious Redeemer, that Mediator between God and man. On earth, in the condescension of his humanity: in heaven, in the glory of his divinity; through him I come near to God, and enjoy his presence and his favour; through him I behold the promises of guidance and protection; and after all my wanderings in this world, defended by his care, shall return to my Father's house in peace, laden with the blessings of eternal glory.

CHAP. XXX.

Here the blessing of Jacob, by his father and his God, issues in a numerous family, and remarkable wealth. (1) Rachel's impatient desire of children issues in Jacob's taking his handmaids for concubines, by whom he hath four sons; Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher; 9—13: and her desire of Reuben's mandrakes issues in Leah's bearing Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah; 14—21: At last Rachel bears Joseph; 22—24. (2) Jacob, after his fourteen years service for his wives, inclines to return home to his father; but Laban detains him; and, according to his choice, appoints him the spotted cattle and goats, and the brown sheep, for his wages; 25—36. (3) Directed by God, Jacob places white-straked rods before the cattle in their watering-troughs at the time of their conception, and makes the best of them to produce for himself, and so becomes quickly rich; 37—43.

AND when Rachel saw that she bare Jacob no children, Rachel 'envied her sister; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, 'or else I die.

2 And Jacob's 'anger was kindled against Rachel; and he said, 'Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the 'fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, Behold, my maid Bil-hah, go in unto her; and she shall bear 'upon my knees, that I may also *have children by her.

4 And she gave him Bilhah her hand-maid to 'wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

5 And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name ^bDan.

7 And Bilhah Rachel's maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With †great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name 'Naphtali.

9 ¶ When Leah saw that she had ^kleft bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh:
and she called his name 'Gad.

12 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, *Happy am I, for the daughters will 'call me blessed: and she called his name ^aAsher.

14 ¶ And Reuben went in the days of wheat-harvest, and found 'mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

15 And she said unto her, †Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore, he shall lie with thee tonight for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me, for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 And God hearkened unto Leah,

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 23. Leah being veiled, as in ch. xxiv. 65, and it being dark, Jacob could not discern the fraud. Thus he, who beguiled his brother, and imposed on his dim-sighted father, was now, in like manner, beguiled himself. Ver. 31. To punish Leah for consenting to her father's deceit, she was hated, that is, less loved than Rachel; Ver. 30.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Behold how cheerful and prosperous the gracious visits of a reconciled God render men! Behold, the plainness, humility, and kindness, which once prevailed in the world! How kind is it to assist others unasked; and how unnatural to refuse our relations assistance in the time of their distress! The diligent labourer is worthy of his hire. Virtuous love brings its own reward along with it. Nothing is irksome when done in fervent affection. With what deliberation ought men to proceed in marriage, even when they are assured of God's blessing on it! How powerful is the abominable influence of a covetous heart—It will make parents to sell their children, or prostitute them as harlots, and men to impose upon their nearest friends! How justly God marks the sins of his own favourites in their chastisements; and yet mercifully tries them with disappointments, that the love of creatures may not engross their whole heart! How little comfort men have ever found in transgressing God's original institution by taking a plurality of wives! Real marriage-love cannot be divided. Nothing can be heavier to an affectionate wife, than to have her husband's love estranged from her. But readily the Lord takes part with them who have least help in man; and makes up in one thing what he denies to them in another. Let us, therefore, like Leah, diligently observe the providence of God, not only in the birth of children, but in every other thing which may befall us; that we may acknowledge it with gratitude, trust him more cheerfully, and praise him to his glory.

34 And *Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

* Laban agreed to this, as he supposed that, all the time he was with Jacob, he had increased his flock more than he would have done in 17.

35 And he removed that day the he-goats that were ring-straked, and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hands of his sons.

36 And he set three days journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

* Lest that should make them bring forth young like Laban's share.

41 And it came to pass whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man *increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

CHAP. XXXI.

Twenty years ago, Jacob had fled from his father's family in a fright; and now in fear he flees from that of his father-in-law.

(1) Weary of envy and ill usage from Laban and his sons, and commanded and encouraged by God, he, with the consent of his wives, sets off for Canaan, with all that pertained to him, without giving Laban notice, lest he should have robbed him of it; 1—21. (2) After three days, Laban being informed of his departure, pursues him in great wrath, and overtakes him; and, notwithstanding a divine admonition, chides him sharply for going off so secretly, and for stealing his idols; 22—30. (3) After excusing his manner of departure, and finding that Laban could, by search, find nothing pertaining to him, Jacob sharply upbraids him with his attempts to injure him in his wages, if God had not prevented it; 31. (4) After covenanting that Jacob should not injure Laban's daughters, and that he and Laban should maintain mutual friendship; and confirming the same by the erection of a heap of stones, and by a solemn sacrifice and feast; they part amicably: 43—55.

Ps. 120. 3, 5. & 57. 4. & 64. 3, 4. Ezek. 16. 44. ver. 8, 9. Job 3. 2. Prov. 14. 39. & 27. 4. Eccl. 4. 4. Tit. 3. 3.

AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken happiness in that which will be their death or ruin. Saints have need to trust their God, as all others may deceive them; and reason to desire their heavenly home, as this world is not their rest. What an advantage to families are servants remarkably pious! How criminal for covetous masters to defraud them of their wages! What good words worldly men can give to save their own ends; and how wise they are for their own carnal interests! But their caution is vain when God designs to frustrate their purposes; and they often outwit themselves who intend to impose upon others. All agreements ought to be made with great clearness and accuracy, that no stain be thereby occasioned to our character; and, in the useful lawful means to promote our wealth, our trust should be fixed on the promised providence of God. His blessing can quickly increase a little, and make it a great store.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—Sinful marriages have sad consequences. Wives chosen for their beauty often bring a troublesome temper along with them. Envious discontentment, and disappointed pride, make multitudes miserable! Immoderate desire of children, or other created enjoyments, hurry many into fearful disorders! But it is vain ever to expect that happiness from creatures, which can be had only in and from God himself. No love to persons should hinder our detestation and reproof of their sins. Even the godly are apt to fall into snares, laid for them by their near relations. And bad examples are more readily imitated than good ones. If we are once overcome by sin, we are apt to yield to it more easily afterward. Many are more governed by the estimation of the world than by reason or religion. It is very wicked for parents to transmit their quarrels to their children. It is no lessening of our guilt that God brings good out of our evil. People often promise themselves of Laban, and, behold, it was not toward him ^cas before.

3 ¶ And the ^dLORD said unto Jacob, Return unto the ^eland of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be ^fwith thee.

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,

5 And said unto them, I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father hath ^hbeen with me.

6 And ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten ^ktimes; but God ⁱsuffered him not to hurt me.

8 If he said thus, ^mThe speckled shall be thy wages, then ^{*}all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ringstraked shall be thy hire, then bare all the cattle ring-straked.

9 Thus God hath taken away ⁿthe cattle of your father, and given them to me.

10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw ^oin a dream, and behold the [†]rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-straked, speckled, and grisled.

11 And ^pthe angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: and I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ring-straked, speckled, and grisled: for I have ^qseen all that Laban doth unto thee.

13 I am the ^rGod of Beth-el, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: ^snow arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, [‡]Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath ^tsold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

16 ^uFor all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever
God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the ^vcattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep; and Rachel had stolen the ^wimages that were her father's.

20 And Jacob stole away ^{||}unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had;
and he rose up, and passed over the river, and ^xset his face toward the mount Gilead.

22 ¶ And it was told Laban ^yon the third day that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took ^zhis brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead[‡].

24 And ^zGod came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, ^aTake heed that thou speak not to Jacob's either good or bad.

25 Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount:
and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said unto Jacob, ^bWhat hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters, ^cas captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and ^{*}steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away ^dwith mirth, and with songs, with tabret and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me ^eto kiss my sons and my daughters? thou hast now ^fdone foolishly in so doing.

29 It ^gis in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the ^hGod of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house; yet wherefore hast thou stolen ⁱmy gods?

31 ¶ And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because ^kI was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: before ^lour brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into ^mLeah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now ⁿRachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them: and Laban [†]searched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease ^omy lord that I cannot ^rrise up before thee; for ^qthe custom of women is upon me: and he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob ^rwas wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass, what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

CHAP. XXXII.

Here, in Jacob's return to Canaan, (1) He is scarcely parted from Laban when an host of protecting angels appear to him; 1, 2. (2) He is greatly distressed with the tidings that Esau, whom he had humbly informed of his return, was marching, with four hundred men, to destroy him and seize on his wealth; 3—6. (3) After dividing his family into two bands, that, if Esau should smite the one, the other might escape, he, by prayer, applies to God, for his promised protection; 7—12. (4) Directed by God, he sends off a large present of his cattle, in different droves, before the rest as a present for Esau, to appease him; 13—21. (5) Having conducted his family and flocks over the brook Jabbok, he, at Peniel, wrestles all night in prayer with God; obtains his blessing, and a change of his name in token thereof; while a disjointed thigh signified that he had not been able to wrestle with God in his own strength; 22—32.

AND Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—What stings do riches carry with them, that for them a man is envied of his neighbour! but base-minded indeed are those wretches who are ungrateful, and who reckon temporal wealth the principal glory. What an evil world is this, where the best behaviour cannot secure one's reputation! And often sour looks deprive families of their best supports. It is a mercy that, in the very crisis of difficulty, God visits and comforts his people: that he never changes, but wills that we should live near to him. When we get worldly blessings in a new-covenant channel, they are doubly sweet; and yet when outward mercies increase, we have great need to be stirred up to think of our celestial home. When we have gone safely out under God's direction, we need not fear to return under his care. But how apt are the best to forget the distinguished service of God, unless they be both driven and drawn to it.—How pleasant, when married persons dwell together in unity, and do nothing important without mutual consent!—How strong is our affection to idols, when we will rather steal them than want them; and how despicable those deities that can be stolen and hidden among the stuff!—God hath in his hand the hearts of all men; and he will continue to rescue his people when upon the brink of ruin, and will restrain their most outrageous enemies.—Bad hearts are pregnant with evil surmises; and if God hinder their mischievous designs, they readily pretend that they never formed them. Whatever wicked men think of foolish mirth and riotous feasting at the parting of friends, it is ordinarily a token of much coldness and corruption in religion.—Rough and undeserved reproaches provoke even good men, and of calm spirits, to vindicate themselves with heat, and to recriminate on their reproaches; and even to utter hasty wishes, which would render them miserable if they took effect. But God can marvellously over-rule the rage of men to a most fruitful issue. And with meekness and prudence we ought to cherish even the smallest approach towards peace and reconciliation. To forgive and forget injuries, and render good for evil, is truly christian; and near relations are doubly bound to mutual forgiveness and living in peace. But solemn covenants, amongst all, should be undertaken with the greatest deliberation, and observed with the most heedful attention.

all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

11 Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children.

12 And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 And he lodged there that same night: and took of that which came to his hand a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two hundred she-goats and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, 15 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten-foles.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and behold also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us: for he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face: peradventure he will accept of me.

21 So went the present over before him: and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford Jabbok.

23 And he took them and sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day.

25 And, when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh: and he said, I will not let thee go except thou bless me.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? and he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name: and he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? and he blessed him there.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 And as he passed over Peniel the sun rose upon him, and he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Here (1) While Esau draws nigh, Jacob so marshals his family, that the best beloved might most readily escape if violence should be offered: 1, 2. (2) Softened by the present, and by Jacob's humble obedience, but chiefly by God's providence, Esau meets Jacob in the kindest manner, inquires after the welfare of his family, with some reluctance accepts his present, and kindly offers him his attendance, or a convoy to protect him in his way to Canaan, which Jacob humbly declines accepting; 3—15. (3) Esau returning to mount Seir, Jacob having resided a short time at Succoth, crosses Jordan to the westward; and at Shalem purchases a field, and erects an altar for the worship of the God of himself and his seed; 16—20.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold Esau came and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost.

ourselves to prayer, and to join the protection of God with our prudent endeavours: and amidst fear of danger we ought to trust to, and plead, God's promises; and while commemorating our mercies, and conscious of our unworthiness, we must insist on his fulfilment of his word. In danger it is prudent to present a part, if that can preserve the whole: for peace cannot be bought too dear: and a large present is a good recommendation to a worldly mind; since apparent courage and confidence in a man's goodness lay him under a kind of obligation to shew it.—They, who would prevail in temptations, must first wrestle with God in prayer. If he exercise us with sore trials, we may depend on him, that as our days are, so shall our strength be. A deep sense of our insufficiency gives our faith occasion to take more firm hold of Christ.—God loves importunate prayers; and perseverance therein will be crowned with victory. How pleasant to have our hearts, and names and all things made new! Such memorials of remarkable fellowship with God are honourable and pleasing; and even children may look back upon their parents' mercies, as upon their own, with regard and thankfulness.—Let me here ask myself, What experience have I had of the ministration of God's angels? In what instances have I broken the bones with a soft answer, and pacified strong wrath with a gift in the bosom? What promises, spoken to my heart, have I pleaded at the throne of grace? What nights or days have I spent in wrestling with God; in behalf of myself, my family, my country, or the church of God? What blessings and answers of peace have I obtained? Where are those Bethels, and Peniels, in which God Almighty hath appeared unto me, and I have seen him in the person of Jesus Christ, as it were, face to face, and been preserved?

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 24—28. The son of God in human form appeared to Jacob, as if he intended to cast him down; but Jacob, enabled of God, with bodily, and chiefly spiritual, strength, in fervent prayer prevailed over what boded ill, and rendered him sensible of his weakness, Christ opposed him, and joined his thigh; 2 Cor. xii. 7; but, after encouraging his supplications, he changed his name, as a token of bettering his condition. Hence, when the church is represented as John, she is called Jacob; Amos vii. 2, 5, 8. Isa. xli. 14. but, when her valour and excellency are signified, she is called Israel; Gal. vi. 16.—Thus God gave Jacob strength to overcome, and also the reward and praise of the victory.

Ver. 29. He granted his request, and confirmed the blessings which he had formerly obtained; chap. xxvii. 28, 29. and xxviii. 3, 4, 13—15. and comforted him under the hurt of his thigh; Hos. vi. 1.

Ver. 30. He saw not the divine essence itself; Ex. xxxiii. 20, 23. but God in human shape, in a most familiar and friendly manner; Num. xii. 8.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—What sore trials saints often meet with in the very way which God directs them to take! But reasonable are the trials which God and his angels make to his people in such times of need. May Jesus and his angels so meet me in my way to the Canaan above! Deeply to be desired, is that contentment, which neither length of days can wear out, nor the most submissive yielding assuage; and when what would make a friend rejoice makes a brother envious and rage! Malicious spirits never forget injuries. Jealousy is cruel as the grave; and in this disordered world power and policy are often with the oppressor. In distress it is necessary to betake

3 And he passed ^bover before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and ^dembraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those ^{*}with thee? And he said, ^eThe children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Joseph near, and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, [†]What ⁱmeanest thou by all this drove which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have ^{*}enough, my brother; [‡]keep that thou hast unto thyself.

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I have seen thy face as ^bthough I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, my ⁱ blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have ^kenough: and he urged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us ^{*}go, and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that ⁱthe children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me; and if men should overdrive them one day all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according [§]as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be ^mable to endure, until I come unto my lord unto Seir.

15 And Esau said, Let me now ^{*}leave with thee some of the folk that are with me: and he said, [†]What needeth it? let me ⁿfind grace in the sight of my lord.

16 ¶ So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 And Jacob journeyed to ^oSuccoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called [‡]Succoth.

18 And Jacob came ^pto Shalem a city of [¶]Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padanaram; and pitched his tent before the city.

19 And ^qhe bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of ^rHamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred ^{*}pieces of money.

20 And he erected there an ^saltar, and called it [†]El-elohe-Israel.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Scarcely is Jacob's distresses from his friends over when his troubles from his children begin. Here (1) Dinah his daughter, of about fifteen years of age, is defiled by Shechem, a Canaanitish prince, while she attended some dance, or other meeting of the heathen ladies; 1—5. (2) Shechem, and Hamor his father, earnestly solicit her in marriage upon any terms. And Jacob's sons deceitfully and wickedly propose that they and all their subjects should be circumcised; 6—18. (3) By pretending that they would thus acquire Jacob's wealth, Hamor and Shechem persuade their subjects to be circumcised, and themselves set the example; 19—24. (4) While these Canaanites are sore of their circumcision-wound, Jacob's sons, particularly Simeon and Levi, Dinah's full brethren, murder them, and seize on their substance, to the great grief of their father; 25—31.

AND ^aDinah the daughter of Leah, ^awhich she bare unto Jacob, ^bwent out to see the daughters of the land.

2 And when ^cShechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, ^dsaw her, he took her, and lay with her, and [†]defiled her.

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake ^ekindly unto the damsel.

4 ¶ And Shechem spake unto his father Hamor, saying, ^fGet me this damsel to wife.

5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: (now his sons were with his cattle in the field;) and Jacob held his peace until they were come.

6 And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard ^git: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought ^hfolly in ⁱIsrael, in lying with Jacob's daughter; which thing ^jought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And ^kmake ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be ^lbefore you; dwell and trade ye therein, and get you possessions therein.

11 And Shechem said unto her father, and unto her brethren, ^mLet me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—It is prudent to keep out of view whatever might revive old quarrels. And humble submission powerfully mollifies offended pride. Cheerfully may we wait the issue of that which hath been committed to God. He often makes the issue of our trials much better than our fears suggested; and easily he mollifies the most fierce and froward heart! How sweet in itself, and what a token of a pious soul, is it, to view all that we have as the gifts of our gracious God! What a distinguished mercy it is to obtain the answer of our prayers, and to recover the favour of offended friends! And how inconsiderable the wants, and great the wealth, of those who have God their portion and guardian! A heart truly Christian is open and generous: but, if we have enough of our own, we ought civilly to refuse needless obligations, though we should never be behind in acts of civility.

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is ^{uncircumcised}; for that were a reproach unto us:

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem, Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was ^{more} honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto ^{the} gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them: let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people; if every male among us be circumcised as they are circumcised.

23 ^{Shall} not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs, be ours? Only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

24 And unto Hamor, and unto Shechem his son, hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and every male ^{was} circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were ^{sore}, that two of the sons of Jacob, ^{Simeon} and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and ^{slew} all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the ^{edge} of the sword, and took Dinah ^{out} of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and ^{spoiled} the city, because ^{they} had defiled their sister.

28 ^{They} took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field;

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives, took they captive, and spoiled even all that was ⁱⁿ the house.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, ^{Ye} have troubled me, to make me to stink ^{among} the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I, being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, ^{Should} he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

CHAP. XXXV.

Here repeated visits of the living God are mingled with deaths and distress in the family. (1) Under the special protection, and by the express direction of God, Jacob removes from Shechem to Beth-el, after purging his family from their idols; 1—6. (2) At Beth-el he builds an altar to God; buries Deborah, his mother's nurse; and enjoys a visit from his God, in which his new name of Israel, and the promises formerly made are confirmed to him; which Jacob receives with thankfulness; 7—15. (3) In his way southward, Rachel dies in childbed of Benjamin: Reuben commits incest with Bilhah: Jacob's sons being now twelve; 16—26. (4) At last he comes to Hebron, to his father Isaac, who dies ten years before the going down to Egypt; 27—29.

AND God ^{said} unto Jacob, Arise, go up ^{to} Beth-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

2 Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, ^{Put} away the strange gods that are among you, and ^{be} clean, and change your garments;

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el, and I will make there an altar unto God, who ^{answered} me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went.

4 And they gave unto Jacob ^{all} the strange gods which were in their hand, and ^{all} their ear-rings which were in their ears; and Jacob ^{hid} them under the oak which was by Shechem.

5 And they journeyed: and ^{the} terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

6 ¶ So Jacob came to ^{Luz}, which is in the land of Canaan, (that is Beth-el) he and all the people that were with him.

7 And ^{he} built there an altar, and called ^{the} place El-beth-el: because there God appeared unto him when he fled from the face of his brother.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—Into what scenes of guilt and misery do the pride, the vanity, and lust of young persons, often plunge themselves and their relations! One sin naturally makes way for another: and young women, who are given to gadding abroad, rarely maintain their chastity. Yet it is but just that such as have defiled young women should espouse them in marriage, and repair their outward injury, though they cannot lessen their guilt before God. How readily the affairs of a family run wrong, when parents' authority is so low that they must stand in awe of their children! How often heathens shew more respect to parents, in point of their marriage, than many professed Christians! Men's rage at one sin frequently issues in their doing what is still worse—in making religious pretences the mean of accomplishing the most devilish villanies; or in pretending public welfare, in order to obtain private ends! The hopes of gain will carry some men a great way in religion; and yet, after all, they lose their aim; for the profane reception of the seals of God's covenant issues most surely in just and inevitable ruin. Nothing is so treacherous or cruel, that indulged malice will not attempt. But it is still worse when children, after plunging their parents into disgrace and danger, add to their grief by an insolent justification of their conduct.—Let parents restrain their children from idle visits and foolish amusements; let them retain their proper authority; let them transact marriages with candour and self-denial; if they wish to be happy.

Ver. 2. Their outward purification was to be attended with internal purification of their heart from idols, or from cruel dispositions.

Ver. 7. He had formerly called it Bethel, the house of God. Now, to attest his experience of God's fulfilment of his promises, he calls it El-beth-el, the God of Beth-el.

8 But ¹³Deborah Rebekah's nurse died, and was buried beneath Beth-el¹⁴ under an oak: and the name of it was called †Allon-bachuth.

9 ¶ And God ¹⁵appeared unto Jacob again when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 *And God said unto him, ¹⁶Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

11 And God said unto him, ¹⁷I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins;

12 ¹⁸And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And God ¹⁹went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 ¶ And Jacob ²⁰set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone: and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And †Jacob called the name of the place, where God spake with him, Beth-el.

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el: and there was but a †little way to come ²¹to Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had ²²hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; thou shalt ²³have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul²⁴ was in departing (for she died), that she called his name ||Ben-oni: but his father called him ²⁵Benjamin.

19 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to ²⁶Ephrath, which is Beth-lehem.

20 And Jacob ²⁷set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.

21 And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond ²⁸the tower of Eder.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and ²⁹lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard it. Now ³⁰the sons of Jacob were twelve:

23 The sons of Leah; Reuben Jacob's first-born, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun:

24 The sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin:

25 And the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan, and Naphtali:

26 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad and Asher: These are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him ³¹in Padan-aram.

27 ¶ And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto ³²Mamre, unto the city of Arbah, which is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

28 ¶ And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.

29 ³³And Isaac gave up the ghost, and died, and ³⁴was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and his sons Esau and Jacob ³⁵buried him.

CHAP. XXXVI.

To mark out the accomplishment of the promise to Abraham, that he should be a father of many nations; and to Rebekah, that two nations were in her womb; we have here a short, but dry, history of Esau and his friends. (1) Of Esau's wives and children, and their removal from Canaan to mount Hor, or Seir, on the south of it; 1—8. and of his grand-children, and their dignity: 9—19. (2) Of the Horites, who were probably a branch of the Hivites, from whom the Edomites, sprung of Esau, took the country, and with whom they intermarried, and so embraced the heathenish religion; 20—30. (3) Of some kings, either Horites or Edomites, who reigned in Idumaea before and while the children of Israel were in Egypt; and of the dukes who succeeded them; 31—43.

NOW these are ³⁶the generations of Esau, who is Edom.

2 Esau ³⁷took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah, the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

3 And ³⁸Bashemath, Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

4 And Adah bare to Esau Eliphaz; and Bashemath bare ³⁹Reuel;

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and Jaalim, and Korah: these are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him ⁴⁰in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Esau took his wives, and his sons, and his daughters, and all the ⁴¹persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Canaan; and ⁴²he went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob.

7 ⁴³For their riches were more than that they might dwell together; and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle.

8 Thus dwelt Esau in ⁴⁴mount Seir: Esau is Edom.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—Alas! how apt are the best of saints to forget their Bethel-enjoyments, and their Bethel-vows, till the Lord by his providence shuts them up, and by his word reminds them of them! and yet how precious are such visits, and how fixed and lasting ought to be our care in maintaining intimate fellowship with God, when once we have attained it. What corruptions and idols have need to be purged from the best hearts and families on earth, especially before solemn approaches to God; for let us always remember, there is no acceptable drawing near to God without having on Jesus' righteousness and grace, nor with allowed sin in the heart: and sins must be put away with a resolution never to return to them. How much better to pay our vows too late than never! What deaths, what disorders may we expect to meet with on earth! But surely it is a mercy much to be esteemed, that our forgetfulness of God doth not make him forget his kindness or promises to us! he often sweetens our past troubles, and prepares us for future ones, with the manifestations of his favour; and his sweetness never changes, even when the family, the wives, the children, or other created enjoyments, which we have so impatiently desired, prove deathful or distressing to us. Ah! how plainly men's sins are written on their judgments! and how infatuated they must be who think so little of death, amidst so many births, deaths, and graves, which all warn us of it! May our hearts be set upon our Christ, our family, our house eternal in the heavens! An old age on earth is so filled up with sins and troubles, that it is scarcely worth coveting.—But in the now-deceased Isaac let me behold my Redeemer! How often promised! how earnestly desired! how long expected! how supernatural, and how gladdening to angels and men, was his birth! How maliciously was He, the Father's only begotten Son, hated, mocked, and persecuted, by his Jewish brethren, at the expence of their ejection from the church of God! With what cheerfulness he assumed our nature, bore our sins and punishments, bore his cross, and laid down his life a ransom for men, that he might render the everlasting covenant a new testament in his blood, and purchase all spiritual blessings for us! being raised from death, he is espoused to a chosen church, chiefly consisting of Gentile sinners; and his blood, his prayers, and his power, produce a most numerous offspring of spiritual and professed seed. But how great is his glory at his Father's right hand! and he will be glorious in the church below; where he digs the wells of salvation, to give drink to his people, notwithstanding the envy of a carnal world. For a time, what a struggle between his Jewish and Gentile church, till at last the former, rejecting their birthright, and forfeiting their blessing, were cast out, and the latter became the highly favoured, but much afflicted people of God.

XXXVI.—Let me remark, that, if men sin wilfully, they may expect their name to be tainted with infamy; for the purpose of God must stand firm amidst all the changes upon earth; how Esau, of his own accord, removes from Canaan, leaving that land of promise to the proper heirs; and that, where Christ is not concerned, God condemns the persons and families of men, however dignified, and cuts short their account. CHAP. XXXVII.

Begins the history of Joseph. Observe, (1) The malicious hatred of his brethren against him, because he informed his father of their crimes; 1, 2; his father loved him much; 3, 4; and God favoured him with dreams predictive of his future dominion over them; 5—11. (2) The mischiefs they did him, when he kindly visited them by his father's order; 12—17; they conspired to murder him; then, at Reuben's intercession, they cast him into a pit, where they expected to starve him; and, lastly, to the grief of Reuben, who intended to save them, they sold him to the Ishmaelites and Midianites, who sold him to Potiphar the Egyptian; 18—30, 36. (3) By staining his coat with blood, they persuaded their father that a wild beast had devoured him, and thus almost killed him with grief; 31—35.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land where— in his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

honours are not much to be coveted, since wicked men have ordinarily the first and largest share of them; and they who join themselves with heathens may expect to be held by God as such. We must wait with patience for the fulfilment of God's promises, for promised privileges come often slowly, however certainly; and, while the heirs of promise live in distress and want in this world, the heirs of the curse often attain great power and wealth.

2 These were the generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren ; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives : and Joseph brought unto his father their evil report.†

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age : and he made him a coat of many colours.

4 And, when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶ And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren : and they hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed :

7 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo my sheaf arose, and also stood upright ; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said unto him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us ? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us ? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

9 ¶ And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more ; and, behold, the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren : and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed ? shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth ?

11 And his brethren envied him ; but his father observed the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem ? Come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said unto him, Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks ; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

15 And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field : and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou ?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren : tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence ; for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

18 ¶ And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh.

20 *Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit ; and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him : and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands ; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him ; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stripped Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours that was on him :

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit : and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 And they sat down to eat bread : and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmeelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery, and balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother and conceal his blood ?

27 Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites, and let not our hand be upon him ; for he is our brother and our flesh : and his brethren were content.

28 Then there passed by Midianites, merchant-men ; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver : and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

29 ¶ And Reuben returned unto the pit ; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit : and he rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child is not not ; and I, whither shall I go ?

31 ¶ And they took Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood ;

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father ; and said, This have we found : know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat ; an evil beast hath devoured him ; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Begins the history of Judah, another of Jacob's sons, and informs us, (1) Of his rash marriage with an accursed Canaanitess, and the unhappy death of his two eldest sons, after their marriage with Tamar, another Canaanitish maid ; 1—11. (2) How Tamar, disappointed of marriage with Shelah, his youngest son, decoyed Judah himself into incest with her ; which issued first in his rage against Tamar as an adulteress, and next in confusion to himself on account of his being the occasion of and partner in her guilt ; 12—26. (3) From this incestuous mixture proceeded twins, Pharez and Zerah, by whom the numerous tribe of Judah was chiefly built up ; 27—30.

AND it came to pass, at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

2 And Judah saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was Shuah ; he took her, and went in unto her.

3 And she conceived, and bare a son ; and he called his name Er.

4 And she conceived again, and bare a son ; and she called his name Onan.

5 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son ; and called his name Shelah : and he was at Chezib when she bare him.

6 And Judah took a wife for Er his first-born, whose name was Tamar.

7 And Er, Judah's first-born, was wicked in the sight of the LORD ; and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, Go in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be his : and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did displeased the LORD : wherefore he slew him also.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, Remain a widow at thy father's house till Shelah my son be grown : for he said, Lest peradventure he die also as his brethren did. And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And in process of time the daughter of Shuah Judah's wife died ; and Judah was comforted, and went up unto his sheep-shearers to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnath to shear his sheep.

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, and sat in an open place, which is by the way to Timnath : for she saw that Shelah was grown, and she was not given him unto wife.

15 When Judah saw her he thought her to be an harlot, because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee ; (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law.) And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me ?

17 And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge till thou send it ?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee ? And she said, Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose and went away, and laid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand : but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot that was openly by the way-side ? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her ; and also the men of the place said that there was no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be shamed : behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

24 ¶ And it came to pass, about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter-in-law hath played the harlot ; and also, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Judah shall I not here also turn aside, and behold Jesus the Lamb of God ! Was not he the darling of his Father ? Did not his father invest him with the robes of manhood, and of mediatory office ? Did not his brethren of Judah hate him for his faithful reproofs, for his prediction of his own future greatness, and on account of the distinguished regard shewn to him by his Father ? How astonishing his kindness, in coming into the world to seek and save that which was lost ! And yet, when he came, how ungratefully was he driven into Egypt ! how basely betrayed ! sold for the price of a slave ! and delivered into the hand of sinners to be crucified !

CHAP. XXXVIII. Ver. 1. Whether this marriage of Judah took place immediately after, or rather before, the selling of Joseph, is not absolutely certain.

Ver. 8. According to this patriarchal custom, afterwards enacted into an express law of God ; Deut. xxv. 5, 6. the first-born was accounted legal son and heir to the deceased brother, and the rest of the children reckoned his who begot them.

Ver. 9. His sin was extremely heinous, not only as it proceeded from envy of his brother's honour, and contempt of the promised seed, but as it was horrid and unnatural in itself. Nor till the last judgment will it appear what guilt of this nature hath been committed among mankind, nor how fearfully God hath punished the same.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVII.—How dangerous it is for parents to mark their partial regard to children in finery of apparel, or in any other manner ; for the Lord chiefly tries his people in the most tender points ; and our trials are frequently rendered doubly heavy in respect of the instruments which Providence uses to accomplish them. How devilish must be the nature of envy, that can make excellency, nay, the favour of God, a reason of the most bitter hatred and bloody cruelty, and can repay the most affectionate love with deliberate murder ! But evil-doers commonly hate such as labour to reform them. How often young men's dreams of prosperity make them overlook the trouble that is in the way to it ! And no less frequently is the fond indulgence of parents repaid with grief, or with the most unnatural cruelty. But, notwithstanding every seeming hindrance, the Lord's gracious designs, and promises to his people, shall be exactly accomplished : while they, who mock at his intimations of his purpose, will but expose themselves to shame. God's providences indeed often appear darkest when the deliverance is at hand. He makes the common events of providence to become critical for the purposes of his glory ; and so overrules wicked men as to make one sin a restraint from a greater, and bitter disappointments to issue in mercy. To what an amazing pitch of insensibility do crying sins stupify the conscience ! Seldom is a crime committed but a lie is framed to conceal it—so natural to men is a lying spirit ! Immoderate love is often followed with obstinate and immoderate sorrow ; and yet many of our bitterest griefs are founded upon mistaken imaginations. But

CHAP. XXXIX.

Continues the history of Joseph. We have, (1) Joseph a slave in Potiphar's family; but so prospered of God, that he is quickly made overseer of all the affairs of it; 1-6. (2) Captivated with his beauty, his mistress repeatedly solicits him to her adulterous embraces; but, helped of God, he detests and avoids it, as a horrid ingratitude to his master, and an heinous offence to his God; 7-12. (3) Enraged by his refusal, she falsely charges him with offering her violence, and he is cast into prison; 13-20. (4) Instructed of God, the keeper of the prison makes Joseph overseer of the other prisoners, and their work; 21-23.

AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt: and Potiphar an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites which had brought him down thither.

2 And the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man: and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass, from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake: and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not aught he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph was a goodly person, and well-favoured.

7 ¶ And it came to pass, after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie with me.

8 But he refused; and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master woteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand.

9 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business: and there was none of the men of the house there within.

12 And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth, 14 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an Hebrew unto us to mock us: he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a loud voice:

15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home.

17 And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me:

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

19 And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his wrath was kindled.

20 And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

21 ¶ But the LORD was with Joseph, and shewed him mercy, and gave him damnation which attends it. So deceitful indeed is sin, that hardened sinners are sometimes the most severe against their fellow, but less guilty, offenders; and malice against their person puts on the cloak of zeal against their sins. Oh, what a mercy, if such be brought to a kindly sense of, and return from, their sinfulness at last! Especially ought we to exercise much tenderness and compassion towards such as we have tempted into sin. But is any thing so astonishing as that this enormous wickedness, this unnatural incest, should be made by JEHOVAH the distant means of the incarnation of his only begotten Son! Behold how—where sin had abounded and reigned unto disorder, shame, and death—grace reigns, through righteousness, unto inconceivable honour and everlasting life by Jesus Christ our Lord!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVIII.—Unhallowed and over-hasty marriages often issue in fearful and numerous mischiefs; and such sins in parents are punished by the like in their children. The lusts of the flesh issue in terrible plagues and untimely deaths. And extremely foolish is their choice, who dare to purchase a momentary enjoyment of their lust by exposing themselves to everlasting torments in hell! How tremendous the sovereignty of God in marking out men for objects of his distinguished vengeance against sin! And empty professors of the true religion are generally fixed upon for this purpose! At what an easy rate do most men part with their true honour and salvation, while they are mightily concerned about their temporal interests or worldly securities! Temporal loss and worldly shame weigh more with them than sin, with all the

CHAP. XL.

Here things are working, though slowly, towards Joseph's advancement. (1) Two of Pharaoh's servants are committed to prison, and there to Joseph's care, and so become witnesses of his extraordinary conduct; 1—4. (2) They dream of their own impending fate, and Joseph interprets their dreams; 5—19. (3) His interpretation is verified in the hanging of the chief baker, and the restoration of the chief butler to his office; 20—22. (4) In the foresight of the butler's preferment, Joseph recommends his case to him; 14, 15; but in vain; 23.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIX.—What need we have of humble hearts—for who knows how low and debased God may make our lot on earth!—But the advantage of God's presence and favour is in every condition chiefly to be desired. If he be with us, we shall be well wherever we are. His blessing makes rich and honoured; and without it all our labours are in vain. Godly and faithful servants are an inestimable treasure; and such as are wise will not fail to esteem and prefer them. Providential smiles are often but inlets to fearful and strong temptations, or to grievous and lasting distresses. But to what horrid lengths in the most shameful wickedness will such go as have once broken through the natural restraints of common modesty—abandoned themselves, they can use the most shameless endeavours to draw others into sin. A fiery furnace is less to be feared than a beautiful abandoned woman. Might is the only preservative from violent temptations to uncleanness; and surely it is better to hazard our life than to wound our conscience. But, in such most ensnaring temptations, a deep sense of the evil of sin, as offensive to God and injurious to man, is the only thing that will effectually prevent compliance.—But how hard to obtain protection from a lying tongue! The best of men have been accused of the most atrocious crimes. And there is a great readiness in men to believe an evil report, especially against the professors of religion.—Here the most improbable story gains easy credit. How often guilt is honoured, and innocence oppressed and punished! Yet let me not be weary in well-doing, or in resisting unto blood, striving against sin; for the bitterest offerings with a good conscience, are to be preferred to all the pleasures of sin.

Though persecutors should be deaf to my plea, there is one JEHOVAH, who seeth and judgeth. In his time he will vindicate my character, and plead my cause. No prison can exclude his presence. He will certainly give me my reward in heaven, and perhaps part of it in a prison, where I shall be more out of the reach of temptation, and on the nearest way to my eternal, if not also my temporal, preferments. If God be with me, who can be against me?—Meanwhile, let me, in Joseph, behold how Jesus was debased and exalted!—How he was in all points tempted by devils and men like as we are, yet without sin!—How he was persecuted without a cause! And how upheld of God, as the man in whom his soul delighted, till, for the sufferings of death, exalted at his own right hand in glory!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XL.—Mark, my soul, in what slippery places great men stand; and how sudden may be their fall into destruction; their removal from a palace to a prison; nay, to a gibbet! It is much safer, as well as sweeter, to be the servants of Christ than of the loftiest monarchs on earth. Strangely, but in wisdom, are the links of Providence connected. God can easily wound the stoutest spirits, and make their imagination subservient to the ends of his glory, and the advancement of his people. But distresses are often in the hearts of sinners, which themselves only know; and in his sovereignty God sometimes renders his people more clear, with respect to the future lot of others on earth, than with respect to their own. It is a mercy, even in a prison, to have one to compassionate our case: and communication of CHAP. XLI.

Here providence works more directly towards the advancement of Joseph, and for the maintenance of Jacob and his family. Observe, (1) Pharaoh's dreams of seven fat kine devoured by as many lean ones: and of seven large ears of corn devoured by as many thin and blasted ones; 1—7. (2) None of the wise Egyptians being found capable to interpret these dreams, the chief butler remembers, and recommends, Joseph to Pharaoh; who interprets them, of seven years of extraordinary plenty, succeeded by as many of famine; and admonishes Pharaoh how to manage the plentiful crops, so as to preserve his subjects alive during the famine; 8—36. (3) Joseph's advice being approved, himself is appointed ruler over all the kingdom of Egypt, to put it in execution; and has the ensigns of dignity, together with a new name, and a noble wife bestowed upon him; 37—45. (4) While God gives him two sons, Joseph purchases and lays up prodigious quantities of corn during the years of plenty; and begins to supply the inhabitants with it in the years of famine: 45—57.

AND it came to pass, at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed; and, behold, he stood by the river.

2 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well-favoured kine, and fat-fleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

3 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill-favoured and lean-fleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

4 And the ill-favoured and lean-fleshed kine did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept, and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good.

6 And, behold, seven thin ears, and blasted with the east-wind, sprung up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears: and Pharaoh awoke, and behold it was a dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker.

11 And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he: we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was therewith us a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

14 ¶ Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him hastily out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh saying, It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fat fleshed and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill-favoured and lean-fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:

21 And, when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears withered, thin and blasted with the east-wind, sprung up after them:

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one: God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.

26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.

27 And these seven thin and ill-favoured kine, that came up after them, are seven years; and the seven empty ears, blasted with the east-wind, shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh. What God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land:

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land, by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.

32 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him our griefs to godly men is a ready way to obtain solution of our doubts, and recover comfort in our afflictions. It is prudent to conceal the infirmity of our friends, even while we plead our own innocence; and, in exculpating ourselves, we cannot be too careful to avoid reflecting upon those who have injured us. What great events are often connected with the transaction of a moment: and often the enlargement of the wicked is at hand, when that of the choicest saints lies at a great distance. Worldly advancements render men strangely thoughtless. No favour, or even gratitude of men, especially of great ones, can be safely depended on. Let me therefore always trust in the Lord, and be in his fear all the Jay long. But, turn aside, my soul.—Behold the man who is God's Fellow, in prison and in judgment, on account of his persevering integrity and holiness!—Behold how the imaginations of Caiaphas the high priest, the stiffness of Pilate the Roman governor, with respect to the inscription on the cross, and even the dream of his wife, concur to promote his honour! Behold him on the cross moved with deep compassion towards even his enemies, and crowning one of his fellow-sufferers with eternal life, while he consigns the other to eternal death! But, O JEHOSHAPHAT, forbid that I should ever forget the love and compassion of this adorable Jesus, but record his mercies in my heart for eternal remembrance.

appoint officers over the land, and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plentiful years.

35 And let them gather all the food of those good years that come; and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against these seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine.

37 And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

38 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is?

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewn thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art.

40 Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck:*

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On. And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶ And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plentiful years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 ¶ And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came; which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On, bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the first-born Manasseh: for God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

52 And the name of the second called he Ephraim: for God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

53 ¶ And the seven years of plentifulness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

54 And these seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And, when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth: and Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

CHAP. XLII.

Here, (1) Scarcity of victuals in Canaan obliges Joseph's brethren, who had sold him, humbly to apply to him for corn; 1—6. (2) To try them, he challenges them for spies, which obliges them to give him an account of their family; 7—20. (3) Awakened in their conscience, by his behaviour towards them, they penitently reflect on the injury they had done him, while Reuben, with pleasure, remembers how he had stood his friend; 21, 22. (4) Deeply affected with their confessions, Joseph retains Simeon a prisoner, to secure their return with Benjamin; and sends away the rest with their sacks full of corn, and their money returned therein; which, when discovered, fills them with new perplexities; 23—29. (5) Upon the report of what they had met with, and especially that it behoved Benjamin to go with them on their return, Jacob is greatly distressed; 30—38.

NOW, when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt: Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Joseph was the governor over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye?

things, are remarkably connected! Happy the nation, the management of which is intrusted to such persons!—But chiefly rejoice, my soul, that Jesus was taken from prison and from judgment, and hath all power given to him, in heaven and on earth, in order to bestow blessings on perishing sinners! Rejoice that God hath made him to forget his labour, and made him fruitful in the land of his affliction! He seeth his seed, the travail of his soul, and is satisfied. And what a mercy is it that all nations have access to him, not to buy with money, but to receive all the blessings of time and eternity from him without money and without price!

CHAP. XLII. Ver. 7. Joseph dealt thus harshly with them, (1) That he might hereby procure a full account of the present state of his father's family: (2) That they might be the more thoroughly convinced of, and humbled for, their former sin; particularly their hatred, intended murder, and actual selling of himself: (3) To enhance their joy when he should discover himself: (4) To render the fulfilment of his own dreams the more conspicuous.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLI.—Certain, though slow, is the execution of God's purposes of favour to his people; and by the most insignificant, or even extravagant means, he often accomplishes them. But when patience hath had her perfect work, God can easily furnish the means of his favourites' deliverance: and, when his time of delivering his people comes, he causes men to remember and to do their duty towards them; and effectually to accomplish his purpose. How amiable and excellent, when great gifts and great graces are adorned with the deepest humility, referring all the glory to God, and behaving modestly towards men! But changeable and perishing are all earthly enjoyments, especially desirable ones. Let me then use them with caution, and lay up in heaven a better and enduring substance, for it is infinitely necessary to provide without delay against future, against everlasting wants: in the meanwhile we must esteem it an undeserved mercy that God hath set prosperity and adversity, plenty and famine, debasement and glory, the one against the other. How glorious the character, in which extensive knowledge, firm friendship, active diligence, unshaken fidelity, forgetfulness of injuries received, and hearty acknowledgment of God in all

And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies: to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons; we are true men, thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one is not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, ye are spies:

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: by the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you; for else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies.

17 And he put them all together into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for I fear God:

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses.

20 But bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.

21 ¶ And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore behold also his blood is required.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake unto them by an interpreter.

24 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and thus did he unto them.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

27 And as one of them opened his sack, to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for behold it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and lo it is even in my sack: and their heart failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them; saying, 30 The man who is the lord of the land spake roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies:

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father; one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men; leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone:

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me; then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver your brother, and ye shall traffick in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that behold every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

38 And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he is left alone: if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

CHAP. XLIII.

Here, (1) The continuance of the dearth forces Jacob, however reluctant, to send his sons again to Egypt for corn with double money, and a present; and even to send Benjamin along with them; 1—14. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLII.—What a mercy it is to be assured that in the Canaan above there is no scarcity, no want! And here on earth, one country can ordinarily supply the wants of another! But is it not strange that the accursed descendants of Ham should have plenty, when God's peculiar favourites, the seed of Abraham, are in want! Yet even this is evidently to bring about his purposes for his people, and to shew us that all the mysteries of his providence shall display his power and wisdom, and in the issue bring greater benefits to his redeemed; and in God's time the most malignant opposers of his designs are made willingly to submit thereto, and accomplish the same. But, while trusting in the Lord, parents and masters ought to provide, with great care, for the external subsistence, and how much more for the religious edification, of their families! What harsh measures are sometimes necessary to awaken, and thoroughly convince, such consciences as have been long asleep and hardened in sin! But the fear of God, prevalent in the heart, effectually determines men to equity and benevolence, and restrains from tyrannical cruelty and injustice. Trying providences often recall sin to men's remembrance, and render that bitter which was formerly sweet. And it is indeed a needful stroke that awakens the conscience to a serious remembrance of former sins. When we share with others in their calamity, it is no small comfort to know ourselves clear of their guilt. How often God writes men's sin on their troubles! These Hebrews had sold their brother for money, and now his money fills them with dread; guilty consciences being subject to perpetual alarms. There is need of constant preparation for trials, as we often meet with them when and where they were least expected. But mournful is the case of families when mutual trust in one another is weakened. Surely there is great need of an holy disengagement from all creatures; for, in proportion to our love to them, will be our fears of losing them, and our distress in parting from them. Very often the best of saints distress themselves with needless fears, that all things are against them, when they are really, nay, remarkably working for their good. And no wonder, when the very children, from whom distinguished comforts are justly expected, so often, by their wickedness, bring their aged parents with sorrow to the grave.—But now, my soul, when Jesus deals roughly with me, to convince and humble my proud spirit, or to try my love to himself and his Father, and to my fellow saints, let me always acknowledge my offences with brokenness of heart; and let me bless him who hath so planned, and so executes his schemes of redemption, that I am always obliged to return to himself, as my great supplier, in time of need.

CHAP. XLIV.

Here (1) Joseph, to try his brethren's affection to Benjamin, orders not only every man's money to be returned in his sack, as before, but also to put the silver cup, in which himself had drank at the entertainment, in the mouth of Benjamin's, and then to pursue them as thieves, and discover the cup; 1—12. (2) Returning to Joseph, they acknowledge the guilt, and offer to be all his bondmen on account thereof; but Joseph insists that none but Benjamin should remain for his bond-servant; 13—17. (3) Hereupon Judah, in a most pathetic address, represents how much their father's life was bound up in the safe return of Benjamin; with what reluctance he had permitted him to come with them; and how himself had engaged as surety for him;—and begs that he may be condemned to remain in bondage instead of him; 18—34.

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn-money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIV.—The trials, the sore trials, of God's principal favourites, may often last long, and sink deep, before their deliverance come. But in difficult circumstances, where something dear to us is at stake, it is good to take the advice of others, who are less interested. What a mercy is bread, that nothing earthly can supply the want of it! What then can supply the want of Jesus, the bread of life? In the use of every prudent endeavour to avoid danger, it is proper to commit our affairs to the Lord, and submit ourselves entirely to his disposal; but men, when their consciences are overcharged with guilt, are apt to fear without ground, even where kindness is intended. In every circumstance, honesty is the best policy, and every success in business should be regarded as a treasure given by God to us. What tender passions possess the noblest of souls! Their earnest prayers to God for our welfare are a distinguished kindness. And, if persons with whom we deal have whimsical scruples, it is becoming to bear with them in love.—But, O my soul, forget not Jesus thy brother! Let all my troubles and wants oblige me to return to him, as my alone Saviour. And, though he lift me up, and cast me down again, fear not, only believe, and thou shalt see the glory of God!

CHAP. XLV.

Already Joseph had twice wept over his brethren while he tried them; ch. xlii. 24. and xliii. 30. Now, (1) With the most affectionate weeping, he discovers himself to them; and labours to moderate their fear and grief, by remarking the Lord's gracious end in their sinful selling of him; 1—8. (2) Both Joseph and Pharaoh invite Jacob and his family into Egypt, and promise them the best of the land for their residence; 9—20. (3) After bestowing some presents on them, Joseph dispatches his brethren to bring his father and family to Egypt; 21—24. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIV.—The joys of this world are quickly changed into lamentation, mourning, and wo! But, amidst all its variety of changes, we cannot but observe that God exactly fulfils his purposes in his own time; and makes the proudest to bow before the righteous at his pleasure. How pleasant it is when brethren's hearts are so united that one is willing to bear another's burdens, however heavy and grievous! And it is highly becoming when children cannot bear to see the grief and distress of their aged parents, but are using every method to promote their peace. Learn, O my soul, to walk circumspectly! Snares may be laid for me where I least expect them.—If I am wronged by false accusations, let me always observe and acknowledge the righteous hand of God therein. If I am overtaken in a fault, let my submission be humble and candid. Let me always give honour to whom honour is due; and be cautious in that which I utter before them. Let me be always faithful to my engagements, tenderly affectioned towards my parents, and ready to lay down my life for the brethren. But may my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, and my right hand forget her cunning, if I forget him, whose way is in the sea, and his paths in the mighty waters of darkness and trouble, and who even in these reveals himself to his people: him, who searcheth the hearts and trieth the reins of his people: him, who ever liveth to make intercession for us: him, who is the surety of the better testament; and who, when God had no pleasure in sacrifices and offerings, said, Lo, I come; I delight to do thy will, O my God; thy law is within my heart.

CHAP. XLVI.

Here (1) Jacob, forced by a famine, invited by a son, and directed and encouraged by his God, sets off for Egypt with all that he had; 1—7. (2) Sixty-six of his descendants go along with him, and three others meet him there; 8—27. (3) Joseph kindly welcomes his father and brethren, and directs them how to address Pharaoh, when called for, pursuant to his recommendation of them; 28—34.

AND Israel took his journey, with all that he had, and came to ^aBeersheba, and offered sacrifices unto the ^bGod of his father ^{*}Isaac.

2 And ^cGod spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I.

are confounded, how they are loved-melted, at his presence! how encouraged by the gracious words, the exceeding great and precious promises, which proceed from his mouth! Let me behold what desire he and his Father have to place them with himself, in due time, in the best of the celestial abodes!—How reviving the hopes of being for ever with the Lord, and seeing him as he is, are to the dying saints! and how agreeable the tokens of approaching death are to them on that account!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVI.—Learn, my soul, to begin all thy thanksgivings with the beginnings of thy mercies; and let me worship God as not only my own, but also the God of my fathers. In all the changes of thy lot consult the Lord's direction, and supplicate his presence. It is safe to go any where on earth if his everlasting arms be about me, his covenant established with me, and his comforts delighting my soul.—God's promises, though they lie long under ground, will spring up, bud, and ripen at last. Let me therefore always take care of my whole family, and live in the firm assurance that on Jesus is the care of all the churches. Let me hope that, though my beginnings be small, they will, in God's time, greatly, and even quickly increase. Wherever I am, in station or in place, let me attend to its relative duties, giving honour to whom honour is due; and let me never be ashamed of an honest calling, but endeavour therein to abide with God. Be it my care and happiness to live always near the heavenly state, and as little connected with carnal and worldly men as possible; that when it pleases God to call me hence, I may be willing and ready at his bidding.

30 But I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying-place. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he sware unto him. And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Here, (1) Hearing of his father's sickness, Joseph goes to visit him, and takes his two sons along with him; 1, 2. (2) After a rehearsal of God's blessing him at Luz, Jacob adopts, and solemnly blesses Joseph's sons, Manasseh and Ephraim; and, notwithstanding their father's interposition, prefers Ephraim the younger; 3-20. (3) In the assured faith of God's bringing his seed back to Canaan, he bequeaths a particular spot of it to Joseph; 21, 22.

AND it came to pass, after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick. And he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee. And Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

3 ¶ And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee, for an everlasting possession.

5 And now thy two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

6 And thy issue, which thou begetteth after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan, in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Beth-lehem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father,

They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them.

10 (Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see.) And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face: and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head; guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the first-born.

15 And he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, 16 The angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac: and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father; for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 ¶ And Israel said unto Joseph, Behold, I die; but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover, I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVIII.—It is becoming, and highly profitable, for children to visit their godly parents in their dying moments: and while it is necessary for parents to make their last wills with the greatest exactness, that there may be no disputes relative to them after they are dead, it is peculiarly useful and pleasant for them to commemorate at such a time God's former kindnesses to their soul. How encouraging is it to found our prayers for, and our expectations of, the prosperity of our friends upon the promises of God, intimated to ourselves! and how pleasant to think of such deceased friends as we hope to meet in glory! The favours of God often exceed the hopes of his people, and sweetly compel them to the most abundant praise! and what a mercy is redemption through Jesus' blood! It relishes in a dying hour, and is sweeter than honey and the honey-comb. Surely it becomes those who have shared it to mention the same, and bear REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVII.—Let me never be ashamed of my relations, however low they be in station, if they be honest: nor let me ever be an idler, an inactive person, either in church or state. Activity and ingenuity in my profession are the way to preferment. What though man's days be shortened, and filled up with troubles, yet my life on earth, whether perplexed or prosperous, is but a pilgrimage to the better country above. In the meanwhile let me highly esteem, as a blessing, the prayers of such as fear God: and, if he put me into power, let my care be to do good to all, especially to those of the household of faith. Let mercy, as well as equity, run through all my conduct. But go where I will, and enjoy what I may, let me keep sight of the promises, and of the everlasting abodes: and, though for a while I content myself with this world as a lodging, let my care, my hope, be to go to the heavenly Canaan at my death, and be with Christ, which is far better. Even here also let me behold him presenting an elect world of his brethren before the great King, the Lord of hosts, and preparing mansions for them:—behold him as giving out of his unbounded stores all the necessary blessings of time and eternity, not for our money, our cattle, our land, our persons, but freely, according to the exceeding riches of his grace; and by his oath confirming the promises of our present peace and everlasting happiness!

CHAP. XLIX.

Here, (1) The dying patriarch Jacob assembles his twelve sons to hear his last words describing their future fate; 1, 2. (2) In blessing them, he foretells that Reuben's incest should be punished with the instability and meanness of his tribe; 3, 4. That Simeon and Levi's murder of the Shechemites should be marked in the dispersion of their posterity among the other tribes; 5—7. That Judah's family should become most numerous and powerful: should enjoy a country abounding with wine and milk: should long bear rule over the rest; and at last give birth to the Messiah; 8—12. That the Zebulunites should inhabit the coast near Zidon, and trade by sea; 13. That the posterity of Issachar should chiefly live by husbandry and the breeding of cattle, regardless of taxes imposed on them; 14, 15. That the Danites should maintain their freedom, and craftily conquer their enemies; 16, 17. That the Gadites should be exceedingly exposed to invasions, and in their turn spoil their invaders; 19. That the country of Asher should abound with excellent corn and delicious fruits; 20. That the Naphtalites should be distinguished for alertness, courtesy, and peacefulness; 21. That Joseph's posterity should be exceedingly numerous, honoured, and powerful; 22—26. That the Benjaminites should be noted warriors in the first and last periods of the Jewish state; 27. (3) Having thus blessed their tribes, he charges them to bury him with his friends in Canaan, and dies; 28—33.

AND Jacob called unto his sons, and said, "Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days."

2 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Jacob; and hearken unto Israel your father.

3 ¶ Reuben, thou art my first-born, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power:

4 Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel, because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defilest thou it: he went up to my couch.

5 ¶ Simeon and Levi are brethren; instruments of cruelty are in their habitations.

6 O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall.

7 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

8 ¶ Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

testimony for God; for the encouragement of others whom they leave behind. How the sovereignty of God shines, in preferring one person or family to another! But rejoice, my soul, that the Lord hath made us Gentiles fruitful in the land of our affliction. He hath blessed our church with numbers and privileges far superior to those of Israel, his first-born. In infinite mercy, when our godly relations forsake us by death, our God remains with us! Nay, since Jesus has left us, by going to the Father, the Lord the Spirit supplies his place, to guard and guide us to the promised inheritance.

CHAP. XLIX. Ver. 4. Whatever power or dignity the Reubenites had at first, they quickly lost it; Num. x. 18—21. Josh. iv. 12, 13. and xxii. with Judg. v. 15, 16. 1 Chron. xv. 18—26. They never rendered themselves famous by any noted exploit; nor did any judge, king, or prophet, that we know of, proceed from among them.

Ver. 6. They digged down the walls of the house where Hamor and Shechem secured themselves; or they seized upon oxen, and carried them off for a spoil.

Ver. 7. The Simeonites had their inheritance in Canaan out of the lot of Judah; Josh. xix. 1—9. this being too small for them, they had to seize for themselves part of Arabia; 1 Chron. iv. 39—43: and it is said that many of them dispersed themselves among the other tribes, in the character of teachers. The Levites lived scattered among all the other tribes; and were the spiritual instructors of their brethren, and the collectors of the sacred revenues; Josh. xxi. 1 Chron. vi. xxiii—xxvi.

Scarcely had Jesus appeared in the flesh, when Judea was altogether reduced into a Roman province, having no sovereign but the Roman emperor; John xix. 12, 15. No sooner had the gathering of the Gentiles to Shiloh taken place by the spread of the gospel, than the city and temple of Jerusalem were destroyed, the constitution of their church and state dissolved, and themselves scattered, as vagabonds, among all nations, to be standing witnesses for many generations that he is come.

Ver. 16, 17. Though the Danites were the offspring of a concubine, they had as much power as the other tribes sprung of free women. They harassed the Philistines in Sampson and others; Judg. xiii—xvi. But they proved a stumbling-block to the other tribes by their idolatry; Judg. xviii. 29—31.

Ver. 22. Joseph's posterity spread themselves far and wide, dwelling on both sides of Jordan; Josh. xii. 6. xiii. 7. and xvi. 17.

Ver. 24. Joseph's graces continued firm; enabling him to withstand temptations, endure injuries, and perform duties: and his honours were secured to him. He was a shepherd, to direct and provide for the Hebrews in Egypt; and the stone, under God, upon whom their happiness and safety were founded in that country. Joshua, who brought them into Canaan, sprang of him.

shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb:

26 The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors, unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

27 ¶ Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their fathers spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

29 ¶ And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite, 30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite, for a possession of a burying-place.

31 There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.*

32 The purchase of the field, and of the cave that is therein, was from the children of Heth.

33 And, when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people.

CHAP. L.

Here (1) After embalming Jacob's corpse, and mourning seventy days, Joseph, with Pharaoh's permission, carries it in state to Canaan, where, after seven days more of lamentation, it is interred at Machpelah; 1—13. (2) Having returned to Egypt, Joseph's brethren, pretending their father's command, supplicate forgiveness of the injury which they had done him; which he, in the most affectionate manner assures them of; 14—21. (3) After a life of 110 years, 93 of them in Egypt, Joseph, having encouraged his brethren's hopes of a return to Canaan, and bound them with an oath to carry his bones with them, dies; 22—26. Thus the book, which began with the originals of light and life, through sin ends with darkness and death.

AND Joseph fell upon his father's face, and wept upon him, and kissed him.

2 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.

3 And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed: and the Egyptians mourned for him threescore and ten days.

4 ¶ And, when the days of his mourning were past, Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray, you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

5 My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave which I have digged for me, in the land of Canaan thou shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt.

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

10 And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father seven days.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians; wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim, which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

13 For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with a field for a possession of a burying-place of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

vice and suffering, he purchased his mediatorial heirship of all things. What inestimable blessings he obtained for men, by offering himself to God in the likeness of sinful flesh! In this his work of love how exposed to trouble from Jewish brethren, from Satan, the father of his bride, and from JEHOVAH, his offended Father above! How distressful his earthly exile! Hard was his service, numerous his sorrows, unsettled his lot, and remarkable his plainness and integrity. What love he bears to his mother and spouse the church! Faithful was he in his work, prevalent is he in his intercession, and glorious and extensive is his reward; for in the multitude of his redeemed he shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied. Having finished his work, and blessed his disciples, he retired to his rest in the heavenly Canaan—the midst of the throne of God. And innumerable multitudes of spiritual seed spring from his twelve apostles, those dignified patriarchs in the gospel-church.

CHAP. L. Ver. 2. It has been customary with many nations to embalm the dead bodies of persons of rank, taking out the bowels, and so seasoning the body with salt and spices, &c. as to preserve it long from putrefaction. In Egypt they carried this art to such a degree, that bodies embalmed remained uncorrupted for thousands of years; which are now sometimes sold in Europe under the name of mummies.

Ver. 3. It was the custom of the Egyptians to mourn seventy days for their dead, and of the Hebrews to mourn seven; 1 Sam. xxxi. 13; and just so long the joy of the latter lasted at their solemn weddings; chap. xxix. 27. Judg. xiv. 17.

Ver. 10. Beyond Jordan, in the books of Moses, denotes the west side of Jordan, as he delivered his writings on the east of it. In other parts of scripture, the phrase denotes the east of Jordan, as the writers lived on the west of it. Some, however, think that the Hebrew word signifies either beyond or on this side.

Ver. 25. God blessed his posterity with plenteous rains and dews, with fountains of water, and with multitudes of children, richly supplied with every enjoyment.

Ver. 26. Jacob's blessings excelled those of Abraham and Isaac; (1) In their extent; none of his children being excluded, as Ishmael and Esau had been. (2) In their distinct clearness: the land of Canaan, which had been formerly bequeathed in general, was now distributed to Joseph and his brethren. (3) In the apparent nearness of fulfilment; his posterity now increasing fast. (4) Joseph was separated from his brethren, when he was sold into Egypt, and afterwards by his distinguished honours there.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIX.—How important is the proper work of a surviving parent! for dying parents solemnly to pray for, to warn and to direct, their surviving children, is useful and becoming. The sins of parents often entail disgrace and misery upon their posterity: and the blessing of God fixes most remarkably where, for a time, there is the least appearance of it. But the lots of mankind, even in the same family, are greatly diversified. Let me therefore, first of all, and above all, make choice of Jesus, the once promised SHILOH, and now glorified Lord and Christ, and of his salvation, and then be content with such things as I have. Amidst all my work on earth, let me seek and wait for the salvation of God, that when I have finished my course I may be gathered to Jesus and his people above!—But is not the now-departed patriarch a glass to shew me my Redeemer? Is not he justly named Jacob and Israel? How long expected, earnestly desired, and supernatural was his birth! Divinely was he chosen to be the Father of the saved nations of elect men, the peculiar people of God. He took the first Adam by the heel, fulfilling the covenant which he had broken: he supplanted and overthrew Satan and his works in the world: and, by his bloody ser-

15 ¶ And, when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, they said, 'Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying, 17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, 'Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

18 And his brethren also went and fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

19 And Joseph said unto them, 'Fear not: for am I in the place of God?

20 But, as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

Ver. 17. Joseph wept, pitying their perplexity, and grieved at their jealousy of his good-will.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—With tender affection ought children and others to take their last farewell of dying friends; and with due care should they be decently interred. Yea, in every case it is kind and dutiful, by partaking, to alleviate, the sorrows of the afflicted. It is proper that servants have their masters permission to attend work of their own, be it ever so necessary; nor should that permission be withheld upon a reasonable request. What a loss to a country, what an alarming call to preparation for eternity, is the death of one of God's chief favourites! But it is comely to have an amicable correspondence settled between friends on the occasion of the death of their common relations. And it is altogether 21 Now therefore fear ye not: I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation: the children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, were brought up upon Joseph's knees.

24 And Joseph said unto his brethren, 'I die: and God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

25 And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 ¶ So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

ther unlike a Christian to make the death of friends, especially parents, a mean of commencing strife and debate, on account of some carnal bequeathments. Difficult is the work of quieting a guilty conscience, if thoroughly awakened! But it were hard-hearted indeed to refuse forgiveness of injuries, especially when requested by such as are at once our brethren, and the servants of the God of our fathers. And when penitential confessions of injury done meet with a ready forgiveness from the receiver, it is highly ornamental and becoming; at the same time it is necessary for offenders principally to deal with God himself, through the blood of his Son. But to finish a religious life in the vigorous exercises of faith on God's promises, and in high friendship with his people, must be the summit of the true Christian's desire. Meanwhile, amidst the death of useful relations, that our God cannot die, cannot leave us, and can and will deliver us out of all our distresses, is a source of unfailing comfort and abiding consolation.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

EXODUS.

Contains a history of one hundred and forty-five years, and therein exhibits the fulfilment of God's promises to the patriarchs, in the multiplication of their seed, and their deliverance from bondage in Egypt; and represents the establishment of those laws and ordinances which God required them to observe as memorials of his favours.—We have here particularly represented the tyranny of Pharaoh king of Egypt; the cruel bondage and marvellous increase of the Israelites; the birth, education, and exile, of Moses; his and his brother Aaron's divine mission to deliver their brethren; the ten plagues inflicted on the Egyptians for refusing to let the Israelites leave their country; and their destruction in the Red Sea; the Hebrews' celebration of the passover, departure from Egypt, and safe passage through the Red Sea; God's sustenance of them by sweetened water, or water from a flinty rock, and by quails and bread from heaven; his laws relative to the passover, feast of unleavened bread, firstlings, manna, &c.; his solemn publication of his moral law from mount Sinai; his directions relative to their civil and religious conduct; his entrance into covenant with them; chap. i—xxiv.; his directions concerning the tabernacle and its furniture, and concerning the apparel and consecration of his priests; the Hebrews' idolatrous making and worshipping the golden calf; Moses' intercession for them, and God's gracious reconciliation by means of it; their voluntary contribution for, and actual making and erecting, the tabernacle and its whole furniture; chap. xxv—xl. There are, perhaps, more types of Christ in this than in any other book in the Bible.

CHAP. I.

Contains an account, (1) Of God's kindness to the Israelites in multiplying them exceedingly; 1—7! (2) Of the Egyptians' cruelty to them on that account, in oppressing them with hard labour and in appointing the midwives and others to murder their male children; 8—16, 18, 22. (3) Of God's more abundant multiplication of them, and rewarding the midwives' refusal to murder their babes; 12, 17—21.

NOW these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,
3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,
4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls; for Joseph was in Egypt already.

6 And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

Before Christ 1591. cir. 1591. 8 ¶ Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph. 9 And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more mightier than we: 10 Come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land. 11 Therefore they did set over them task-masters, to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses. 12 But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel. 13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour: 14 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service wherein they made them serve was with rigour. 15 ¶ And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, (of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah); 16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall live. 17 But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive. 18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive? 19 And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them. 20 Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty. 21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses. 22 ¶ And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 8. Perhaps this king pertained to a new family, which obtained the throne about an hundred years after the Hebrews went down to Egypt. Ver. 10. The Israelites about this time began their compliance with the Egyptian idolatry, for which God justly punished them by the hand of the Egyptians; Josh. xiv. 14. Ezek. xx. 7, 8. and xxiii. 8. Ps. cv. 25. Ver. 11. Perhaps these cities were not only intended for depositing the stores of the country, but also for protecting it from the Arabs, Philistines, and others on the north-east, or for retaining the Hebrews in their bondage. Ver. 19. Probably, by virtue of the special assistance of God, it was really so with many of the Hebrew women. Ver. 21. While God exceedingly multiplied the Hebrews, he increased the families and happiness of the midwives. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—One generation quickly passes away, and another comes. Those who wax great or numerous should therefore remember their original meanness. Remarkable is the birth of God's promise when its full time comes. In 215 years Abraham's promised seed had increased to 70 persons: in as many more they are increased to about 3,000,000. Services done to men are church. Here we have (1) The perils of his infancy, particularly his exposure in the river Nile, in an ark of bulrushes; 1—4. (2) His preservation and honourable education by Pharaoh's daughter; 5—10. (3) His taking part with his oppressed Hebrew brethren, and danger by it; 11—15. (4) His escape into Midian, and marriage with Zipporah, a daughter of a prince there; 15—22. (5) The dawn of Israel's deliverance in God's gracious notice of their distress, and their prayers for relief; 23—25. AND there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi. 2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and, when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months. 3 And, when she could no longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink. 4 And his sister stood afar off, to know what would be done to him. 5 ¶ And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side: and, when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it. 6 And, when she had opened it, she saw the child: and behold the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children. 7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? 8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. 9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it. 10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water. 11 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. 12 And he looked on this way and that way; and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. 13 ¶ And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? soon forgotten, but those done to God are had in everlasting remembrance. At the same time God's kindness often sharpens men's cruelty. And to what horrid and savage barbarity their selfish designs often push them! But it is vain for devils or men to contend with the Lord. Their best-laid attempts against his designs will but promote their accomplishment: and God's church often thrives best in the fiery furnace of troubles, continued one after another. Let me therefore always depend on God; always obey God rather than man. Never let such as are barbarous themselves make me an instrument of their cruelty; for, if I hide or help God's outcasts in the day of their distress, he is not unfaithful to forget my labour of love, and may perhaps repay me in kind. 14 And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well.

16 ¶ Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

18 And when they came to Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread.

21 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom: for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

24 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect unto them.

CHAP. III.

To render his intercourse with Moses and the children of Israel the more observable, God had not, perhaps, appeared in vision for more than two hundred years, Gen. xvi. 2—4. Here (1) God appears to Moses at Sinai, in the midst of an unconsumed burning bush, and declares himself in covenant with the Israelites; 1—6. (2) In compassion to their present distress, he appoints Moses to be their deliverer, and answers whatever objections he started against his entering on that work; 7—12. (3) He directs him what he should say to the Hebrews, and to Pharaoh king of Egypt; and certifies him of success in his work; 12—22.

NOW Moses kept the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back side of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb.

2 And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

4 And, when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

5 And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

6 Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

7 ¶ And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their task-masters; for I know their sorrows;

8 And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now, therefore, behold the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me; and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt?

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

12 And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, Ver. 14. Perhaps the contempt which the Hebrews now shewed to Moses, provoked God to defer their deliverance forty years; Acts vii. 25.

Ver. 15. Pharaoh was enraged at Moses taking part with the Hebrews, and afraid of his heading them in a rebellion.

Ver. 16. Reuel was a prince or priest of the true God among the Midianites, who dwelt along the coast of the east branch of the Red Sea: as Melchizedec was among the Canaanites; Gen. xiv. 18: but whether he was the same with Jethro, and Hobab was his son, or whether Reuel was Jethro's father, and Jethro the same as Hobab, is not very evident; compare ch. iii. 1. with xviii. 1. 27. Num. x. 29.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—While wicked men exert themselves for the ruin of God's church, he is often preparing matters for her deliverance, though frequently his great works and his greatest instruments are apparently almost stifled in their birth. When God calls to it, it is becoming with cheerfulness and confidence to venture every thing which concerns us on his providence. But strong faith in God ought always to be attended with the use of the most proper means which are in our power. It is easy for God to raise up friends to his distressed children among his principal enemies; or to find out methods for qualifying before-hand such as he intends for great work. And it is honourable for the greatest to observe and sympathize with the meanest in their adversities, and to be made the instrument of their relief: and where faith in and love to God duly prevail in the heart, no carnal consideration will deter such an one from joining himself to God's church and people. The sincerest kindness and friendship is frequently requited with abuse and contempt, and the strongest carnal affection quickly turned into murderous rage. But God regards even the affectionate design, and graciously provides a place of refuge for his persecuted friends and servants, where they may be safe and useful. No change of lot, no change of country, can make us lose the enjoyment of our God; nor deprive us of him as our reconciled God in Christ, to sympathize with us in, and bring us safely through, our most grievous afflictions.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Horeb or Sinai was called the Mount of God, as he at this time appeared on it, and soon after proclaimed his laws from it; ch. xix. xx.

VER. 2. This flame represented the awful majesty, perfect purity, and infinite power, of God. The bush burning and not consumed, denotes the church of God, and particularly the Israelites, in their state debased, exposed, persecuted, and afflicted; but preserved by the presence and power of God; John xvi. 33. Acts xiv. 22. Ps. xlv. 1—5. But perhaps it chiefly prefigured the Godhead as dwelling in the manhood of Christ; and the terrible execution of divine vengeance upon him while he was preserved by his Godhead, and his Father's residence in him; John i. 14. Col. ii. 9. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Is. i. liii. 2 Cor. v. 19, 21.

VER. 5. The pulling off his shoes marked with what holiness, humility, and reverence, we ought to approach unto God. The ground was holy, was occasionally consecrated by the special manifestation of God thereon.

VER. 6. God was the God of Abraham, &c. He was engaged to them by manifold promises, which he was now come to perform.

VER. 7. I have seen, &c. I have kindly observed, mercifully regarded, and pitied, their misery.

VER. 8. I am about to manifest my infinite power and condescension in their deliverance.—A land flowing with milk and honey is one abounding with necessary and agreeable productions.

VER. 12. In the view of this solemn fellowship with me, encourage yourself to promote this deliverance.

and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? What shall I say unto them?

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 ¶ And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

16 Go and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

17 And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

18 And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt; and ye shall say unto him, the LORD God of the Hebrews hath met with us; and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go; no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go.

21 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that when ye go ye shall not go empty:

22 But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house; jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

CHAP. IV.

Here we have (1) Moses' objections against undertaking the office of delivering Israel. The first he draws from the Hebrews' unbelief, which God answers by giving him a miraculous power to turn his rod into a serpent, and again into a rod; to render his hand leprous and then sound; and to turn the water into blood; 1—9. The second he draws from his own unfitness, particularly want of proper eloquence. This God answers by promising to qualify him, and be with him, and by giving him Aaron, his brother to be his spokesman, and by conferring a miraculous influence on his staff; 10—17. (2) Taking his farewell of Jethro, his father-in-law, Moses, with his family, sets off for Egypt to execute his commission. In his way he receives further instructions from God; his life is endangered through his neglect to circumcise his son; and, to his great satisfaction, he meets with Aaron; 18—28. (3) Being come into Egypt, they declare their commission to the Hebrew elders, and, by the signs appointed, confirm it before the people, to their great satisfaction; 29—31.

AND Moses answered and said, But behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice; for they will say, the LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? and he said, A rod.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground, And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent: and Moses fled from before it.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand.

5 That they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thy hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom; and, when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous as snow.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again, and plucked it out of his bosom; and, behold, it was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and the water which thou takest out of the river shall become blood upon the dry land.

10 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, O my LORD, I am not eloquent, neither theretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

11 And the LORD said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth; or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? Have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and I will be his new-covenant relations to us. Let me admire his mercy and wisdom in appearing for the salvation of his people when they have given over looking for him: and let me firmly hope that, whatever the unworthiness of the object, the weakness of the instrument, or the wickedness or power of the opposer, the Lord will exactly fulfil the promises of his grace. O may I have this great I AM to do all for me, give all to me, and be ALL IN ALL unto me! May I in every thing study to have his call cleared up and certified to me! May I receive my directions from him, what I shall say or do! May I labour after faithfulness in my work; and then, leaving it to the Lord, he will succeed my endeavours, graciously reward me on their account; and the wrongs done to me in this world will be all rectified at last.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3, 4. This change of his rod signified that his ministry and miracles would be destructive as serpents to the Egyptians, but helpful and directive to the Hebrews. In like manner, his laws are to unbelievers a killing letter, a ministration of death; 2 Cor. ii. 15, 16. and iii. 6; but to believers a means of life; Gal. iii. 24.

Ver. 6, 7. This signified that God, with the utmost ease and dispatch, can change the form of our lot; and that it was by the power of God, not his own, that he wrought his miracles.

Ver. 9. This signified that, if the Hebrews should persist in their unbelief, God would bring upon them still more fearful calamities.

13 And he said, O my Lord, "send I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send.

14 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also behold he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee he will be glad in his heart.

15 And thou shalt speak unto him, and put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God:

17 And thou shalt take this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

18 ¶ And Moses went, and returned to Jethro his father-in-law, and said unto him, "Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren who are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, "Go in peace.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, "Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life.

20 And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt. And Moses took the rod of God in his hand.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh which I have put in thine hand: but I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, "Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, even my first-born.

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold I will slay thy son, even thy first-born.

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD met him, and sought to kill him.

25 Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it at his feet, and said, "Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mount of God, and kissed him.

28 And Moses told Aaron all the words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went, and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel:

30 And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

31 And the people believed: and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped.

CHAP. V.

Here (1) In the name of God, Moses and Aaron demand leave of Pharaoh for the Hebrews to hold a solemn feast in the Arabian desert. He answers with a defiance of their God, and a check to themselves; 1—4. (2) To put thoughts of devotion entirely out of the Israelites' mind, Pharaoh appoints their slavish tasks to be increased, requiring them to make brick without straw; 5—9. (3) This edict being executed with cruelty, the Hebrew overseers complain to Pharaoh: the Hebrews rail at Moses and Aaron, and Moses complains to God; 10—23.

AND afterward Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, let my people go, that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pharaoh said, "Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go.

3 And they said, "The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, "Wherefore do ye Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 ¶ And Pharaoh commanded the same day the task-masters of the people, their officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

Ver. 13. Send the Messiah himself, or some one duly qualified to deliver them
Ver. 16. As thy spokesman, he shall deliver thy message to Pharaoh and the Hebrews, while thou, in the name of God, shall direct and enjoin him what to say.

Ver. 21. Wonders were put in Moses' hand, in his having power granted him of God to effect them by means of his rod or staff.—As hardness of heart is a sin, Pharaoh hardened his own heart, encouraging himself in his opposition to the command of God; but as it is a punishment of sin, God hardens men by withholding the outward means of softening their heart; Ps. cxlvii. 20. Mat. xi. 21, 23; or the outward grace, which would effectually soften it; Gen. vi. 3; or by giving them up to their own lusts, and to the power of Satan and the world: by the agency of whom they become more and more blinded, stupified, and encouraged in their rebellion against God; 2 Thes. ii. 10, 11. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Learn, my soul, never to be discouraged from present duty by former disappointments. God's promise is sufficient to balance all opposition. Let me accept of miracles recorded in God's word as the most convincing external proofs of a divine mission; and let me admire the kindness of God in so abundantly confirming the intimations of his will to mankind. Never should I excuse myself from the work to which God calls me, from any wickedness about others, or weakness in myself. God can make mountains his way, and qualify me as is necessary. Let me cheerfully connect the exercise of the gifts or graces which God hath given me in whatever order of precedence or subordination he pleaseth, employing them in the service he commands. But let no intended service of God render me undutiful to my relations: and, on the contrary, never let me fear men when I have a clear call from God to my work, and a promise of his presence to be with me in it.—Meanwhile, let no distance from the public ordinances of God, and the fellowship of saints, cool my zeal for his worship. Never let fond indulgence of my earthly relations make me to neglect any part of God's institutions, or of my religious duty towards them: If I do so, God will make me to smart for it in his time. Nay, it is better to part with relations for a time than to have them an incumbrance to us in the service of God. Whatever knowledge, gifts, or grace, God bestows upon me, it becomes me to improve them for the benefit of others, particularly of my fellow-labourers in the Lord; that with one mind, and one mouth, we may glorify God. But let my hopes never be too sanguine on the first promising appearances; for if grace do not really touch the heart, miracles themselves can produce but a temporary faith, a transient flash of religious affection.

9 *Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein: and let them not regard vain words.

10 ¶ And the task-masters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get ye straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt, to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the task-masters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's task-masters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now and work; for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our savour to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hands to slay us.

22 ¶ And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, LORD, wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

23 For since I came to Pharaoh, to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Let me here remark, that however poor and despicable the people of God may be on earth, he will acknowledge them, and in his own time plead their cause. The most presumptuous rebellion against God's will is founded in ignorance of him: and, while persecutors obstinately cleave to their wickedness, God's people ought to be peculiarly careful of offending him. It is no new thing for carnal men to look on religious worship as useless or hurtful, and to improve God's demands upon his people as a spur to their own cruelty: and cruel princes never want cruel agents to promote their barbarous purposes. In evil times God's ministers may expect a double share of abuse at all hands; and be blamed as the causes of distress, when they are but the innocent, the dutiful, occasions of it. But what a mercy is it that they have a God to go to with their complaints! Surely there is need to believe in hope against hope, since the heaviest trials may happen when we expect, and are even at the day-break of, remarkable deliverances! Meanwhile, let me think of the bondage of heathenish and anti-christian superstition, idolatry, oppression, and persecution, from which God hath delivered, and will deliver, his gospel-church. But how much more oppressive is the bondage of our natural and unregenerate state!—the bondage to a broken law, which demands the perfect performance of every duty, and yet denies all strength for that effect!—the bondage to divers lusts, which lade men with guilt, drown the promise-performing God; that he had established his covenant with them in the persons of their progenitors; and that he regarded their affliction; 1—5. (2) He chargeth Moses to assure his brethren that God would deliver them from Egypt, render them his peculiar people, and settle them in Canaan; but through anguish they regard it not; 6—9. (3) Moses still excusing himself from his office, God gives him and Aaron a peremptory charge to require Pharaoh again to let the Hebrews go; 10—13, 26—30. (4) To introduce the genealogy of Moses and Aaron, that of the Reubenites, Simeonites, and Levites, is inserted; 14—25.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand shall he drive them out of his land.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

4 And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am the LORD, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments:

7 And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, who bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

8 And I will bring you in unto the land concerning the which I did swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, and I will give it you for an heritage: I am the LORD.

9 And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: but they hearkened not unto Moses for anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Go in, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

12 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who am of uncircumcised lips?

CHAP. VII.

Here (1) Moses and Aaron being further directed and encouraged of God, proceed to execute their commission without more disputing; 1—7. (2) By God's direction, Moses proves a divine authority for his demand of Israel's dismissal, by the miraculous turning of Aaron's rod into a serpent; but the magicians imitating the same, Pharaoh hardens himself against the conviction; 8—13. (3) After fair warning, he chastises Pharaoh and his Egyptians, by turning their water into blood for seven days: but the magicians imitating this also, Pharaoh hardens himself against the stroke, while his subjects, by digging new wells, attempt to avoid it; 14—25.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee a god to Pharaoh; and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet.

2 Thou shalt speak all that I command thee: and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

3 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments.

5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

11 Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses,

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Moses was a God to Pharaoh: he dealt with him in the name and authority of God, and punished his disobedience with plagues, which none but God could inflict.

Ver. 6. They manifested the noblest courage in speaking to, or dealing with, proud Pharaoh, and the most exact fidelity in the execution of all God's commands.

Ver. 12, 22. Whether the magicians imposed upon the sight of the spectators, by artfully conveying away the rods, and putting serpents in their places; or whether Satan actuated the rods, and made them to appear as serpents; or whether, for the hardening of Pharaoh, God himself effected this change, is hard to determine. It was more easy to impose upon spectators, in turning the water into blood, or in bringing up frogs. But it is manifest that all which the magicians did increased the plagues, but could not remove them; and that the swallowing up of their rods by Aaron's, and their inability to produce lice, proved that Moses' miracles were effected by a power infinitely superior to what they had in command.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—In our greatest extremity, God often interposes for our relief, and the hardest work is easily effected when he puts his hand to it. If his mighty arm of mercy or judgment be stretched out, when he begins he will make an end. Certain is that deliverance for which the character, the covenant, the pity, the purpose and the power, of God, are all engaged; and yet the objects thereof, through anguish of spirit, or through his delay of performance, put his strong consolations from them. The frowardness of gospel-hearers makes ministers to despair of success with others, and to repeat the excuses which God hath already answered, till he charge them on their peril to obey his appointments. O the perverseness of the human heart, and its enmity against God! Before he calls, what numbers run unsent! When he calls to his service, what averseness to comply!—Whatever my pedigree be, whether honourable or ignominious, let me reckon it my chief honour to be God's favourite, and to be made useful in doing good to souls.—Let me, without gainsaying, obey his voice, and provoke him not; and though my work be difficult or dangerous, as my days are, so shall my strength be.

Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water, and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, 'The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to blood.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians shall lothe to drink of the water of the river.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, 'Takethy rod, and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in the vessels of stone.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river: and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 And the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned, and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

CHAP. VIII.

Here, (1) The second plague, viz. of frogs, is threatened and inflicted by God, and is imitated by the magicians: is removed on Pharaoh's humble request; nevertheless he continues hardened; 1—15. (2) The third plague, viz. of lice, is inflicted; cannot be imitated by the magicians; nevertheless, Pharaoh still hardens himself against God; 16—19. (3) The plague of flies is denounced against the whole land of Egypt, except where the Israelites dwelt; this forces Pharaoh to humble himself, and allow the Hebrews to leave the country; but, on the removal of it, he again hardens his heart, and recalls his permission; 20—32.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—How great is the condescension of God in putting some of his honour upon sinful men, and in speaking to us by them, that his dread may not make us afraid! But, amidst trials and discouragements, ministers have need to be fully satisfied that, whatever contradiction they meet with, God shall be glorified by their work, both in them that are saved, and in them that perish. Happy those who know the Lord to be God by his fulfilment of promises to them; but miserable indeed are they who know him to be God by the execution of his vengeance upon them! The contest between Almighty God and the strongest worms of mankind is greatly unequal; let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth; for, if men will not bow before the sceptre of his

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, 'Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, 'Entreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, 'Glory over me: when shall I entreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, 'To-morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word; that thou mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses cried unto the LORD, because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses: and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps; and the land stank.

15 But, when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

grace, they must break beneath the rod of his judgment! But, in mercy, God often warns before he punishes them. Sinners frequently desire to see miracles, not for their conviction, but to strengthen their unbelief. And readily is Satan permitted to harden such in their sin by his lying wonders. Through his influence men harden themselves against warnings, against judgments, and deliverances; and, whatever other shifts they try for relief, they will not so much as cry to God when he bindeth them. But the cause of God and truth shall prevail at last, and reign without contradiction; and dreadful shall be the just miseries of them who oppressed his people and contemned his admonitions?

Before Christ

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became lice in man and in beast: all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they could not: so there were lice upon man and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the ^afinger of God: and Pharaoh's heart was ^bhardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; (lo, he cometh forth to the water;) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^aLet my people go, that they may serve me:

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send ^aswarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

22 And I will ^asever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou ^amayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

23 And I will put ^aa division between my people and thy people: ||to-morrow shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so: and ^athere came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: the land was ^acorrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, ^aIt is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the ^aabomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

27 We will go three days journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as ^ahe shall command us.

28 And Pharaoh said, ^aI will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: ^bentreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will entreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh ^adeal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the LORD.

31 ^aAnd the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh ^ahardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

CHAP. IX.

Here other three plagues are inflicted upon Pharaoh and his kingdom. (1) After warning, the fifth plague, viz. of murrain, is inflicted on the cattle of the Egyptians, while those of the Hebrews are safe; but Pharaoh hardens himself; 1—7. (2) Without warning, the plague of boils is inflicted upon man and beast, particularly upon the magicians; but Pharaoh hardens his heart; 8—12. (3) After warning, and a sharp rebuke of Pharaoh's pride, the plague of thunder, hail, and rain, is inflicted: this terrifies him into a confession of his sin, and a promise to dismiss the Israelites; but no sooner is it removed, at Moses' request, than he again hardens his heart, and recalls his promise; 13—34.

THEN the LORD said unto ^aMoses, ^aGo in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 For if ^bthou refuse to let them go, and will hold them still,

3 Behold, the ^ahand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field; upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

4 And the LORD shall ^asever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set ^atime, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and ^aall the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and behold there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And ^athe heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, ^bTake to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it ^atoward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be a ^aboil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast.

11 And the magicians ^kcould not stand before Moses because of the boil; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

12 And the LORD ^ahardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—How terrible an enemy is God, who, even by frogs, flies, and lice, can subdue the most proud and potent of his human opposers:—can force them to their prayers, and to feigned compliances with his will! Great indeed is his power, who can, at his pleasure, restrain Satan and his agents; and marvellous his kindness to his people, in distinguishing them from their fellow-sinners of mankind, and hiding them from common calamities under the shadow of his wings. But, alas, how quickly unrepentant hearts return to their wickedness; and reigning lusts break through every bond, and render men impudently presumptuous and scandalously perfidious!—Let me, with Moses and Aaron, be bold and faithful in every point in the service of God; neither fearing the wrath of kings nor the opposition of devils: and let me always be ready to pray for mine enemies when I have any encouragement to it, any hopes of their change of heart, or of a blessing from the Lord upon them.

Before Christ 1491. them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up ^{early} in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon ^{thine} heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou ^{mayest} know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be ^{cut off} from the earth.

16 And in very deed for ^{this} cause have I ^{raised} thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet ^{exaltest} thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 ^{Send} therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that ^{feared} the word of the LORD, amongst the servants of Pharaoh, made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses.

21 And he that ^{regarded} not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand ^{toward} heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt; ^{upon} man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent ^{thun-}der and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt ^{since} it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast: and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

26 ^{Only} in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses, and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 ^{Entreat} the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more ^{mighty} thunders and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city I ^{will} spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunders shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that ^{thou} mayest know how that the ^{earth} is the LORD's.

30 But, as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will ^{not} yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley were smitten; for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was balled.

32 But the wheat and the rie were not smitten; for they were ^{not} grown up.

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD; and the thunders and hail ^{ceased}, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And ^{when} Pharaoh saw that the rain, and the hail, and the thunders, were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken ^{by} Moses.

CHAP. X.

Here, (1) God declares that, in all the plagues of Egypt, he intended his own glory, and the instruction of Israel; 1, 2. (2) The plague of locusts being threatened, Pharaoh's servants instigate him to let the Hebrews depart; but as he would only allow the men to go, it is inflicted. Hereupon Pharaoh confesses his sin; but when the locusts are removed at Moses' request, he again hardens his heart; 3—20. (3) After warning, the ninth plague, of a total and terrible darkness over all the land, except where the Hebrews dwelt, is inflicted, and continues for three days. Hereupon Pharaoh offers to let all the Hebrews go, providing they leave their cattle behind them; and outrageously threatens Moses for refusing his terms; 21—29.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: ^{for} I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs before him:

2 And that thou ^{mayest} tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye ^{may} know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, ^{How} long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? ^{Let} my people go, that they may serve me:

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-morrow will I bring the ^{locusts} into thy coast:

5 And they shall cover the ^{face} of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the ^{residue} of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

prosperity the means of their ruin, to the praise of the glory of his justice. Though men may sport with his judgments, the indignation of the Almighty will most certainly overtake them, and fall most heavily on those who remain under the power of a proud hell-hardened heart; which neither warnings, however express, nor judgments, however terrible, can impress. But happy are they who have God for their friend and refuge! Effectual fervent prayer to him is the most powerful antidote against trouble, and under it the surest help and consolation

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—God can execute the most numerous, diversified, and extensive, judgments upon such as hate him. He can easily make what we have idolized, whether our cattle, our bodies, or fields, the immediate objects of our punishment; and how severe is the punishment which he hath laid up in store for such as have been most instrumental in deceiving and hardening others! Satan can delude men into sin, but he cannot preserve them from suffering. And in tremendous sovereignty God fixes on the objects of his wrath, and renders their

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Let me, with holy awe, observe, that God intends the judgments which he executes as standing memorials of his supreme power and authority over all creatures, and of his victorious power over the king-

6 And they shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; "which nei- ther thy fathers nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pha- raoh.

7 ¶ And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a 'snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that Egypt is ^kdestroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God; but who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, 'We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, †Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: "look to it, for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. "And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses †stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt; and the LORD brought an °east-wind upon the land all that day, and all that night: and when it was morning, the east-wind brought the ^plocusts.

14 And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 "For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was dark- ened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh †called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, 'I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore °forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and entreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this 'death only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, and "entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty- strong west-wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the 'Red sea: there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But ^ythe LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the chil- dren of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be ^zdarkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: "but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only ^blet your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt-offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 'Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and ^d'we know not with what we must serve the LORD until we come thither.

27 ¶ But the LORD 'hardened Pha- raoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, 'Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; for in that day thou seest my face thou shalt die.

29 And Moses ^esaid, Thou hast spoken well, I will see thy face again no more.

CHAP. XI.

Here, (1) Moses, threatened by Pharaoh, ch. x. 28, boldly warns him, that the death of all the first-born of the Egyptians in one night would oblige him to dismiss the Hebrews in safety; but Pharaoh contemns his admonition; 4—10. (2) Before Moses gave this warning, or immediately after, he, by God's appoint- ment, directs the Hebrews to ask of the Egyptians jewels of gold and silver; 1—3.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let dom of Satan, in restraining the malice, and chastising the insolence, of his and his people's enemies. But there is nothing for which God more readily quarrels with men than for their pride. Whole nations are often ruined through the pride and obstinacy of their governors: and, when Satan has got sinners to the brink of ruin, he exerts all his might in pushing them down headlong. The early engage- ment of children in the service of God is exceedingly contrary to the inclinations and interests of Satan and his agents. But the proudest contemners of God's messengers will be obliged to stoop to them at last. Professions of repentance, extorted by punishment, are but hypocritical, and quickly issue in more obstinate relapses into wickedness: but such as baffle manifold convictions may expect to be given up to such hardness of heart, that nothing but the flames of hell will impress or awaken their conscience. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much; it often, for a time, diverts the just vengeance of God from his insolent enemies. The wicked need not therefore hasten the godly from among them; for, if once a full separation be made, the former will be irrecor- verably and inexpressibly miserable, and the just judgment of God will no longer tarry.

Before Christ 1491. you go he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 ¶ And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts.

6 And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel, shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee; and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in a great anger.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh. And the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAP. XII.

Contains, (1) The institution of the Hebrews' sacred year; 1, 2. (2) The institution of the passover for commemorating their deliverance; appointing the taking, killing, and roasting of the lamb; the sprinkling of the door-posts with its blood; the time and manner of eating it; pious conference thereat; and persons partaking; 3—14, 21—28, 43—50. (3) The institution of the feast of unleavened bread on the seven days following the passover; 14—20. (4) God's slaying the first-born of the Egyptians, while the Hebrews feasted themselves, forced Pharaoh and his courtiers to send away the Israelites, loaded as they were with Egyptian wealth, and in the very time which God had promised to Abraham. They march out in great order, and are attended by a mixed multitude; 29—42, 51.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, CHAP. XI. Ver. 3. Moses was very great; was much honoured, as one who could bring upon them fearful judgments, and remove them at his pleasure.

Ver. 4. I will go out; manifest my powerful and just vengeance in an eminent and extensive manner.

Ver. 7. They shall not meet with the smallest opposition or disturbance in their departure from Egypt.

Ver. 8. Moses' great anger manifested his detestation of Pharaoh's incurable obstinacy: and represented the terrible displeasure of God against him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How extensive is the indignation of God! He has still in life, one plague more to inflict, even death in sin, and damnation to attend it! Of this the guilty sinner has now warning; may the goodness of God lead him to repentance, lest his righteousness be manifested in his awful judgment. Meanwhile, by increasing his strokes of wrath, he can force men to fulfil his gracious purposes and kind promises to his people, if they refuse to do it willingly; and will make his favourites perfectly safe, even in the midst of their enemies. Nay, he will effectually redress the grievances, and repay the wages, of his people in his own time and manner, and maintain the honour of his faithful servants, in despite of whatever hell and earth can do to oppose them! But what a bitter grief to the ministers of Christ is the hardness and obstinacy of sinners against the Lord and his Christ! And when sin is the object of our indignation we may be angry and sin not.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 2. The month Abib, which nearly corresponds to our March,

2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house:

4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it, according to the number of the souls; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep or from the goats:

6 And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.

7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door-post of the houses wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roasted with fire, and unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roasted with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: it is the LORD's passover.

12 For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the LORD.

13 And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generawas the seventh of the common year among the Egyptians and others, all along, I suppose, from the creation; but was made the first of the Jewish sacred year now established by God, according to which the ceremonial festivals were to be regulated: but they continued to reckon by the ancient year in their civil matters; and even the years of jubilee and release began in the ancient manner, about September, as then the crop was entirely off the ground.

Ver. 3. The taking of the lamb four days before the time prevented their neglect, and stirred them up to the consideration of and faith in their approaching deliverance.

Ver. 4. Every family of these, so joined together, paid their respective share of the lamb's price.

Ver. 6. The lamb was killed between three o'clock in the afternoon and sun-set.

Ver. 8. The bitter herbs were endive, succory, wild lettuce, thyme, or the like.

Ver. 9. The word rendered raw signifies not thoroughly roasted. It was to be roasted all in one piece.

Ver. 10. They were to leave none of it, lest the Egyptians should abuse it, or themselves make a superstitious use of it.

Ver. 11. These circumstances imported their holding themselves in readiness to leave the country, and march off, as the Lord's free-men; but these, as well as the taking of the lamb on the tenth day of the month, seem to have been required only with respect to the first celebration.

Ver. 14. This feast was to be a joyful commemoration of their deliverance, observed every year, and during the whole period of the ceremonial dispensation until the death of Christ, thereby prefigured.

tions; ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.

15 ¶ Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, ^athat soul shall be cut off from Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be an ^aholy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you; no ^bmanner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance ^cfor ever.

18 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be ^dcut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the ^eelders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

23 For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side-posts, the LORD will ^epass over the door, and will not suffer the ^bdestroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons ^fforever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land ^gwhich the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ^hye shall keep this service.

26 ^mAnd it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean you by this service?

27 That ye shall say, It is the ⁿsacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people ^obowed the head and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and ^pdid as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And it came to pass that at midnight the LORD ^qsmote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a ^rgreat cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

31 ¶ And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get ye forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go serve the LORD, as ye have said.

32 Also ^stake your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone; and ^tbless me also.

33 And the Egyptians were ^uurgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all ^vdead men.

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ^wkneading-troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and ^xthey ^yborrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment:

36 And the LORD ^zgave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required. And they spoiled the Egyptians.

37 ¶ And ^bthe children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children.

38 And ^aa mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were ^dthrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the ^{sojourning} of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.

41 And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the ^eself-same day it came to pass, that all the host of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

42 It is ^ha night much to be observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover; there shall no stranger eat thereof.

44 But every man's servant ^kthat is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

Ver. 15—21. The feast of unleavened bread immediately succeeded the passover. The holy convocation, on the fifteenth day of the month, commemorated their departure from Egypt; and that on the twenty-first commemorated their passage through the Red sea, by which their wonderful deliverance was completed.

Ver. 27. As offered to God, and attended with the shedding and sprinkling of blood, the passover was a sacrifice; but, as received and eaten by men, it was also a sacrament.—The Israelites bowed their heads in token of their thankful acknowledgment of God's favours, and cheerful submission to his laws and ordinances.

Ver. 40. These four hundred and thirty years are to be reckoned from the call of Abraham to leave his native country; Gen. xi. 31. and xii. 1—5; during the first half of which, he and his promised seed sojourned in Canaan, and the other half they dwelt in the land of Egypt; Gen. xv. 13. and xvi.

Ver. 43, 45. No heathen, or uncircumcised person, was allowed to partake thereof.

Before Christ 1491.

45 ¹A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In ^mone house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth aught of the flesh abroad out of the house; ⁿneither shall ye break a bone thereof.

47 ^oAll the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

48 And when ^aa stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his ^amales be circumcised, and then [†]let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 One ^llaw shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.

50 Thus did all the children of Israel; ^aas the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass ^tthe self-same day, ^{that} the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their ^uarmies.

CHAP. XIII.

Here we have, (1) God's commands to Israel to devote the first-born of man and beast to his service; and to inform their children that it was in remembrance of his preserving their firstlings when he destroyed all those of the Egyptians; 1, 2, 11—16; to observe the passover and feast of unleavened bread in their seasons; and to inform their children that it was in memorial of his quick and powerful deliverance of them from their Egyptian bondage. (2) God's care of Israel in chusing their way and conducting them by a cloudy pillar; 17—22. (3) The Israelites' care of Joseph's bones in bringing them along with them; 19.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ^aSanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, ^{both} of man and of beast: it is mine.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, ^bRemember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by ^cstrength of hand the LORD brought you out from this ^{place}: there shall no ^dleavened bread be eaten.

4 ^eThis day came ye out in the month Abib.

5 And it shall be when the LORD ^fshall bring thee unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Come near, my soul, and behold what the Lord hath wrought for Israel! He had multiplied them amidst cruel bondage and murder: he had protected them amidst ruinous plagues; and now, after a solemn feast, he brings them forth with wealth, with honour, in health, in peace, in order, and in due time! Behold what things he, who sitteth on the throne, makes new! A new year; new festivals; new liberties; a new nation to himself! Behold how their enemies push them into liberty; how they enrich them; and what a mixed multitude take part with them in their journey! Behold the care with which God distinguishes his people from the rest of the world! But chiefly behold God's great work of the redemption of mankind, through the blood of his Son! O the strong hand! the stretched-out arm! the grace! the mercy, the sovereignty, the wisdom, the justice, the exact fidelity to his promise, which appears in this! How are violated commandments, enraged devils, and mighty hosts, made to let the ransomed of the Lord depart into liberty! With what initial wealth, what spoils of principalities and powers, nay, unsearchable riches and righteousness, they come forth! In what high honour, spiritual soundness, peace, and order, they are brought from Heathenism or Popery; nay, from their natural state of bondage and death in trespasses and sins; and all in the precise time of love, the day of espousals, the hour of grace, appointed of the Father! And how marvellously JEHOVAH here makes all things new! A new world is created on the earth—a virgin brings forth a child, whose name is IMMANUEL, God with us! a new testament is ratified in his blood! a new covenant is confirmed with many! a new gospel-period, a year of God's redeemed, is introduced! new festivals on the flesh and blood of his Son! new liberties!—freedom indeed, for those who are made heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ! a new church of Jews and Gentiles, purified, by his oblation, a peculiar people to himself, zealous of good works!—But what a mixed multitude of empty professors attend and plague the church in every reformation on earth! What a multitude of remaining lusts and infirmities attend the choicest saints till they get to the Canaan above!

land flowing with milk and honey, that thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 ^bSeven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day ^{shall be a} feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 And ^tthou shalt shew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that ^{which} the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for a ^ksign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes; that the LORD's law may be in thy mouth: for with a ^{strong} hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

10 ^mThou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

11 ¶ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee, 12 ⁿThat thou shalt ^{*set apart} unto the LORD all that openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males ^{shall be} the LORD's.

13 ^oAnd every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a [†]lamb; and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and ^{all} the first-born of man among thy children shalt thou redeem.

14 And it shall be when thy ^{son} asketh thee ^{sin} time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, By ^{strength} of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage:

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would ^{hardly} let us go, that the LORD slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both the first-born of man and the first-born of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the first-born of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for a ^{token} upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

In this passover-feast let me behold how Jesus, the all-excellent, the mighty, the unblemished, Son of God, who was set up from everlasting, and promised and typified four thousand years, in the fulness of time assumes our nature, partakes of flesh and blood, obeys the law, and suffers the most flaming and tremendous vengeance of God, without being crushed, broken, or ruined;—and all this that he might be our all-sufficient and everlasting covert from the wrath of God;—might be the means of destruction to sin, Satan, and death, for us;—and might, with unfeigned faith, sincere love, and bitter grief for sin, be fed upon by us, in holy fellowship, as the sweet, the heart-cheering, supporting, and strengthening food of our soul, by which we are enabled to go up from this evil world towards our everlasting inheritance in the Canaan above! And, blessed be the Lord, we, strangers and foreigners, sinners of the Gentiles, are admitted to feast on him, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God, while the Jewish children of the kingdom are cast out!

In their feast of unleavened bread may I not discern Jesus' state of debasement on earth! his week fulfilled in holiness, in sorrows, and in sufferings; on the first day of which he assumed his holy manhood, was gathered with sinners, but without sin; and on the last of which he made his life a ransom for many? May I not discern the pure but afflicted state of the gospel-church, in her apostolical and millennial periods, noted for holy convocations of men to the Lord? May I not discern the festival-week of the Christian life, spent in purity and pressures, and noted for its first day of conversion to Christ, and its last of departure, to be with him for evermore? Let me in it feed upon him as the incorrupted nourishment of my soul, carefully avoiding and detesting the leaven of malice, hypocrisy, error, or corrupt practices! Let me in it improve Jesus, as the blessed first-fruit unto God which sanctifieth all my enjoyments, the cause and token of my deliverance into the glorious liberty of the gospel!

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 2. The Lord's preservation of the Hebrews' first-born, when he destroyed those of the Egyptians, gave him a peculiar right to them.

Ver. 9, 16. Their exact observation of these feasts, and the dedication of their firstlings, together with the repeated explication of the meaning thereof to their children, would make their deliverance from Egypt as fresh and evident to them and their seed as a thing hung or written on their foreheads.

Ver. 13. Unclean firstlings were either to be redeemed, or else killed, that they might not be put to any other use than for the Lord.

Ver. 17. The Philistines, who had originated from Lower Egypt; Gen. x. 13, 14, and dwelt in the south-west corner of Canaan, were a numerous, valiant, and fierce nation, whom the Hebrews, unarmed, and quite dispirited by their long bondage, durst not have encountered.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Never forget, O my soul, the great things which God has done for his church, or for thyself, in his common or special providence! Let me carefully observe every mean of keeping them fresh on my

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, "Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt."

18 But God led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea: and the children of Israel went up ^hharnessed out of the land of Egypt:

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, "God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you."

20 ¶ And ^bthey took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.

21 And ^cthe LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night:

22 He ^dtook not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people.

CHAP. XIV.

Here, (1) While the Hebrews, by God's direction, march to the south-east, Pharaoh, as God had warned Moses, pursues them with a powerful army, to bring them back to their bondage; 1—9. (2) Shut in by the Red Sea before them, the Hebrews, overwhelmed with fear, chide with Moses for bringing them out of Egypt; but he encourages them quietly to hope for deliverance; 10—14. (3) While God, by his immediate power and his cloudy pillar, protects the rear of the Hebrew host, Moses, at his direction, divides the Red Sea by the stretching of his rod over it. Hereupon the Hebrews march through it on dry ground; but, while the Egyptians attempt to pursue them, the waters return on, and drown them; 15—29. (4) The Hebrews are at first much impressed with the miracle, believe God, and regard Moses as his agent; 30, 31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, ^asaying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that they ^aturn and encamp before ^bPi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

3 For Pharaoh will ^csay of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And I ^dwill harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; and I will be ^ehonoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; ^fthat the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and ^gthe heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him:

7 And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 ^hAnd the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out ⁱwith an high hand.

9 But the Egyptians ^kpursued after them, (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army,) and overtook them ^lencamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And, when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were ^msore afraid: and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD.

11 And ⁿthey said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? Wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?

12 ^oIs not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? for it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, ^pFear ye not; stand still, and see the salvation ^qof the LORD, which he will shew to you to day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 The LORD shall ^rfight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore ^scriest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward:

16 But ^tlift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And I, behold, I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them; and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall ^uknow that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And the ^vangel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

mind; and let me teach them diligently unto my children, that they may hear and fear the Lord for their good. What the Lord marvellously brings to me, or preserves for me, let me cheerfully surrender to his service, at his call. The life he rescues from imminent danger is doubly obliged to be devoted to his service; and they who truly love God will readily serve him with the best they have. But, if troubles and difficulties attend my path, conscious of my weakness and folly, let me trust in him who proportions his people's trials to their strength, and look up to him for direction in all my ways. In this pillar of cloud and fire I discern God's special care and protection of his people. Even, while clouds and darkness are round about him, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. Do I not behold Jesus likewise given to be an ever-attending light and leader, as well as protector and glory, to his people in this wilderness-world? Let me always follow his direction and example: so shall I, in due time, arrive safe at the promised Canaan which is above. And, though the way in which he leads me be very contrary to the will and wisdom of the flesh, let me rest assured that it is a right one to the fulfilment of all his glorious promises of grace and glory.

thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.

14 'The people shall hear, and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men of Moab trembling shall take hold upon them; all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 Fear and dread shall fall upon them; by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still as a stone; till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over, which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in; in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

19 For the horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

21 And Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to Marah they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called Marah.

24 And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

25 And he cried unto the LORD; and the LORD shewed him a tree, which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet: there he made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them,

26 And said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

27 ¶ "And they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

CHAP. XVI.

Contains an account of God's victualling the camp of Israel. Here is, (1) Their outrageous murmuring for want of bread; 1—3.
(2) While Moses sharply reproves their murmurs, God graciously promises them flesh and bread from heaven; 4—12. (3) Quails and manna are sent for their provision; 13—15. (4) Laws and orders are given concerning the manna; viz. that they should gather and eat it daily; that they should gather a double portion on the sixth day, but expect none upon the seventh; and that they should preserve a potful of it for a memorial; 16—36.

AND they took their journey from Elim; and all the congregation of the children of Israel came into the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.

2 And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness:

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law or no.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.

6 And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt:

7 And in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the

† It is chiefly against God that ye murmur; we are but his ministers, who act by his direction.

Ver. 14—16. All the nations about heard of God's delivering his people, and destroying the Egyptians: and then, but especially afterwards, when the Israelites approached their territories, they were filled with terror and dread.

Ver. 20, 21. Perhaps Miriam is here called the sister of Aaron, rather than of Moses, because she lived mostly with Aaron.—She and her companions seem to have repeated the whole song after Moses and his brethren.

Ver. 24. To murmur against God is to conceive unworthy and hard thoughts of his nature, word, or work; or to utter them with our tongue.

Ver. 25. God there proved their faith and obedience, and published his statutes, promising them future favours on condition of their obedience.

Ver. 26. God heals, and helps, in every case respecting either soul or body, and delivers from all evils, felt or feared, whether spiritual, temporal, or eternal.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Admire, my soul, the displayed perfections, the transacted works, the fulfilled promises, the endearing relations, of the Most High! How his feeble followers are encouraged and helped! How his proud opposers fall under him! Awake, awake, and utter this song of Moses and of the Lamb! Since the Lord hath brought me through fire and water to a goodly heritage, since he hath brought me out of a fearful pit, and out of the miry clay, let me believe his mighty works, and sing his praise. Let there be a new song in my heart, and in my mouth, even praises to our God: Let my meditation of him be sweet: and let my soul, which he hath redeemed, rejoice in God, my only Lord. With sweet astonishment, with heart-burning affection, and with enrapturing joy, let me sing, what JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, have done, and will do, for me;—what they have given, and will give, to MEN—to ME;—what they are, and for ever will be, to men—to ME! And while I go up, through this wilderness-world, to my Canaan above, let me kindly accept the mixture of crosses and comforts which God allots to me. If parching thirst, if bitter gall, succeed my noted deliverances, let me never once doubt of his love; never once fear that all things are against me. If I am dear to God, it is proper that he make me smart for my sin. If he love me, let him not spare his rod of correction, which drives folly from my heart. If Jesus' presence sweeten my bitter draughts, it is enough. The cup, which my Father giveth me, shall I not drink it? If JEHOVAH be my God, that healeth me, let him make me wounds all over, that I may feel his word, his blood, his Spirit, applied, and his hands binding up and making me whole. If I get Elim refreshments here, let me adore his sovereign kindness. But let my last march be to the river of life, clear as chrystal; to the living fountains of waters, where God himself shall wipe all tears from mine eyes. Meanwhile, let me not be unaffected with the great deliverances which God hath wrought, and shall work, for his gospel-church; with his destruction of her heathenish and antichristian enemies; while exercised herself with a vicissitude of embarrassing troubles and joyful deliverances.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 4. The manna fell from heaven in the manner of rain or dew; and by it God proved the Israelites; tried whether miraculous favours would induce them to an exact observation of his laws.

Ver. 5. It was the sixth day of the week on which the double portion of manna was gathered; but whether it was the sixth after the Hebrews murmured, and sixth of the fall of the manna, is not certain.

THE ISRAELITES GATHERING MANNA.

Exodus. Ch. 16. v. 25.

London Feb Aug. 24-25, by Richard Evans White row Springfield.

LORD : and what are we, that ye murmur against us ?

8 And Moses said, This shall be when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full ; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him : and what are we ? your murmurings are not "against us, but against the LORD.

9 And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, Come near "before the LORD ; for he hath "heard your murmurings.

10 And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness ; and, behold, the glory of the LORD "appeared in the cloud.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 "I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel : speak unto them, saying, "At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread ; and "ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, that at even "the quails came up, and covered the camp : and in the morning the "dew lay round about the host.

14 And when "the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, "It is manna : for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, "This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

16 ¶ This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating ; an "omer "for every man, according to the number of your persons ; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, "he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack : they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Moses said, Let no man "leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses ; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it "bred worms and stank : and Moses was wroth with them.

21 And they gathered it "every morning, every man according to his eating : and when the sun waxed hot it melted.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered "twice as much bread, two omers for one man : and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To-morrow is the "rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD : "bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe ; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

24 And they "laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade : and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Moses said, "Eat that to-day ; for to-day is a sabbath unto the LORD : to-day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 Six days ye shall gather it ; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, "in it there shall be none.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, that there "went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, "How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws ?

29 See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days : "abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

30 So the people "rested on the seventh day.

31 And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna : and it was "like coriander-seed, white ; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD "commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations ; that they may see the bread where-with I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

33 And Moses said unto Aaron, "Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the "Testimony, to be kept.

35 And the children of Israel "did eat manna forty years, until they came to a land inhabited ; they did eat manna until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan.

36 Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

Ver. 10. While the cloud marched before them into the wilderness an extraordinary brightness appeared in it.

Ver. 16. Every man had about five English pints of it allotted him for his daily provision.

Ver. 18. The provision for a family was put into a common stock, and the master measured out to each his share.

Ver. 19. To prevent a superstitious keeping of it, and to cause them always to trust in God for more, none of it was to be kept over the night.

Ver. 22. The rulers told Moses ; observant of God's kindness, and that they might receive directions how to dispose of this double portion.

Ver. 23. They might not dress manna on the sabbath, as it required a great deal of labour to grind and bake it ; Numb. xi. 8.

Ver. 29. On the sabbath no one was allowed to travel, except to the public worship of God, or about works of necessity and mercy.

Ver. 34. It was not till about ten months after that this potful of manna was laid up before the tables of the law, on the foreside of the ark.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Our comfortable glances of prosperity on earth soon change and pass away ; while fresh difficulties produce fresh murmurings ; and discontent vitiates what it has, and magnifies what it loseth or desires. But how criminal to distrust God's goodness and power, to despair of mercy and life, whenever we are brought into straits ! and to murmur desperately, as if God hath wrought wonders for our relief ! Observe, all abuse of his servant's strikes against God himself ; and noted displays of his glory shall effectually check the murmurs of presumptuous sinners, and vindicate the faithful messengers of Christ ! But for the children of God to disquiet their minds about temporal necessities, when their heavenly Father can with a word supply them with every thing useful, is both foolish and highly offensive. Bread shall be given them,

CHAP. XVII.

Contains the history of God's watering the camp of Israel, and his warring in their behalf. (1) Distressed with the murmurings of the people for want of water, Moses cries to God; who directs him to bring water out of a flinty rock, by smiting it with his rod; 1—7. (2) Attacked by the Amalekites in their march, the Israelites, commanded by Joshua, encouraged by the elevation of Moses' rod as their banner, and assisted by his prayers, defeat them; and record their victory, with the Lord's purpose of plaguing the Amalekites, till they should be utterly destroyed; 8—16.

AND all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the wilderness of Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

2 Wherefore the people did chide with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?

4 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

6 Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

7 And he called the name of the place *Massah, and †Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us or not?

8 ¶ Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.

and their water shall be sure. So transcendent is his kindness, that he bestows on wicked murmurers, not only necessities, but even delicacies. Amidst prudent care and diligent activity to make provision for myself, it becomes me to beware of covetousness or sinful distrust; to live always contented with bare necessities for the time, and depend upon God for what may be needful hereafter. Never let any earthly gain prevent my sanctification of the sabbath. If, from regard to its honour, I deny myself, the Lord of it will assuredly make up my loss, and be my exceeding great reward. But if the Lord hath shewed me his great kindness, let me treasure it up in my heart for grateful remembrance through all my life.—In this manna I contemplate Jesus the true bread—Jesus the bread of life. He is the free gift of God to murmuring and rebellious sinners, starving to eternal death. In the camp of the visible church he comes down from heaven, in the dewy ordinances and offers of the gospel, early, daily, and plentifully. Small, and contemned by many, and unknown to most, he is the divinely prepared, the mysterious, the pure, the sweet, the wholesome, the all-sufficient, and all-suitable nourishment of our souls; which God liberally and constantly distributes to us, and which we ought early, earnestly, and daily, to receive, each for ourselves; and the more so as we approach towards the eternal state, in which we shall have no further offers of his grace. And, as he was bruised in the mortar and mill of his Father's indignation, and baken in the oven of his wrath, let me receive him into a wounded conscience and a broken heart, as the grand restorative and nourisher to eternal life.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 5. The elders of the people were to witness Moses' bringing forth water from the rock, and to report it to the people.

Ver. 6. God stood above the rock in the pillar of cloud, the token of his presence, to shew that it was his powerful influence, not Moses' stroke, that brought forth the water.—This rock, it is reported, remains visible till this day, as a kind of large stone, with twelve or twenty-four openings, in the valley of Rephidim.

Ver. 8. Whether these Amalekites were in league with the Egyptians, or were Canaanites, or Edomites; or whether they attacked them merely for the sake of the riches they had brought out of Egypt; we know not.

Ver. 9. Moses stood on the top of the hill, in view of the Israelites, with his wonder-working rod lifted up as their banner, and as a token of the Lord's presence with and assistance of them.

Ver. 11. This different success, answerable to Moses' elevation of his hands and 9 And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill, with the rod of God in mine hand.

10 So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur, went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

12 But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon: and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

13 And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.

15 And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it *JEHOVAH-nissi:

16 For he said, †Because the ‡LORD hath sworn, that the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

CHAP. XVIII.

Contains the history of the visit which Jethro paid to Moses; but, whether before or after the giving of the law at Sinai, I cannot certainly determine. (1) Jethro brings to Moses his wife and two sons from the land of Midian; 1—6. (2) Upon Moses' welcoming of them, and rehearsal of what the Lord had done for Israel, Jethro rejoices, offers sacrifices of thanksgiving; and he and Moses, Aaron, and the elders of Israel feast upon them; 7, 12. (3) Observing the burden which Moses took upon himself, in judging the people, Jethro, with submission to the divine direction, advises him to appoint subordinate judges for the easier causes, and to reserve only the judgment of the more difficult to himself; 13, 23. (4) Moses, directed of God, complies with this advice; 24—27.

WHEN Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, heard of all that God hath done for Moses, and for rod, marked the power and efficacy of prayer: and that they could do nothing but as God encouraged and strengthened them.

Ver. 12. This marked the human weakness of Moses; and that Christ, by his presence and Spirit, must help our infirmities in prayer.

Ver. 14. Joshua was to hear it, as he and his successors, who commanded the armies of Israel, were to watch every opportunity of destroying the Amalekites.

Ver. 15. The design of this altar was to commemorate the victory divinely bestowed, and to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving thereupon.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—The straits of the people of God frequently recur upon them; and how commonly do they afford occasion for repeated unbelief, and a sinful rage of spirit, under them, while the greatest kindnesses are forgotten, or ill-requited. Humble prayer is most effectual to compose the spirit under such injurious treatment. Did we then but recollect the circumstances of our sins, it would tend rather to our humiliation; and, did we but wait with humble patience, we should soon discover that God can open the most abundant supplies in our greatest distresses. How heartily wicked men hate the saints, and take all opportunities to distress them! But terrible is the vengeance that awaits them on account of it. The prayers of the saints, and the sword of JEHOVAH are effectual to accomplish their ruin. Let me then never murmur against, never distrust, my God of infinite power and grace! Let me, in every case, cry to him who can turn flinty rocks into water-springs! If I receive mercies amidst many provocations, I may expect new trials. But let me depend upon God, in all my warfare, and praise him for all my victories.—But in this smitten rock I behold Jesus, the firm, the unchangeable God, and Mediator of his people, who, from our deserts of hell and damnation, appeared in our nature!—Jesus, the stone smitten by Moses' fiery law, before the rulers and people of Israel, that stream of atoning blood and sanctifying virtue might issue forth, and run in this wilderness of our world, for the purification and refreshment of sinful men.—In this warfare I behold Jesus, MY ALL IN ALL, as the Captain of salvation, directing the Lord's host.—Jesus, the rod, the branch, lifted up as an ensign to the Gentiles!—Jesus, as my unwearied intercessor at the right hand of the Majesty on high!—Jesus, through whom I am more than a conqueror; and who hath sworn that he will have war with the enemies of his people, from generation to generation, till they be utterly destroyed!

Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt;

2 Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took 'Zipporah Moses' wife, after he had sent her back,

3 And her two sons; of which the name of the one was 'Gershom; for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land:

4 And the name of the other was 'Eliezer; for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh:

5 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the mount of God:

6 And *he said unto Moses, I thy father-in-law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

7 ¶ And Moses went out to meet his father-in-law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their ^kwelfare; and they came into the tent.

8 And Moses told his father-in-law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them.

9 ¶ And Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, 'Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods; for in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them.

12 And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took a burnt-offering and sacrifices for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to eat bread with Moses' father-in-law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses' father-in-law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou dost to the people? Why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Moses said unto his father-in-law, Because the people come unto me to inquire of God:

16 When they have a matter they come unto me, and I judge between one and another, and I do make them know the statutes of God and his laws.

17 And Moses' father-in-law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

18 'Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 Hearken now unto my voice; I will give thee counsel, and God shall be with thee: be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God:

20 And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work that they must do.

21 Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

22 And let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people shall also go to their place *in peace.

24 So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law, and did all that he had said.

25 And Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people; rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

26 And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶ And Moses let his father-in-law depart; and he went his way into his own land.

should inquire after, and rejoice in, one another's welfare. It is necessary that, if married persons part for a time, they should meet again with the first convenience, that they may share in one another's honours and comforts, as well as in their troubles: and that children should be, as much as possible, under the immediate inspection of religious parents. When great honours from God are attended with due humility towards men; and when such as have seen much of the Lord's goodness readily communicate their experiences to their friends, especially when meeting together, they chiefly converse concerning the things of God, and sanctify their mutual friendship with joint prayer and praise: it is both pleasing and instructive. Those in office should always execute the same with fidelity and condescension, even to such as have deserved their disregard; and prefer public business to private civilities. But how profitable is wisdom to direct in every thing, that we may not overdo even in well-doing! Good counsel is helpful even to the wisest, and proper assistance to the ablest, in office; and it will be readily embraced by such as are wise and prudent. With great care and conscience should persons be chosen to offices of government either in church or state, that none may be admitted but such as are able men, men of truth, fearing God and hating covetousness. And dreadful is their guilt who help or hold in ignorant and profane persons, to the dishonour of God and the hurt of his people.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 6, 7. Jethro sent a messenger to inform Moses of his coming; and Moses hereupon went to meet him.

Ver. 11. Even in the Egyptians' haughty and insolent detaining of his people Israel, imagining it impossible for their God to deliver them, he shewed himself infinitely their superior in wisdom and might.

Ver. 12. They feasted before God, near to the symbol of his presence in the cloud, or on the mount, and in holy awe of him, and as in his sight.

Ver. 17, 18. What thou dost is not convenient either for thyself or the people. This tedious attendance will destroy thine own health and theirs.

Ver. 19. I make no doubt but God will bless thee in following the course to which I advise.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt deliver and explain to them God's Laws, which they may apply to their particular cases and occasions.

Ver. 21. Men of understanding, courage, piety, candour, faithfulness, and honesty, and who will discourage every wicked thing.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—It is highly becoming that professed saints should mark every turn of providence that befalls them; and, in a dependence on God as their help, reckon themselves strangers on earth: and that they

Ver. 16. The thunders, lightnings, fire, and smoke, were intended to awaken their attention in hearing the law, to promote their careful observance of it, and to manifest how dangerous it was to be under it as a covenant.—The thick cloud signified the invisible, awful, and incomprehensible, nature of God, and the obscurity of the legal dispensation of the covenant of grace.

Ver. 22. Some think these priests were the first-born; but there is no evidence that birthright invested with any such office: they were persons, probably the most excellent, chosen by Moses for offering sacrifices, till God should assign that work to Aaron and his sons.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Infinitely gracious and undeserved are the favours of God to men. But peculiarly kind his care of his people, and great the honour he bestows upon them. His condescension is most astonishing in admitting them into covenant with himself; his requirements most reasonable; and surely his distinguishing kindness ought to promote our cheerful obedience. But how apt are men to be hasty in promising obedience, and backward in performing it! Serious preparation for solemn intercourse with God is necessary and becoming; and a careful respect to every disposition and deportment of body, soul, and spirit. Never, O my soul, presumptuously intrude into those secrets over which God hath cast a veil! Never hazard thy life, by pushing over the bounds which he hath set for thy good. Let me have nothing to do with his fiery law, but as it is fulfilled by Christ as a covenant, and issued forth by him as a rule. Let me always approach unto his presence with reverence and godly fear: and never let vain curiosity, but humble faith and holy love, attend me in all my concerns with him.

CHAP. XX.

Contains, (1) God's public sermon to all the Israelites; including a solemn and gracious grant of himself to be their God, and an extensive law of ten commandments, directing and obliging them to accept this grant, and regularly to improve it in the performance of every duty towards God and man; 1—17. (2) The beginning of his private discourse to Moses, whom the terrified Israelites had requested to be as an inter-messenger or mediator between God and them. In it idols were discharged: the erection of altars of earth and stone is regulated, together with a gracious promise of God's special presence in his own ordinances; 18—26

AND God ^aspake all these words, saying,

2 ^bI am the LORD thy God, who have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

3 ¶ ^cThou shalt have no other gods before me.

4 ^dThou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am ^ea jealous God, ^fvisiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

6 And ^gshewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

7 ^hThou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

8 ⁱRemember the sabbath-day, to keep it holy.

9 Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work;

10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

11 For ^kin six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath-day, and hallowed it.

12 ¶ ^lHonour thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13 ^mThou shalt not kill

14 ⁿThou shalt not commit adultery.

15 ^oThou shalt not steal.

16 ^pThou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

17 ^qThou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

18 ¶ ^rAnd all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it they removed, and stood afar off.

19 And they said unto Moses, ^sSpeak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

20 And Moses said unto the people, ^tFear not: for God is come to ^uprove you, and that his ^vfear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

21 And the ^ypeople stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness, where God was.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have ^ztalked with you from heaven.

23 ^aYe shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

24 ¶ An ^baltar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in all places where I ^crecord my name I will come unto thee, and I will ^dbless thee.

25 And, ^eif thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone; for if thou lift up ^fthy tool upon it thou hast polluted it.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that ^gthy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

CHAP. XXI.

Contains an explicatory appendix to the fifth and sixth commandments, recorded in the preceding chapter. Here we have judicial laws, (1) Regulating the release or retention of Hebrew bond-servants; 1—11. (2) Laws regulating the punishment of murderers; 12—14; of smiters and cursers of parents; 15, 17; of men-stealers, 16; of strikers of neighbours; 18, 19, 24, 25; of unmerciful strikers of servants; 20, 21, 26, 27; of such as hurt women with child; 22, 23; of pushing oxen, and masters who triflingly keep them; 28—32; of such as endanger others, by leaving pits open, or keeping oxen addicted to fighting; 33—36.

NOW these are the judgments which thou shalt ^aset before them.

2 ^bIf thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve; and in the seventh he shall go out ^cfree for nothing

3 If he came in by himself, he shall

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1—17. Concerning this law it is evident, (1) That it was immediately published by God himself, in the hearing of all Israel. (2) That every command is delivered in the singular number, that every one may take it home to himself: (3) and to mark that God's grant of himself to men, as their God and Redeemer, is the foundation of all gospel-obedience: it is frequently repeated, ver. 25, 7, 10, 12: and in Lev. xviii. xix. it is connected with almost every particular command. The rules for the right understanding of these commandments, and the particular duties required, and sins forbidden in each, being so fully exhibited in the Assembly's Larger and Shorter Catechisms, with the various expositions thereof, it is sufficient to refer to these.

Ver. 20. Let not slavish fear make you to neglect your duty, for God is come to prove whether you be sincere or hypocritical.

Ver. 24, 25. These altars of turf and stone were only to be used for the present, before that of brass was made, or on extraordinary occasions; and were always to be most simple and unlike to those of the heathens.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Now, my soul let my religious principles, and my whole practice, follow the order of this divine sermon. Let the leading articles of my knowledge and belief be, that God, as in Christ, giveth himself to me, in the gospel-promise, for my God, my Redeemer, and my ALL IN ALL: and let my leading exercise be to receive him as such. Let his being JEHOVAH, my God and Redeemer, be the foundation, the great reason and motive of all that I do. Influenced by this, let me renounce and detest every idol which robs him of his honour, or me of my enjoyment of him. Let me embrace every instituted ordinance as coming from my God, and observe it in the nearest fellowship with him. Having received JEHOVAH as my God, let me have grace from him to serve him with reverence and godly fear. Copying after his pattern, and desiring the enjoyment of him as my chief good, let me observe the appointed seasons of intercourse with him. Let me regard relations and property among men as the constitutions of my God: and, in all my dealings with them, let me act as a possessor of God, that needs nothing in an unlawful manner, and as a cordial imitator of God, who is gracious and merciful, long-suffering, and abundant in holiness, righteousness, goodness, and truth. But, having tasted the terrors of a broken law, and an angry God, let me rejoice that, without my request, I have one Mediator between God and me, the Man Christ Jesus. Detesting every species of false worship let me rejoice that Jesus, the fruit of the earth, Jesus, the chosen stone, is my all sanctifying altar, on which I must present all my services before God; and my unfailing security for the presence of God in ordinances: and God forbid that I should disgrace him with any light, licentious, or injurious behaviour!

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 2. (1) An Hebrew might sell himself or his children in extreme poverty; Deut. xv. 12. Lev. xxv. 39. Neh. v. 5. (2) Magistrates might sell a person for theft; ch. xxii. 3. (3) He might be sold by his creditors for debt; 2 Kings iv. 1. Mat. xviii. 25. To such bond-servants masters often gave heathen maid-slaves, as a kind of wives or concubines, to beget other slaves.

go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him ^aa wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

5 And if ^ethe servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto ^fthe judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door-post; and his master shall ^gbore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him ^hfor ever.

7 ¶ And if a man ⁱsell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall ^knot go out as the men-servants do.

8 † If she please not her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

10 If he take him another wife; her food, her raiment, and her ^mduty of marriage, shall he not diminish.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out ⁿfree without money.

12 ¶ He that ^osmiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And if a man lie not in wait, but God ^pdeliver him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come ^qpresumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

15 ¶ And he that ^rsmiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16 ¶ And he that ^sstealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

17 ¶ And ^the that ^ucurseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And if men strive together, and one smite another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed:

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be acquitted; only he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

20 ¶ And if a man smite his ^vservant or his maid with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely ^wpunished.

21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished^x; for he is his money.

22 ¶ If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow^y; he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine.

23 And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, 27 And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die; then ^cthe ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be acquitted.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; ^dthe ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a man-servant, or maid-servant; he shall give unto their master ^ethirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned.

33 ¶ And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

34 The owner of the pit shall make ^fit good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

35 ¶ And if one man's ox hurt another's that he die, then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also they shall divide.

36 Or if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his ^gown.

Contains, (1) Laws relating to the eighth commandment regulating the punishment of theft; 1—4; grazing in other men's vineyards or fields; 5; wilful or careless raising of fire; 6; losing or hurting of things intrusted; 7—13; or borrowed; 14, 15; (2) Laws connected with the seventh command, for the punishment of fornication and bestiality; 16, 17, 19. (4) Laws akin to the first and second commands, viz. of punishing witchcraft and forbidding idolatry; undue delay of offering the first-fruits, and eating flesh of animals torn by beasts; 20, 29—31.

bowels of mercy and long-suffering; put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. * Meanwhile, in those voluntary bond-servants I may behold Jesus, the only begotten Son of God, from love to his Father, from love to his chosen people, solemnly surrendering himself to be his Father's bond-servant in our stead, till he should finish the whole obedience and suffering due from us;—and to be his honorary servant for ever for our good, that he might bestow upon us all his unsearchable blessings in time and eternity.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—How just, gracious, and condescending, must God, the giver of these laws, be! How mindful of the welfare of his kind! How profitable to be his voluntary servants! His providence extends even to that which appears accidental; and he exercises the most exact care to preserve the innocent, and at the same time punish the guilty. Let me therefore take heed that neither I, nor what pertains to me, prove hurtful to my neighbour, or to his property! Suppose no laws of men can punish me, the vengeance of God can overtake me. Let me rather, as an elect vessel, put on

IF a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep.

2 If a thief be found breaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall no blood be shed for him.

3 If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution: if he have nothing, then he shall be sold for his theft.

4 If the theft be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall restore double.

5 If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

6 If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the stacks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed therewith; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.

7 If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the thief be found, let him pay double.

8 If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought unto the judges, to see whether he have put his hand unto his neighbour's goods.

9 For all manner of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, which another challengeth to be his: the cause of both parties shall come before the judges; and whom the judges shall condemn, he shall pay double unto his neighbour.

10 If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it:

11 Then shall an oath of the LORD be between them both, that he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner of it shall accept thereof, and he shall not make it good.

12 And if it be stolen from him he shall make restitution unto the owner thereof.

13 If it be torn in pieces, then let him bring it for witness, and he shall not make good that which was torn.

14 If a man borrow ought of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the owner thereof being not with it, he shall surely make it good.

15 But, if the owner thereof be with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, it came for his hire.

16 And if a man entice a maid that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely endow her to be his wife.

17 If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

18 Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.

19 Whosoever lieth with a beast shall surely be put to death.

20 He that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the LORD only, he shall be utterly destroyed.

21 Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

22 Ye shall not afflict any widow or fatherless child:

23 If thou afflict them in anywise, and they cry at all unto me, I will surely hear their cry;

24 And my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.

26 If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

27 For that is his covering only, it is his raiment for his skin; wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am gracious.

28 Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler, of thy people.

29 Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the first born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

30 Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with his dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me.

31 And ye shall be holy men unto me: neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

CHAP. XXIII.

We have here the rest of the laws, divinely intimated to Moses on his full ascent to the mount. (1) Laws of general obligation to all mankind; viz. Laws against slander, bearing false-witness, unjust judgment, and bribery, a common cause thereof; 1-3, 6-8; for kindness to enemies and strangers; 4, 5, 9; for observation of the weekly sabbath; 12. (2) Laws peculiar to the Jews; viz. to observe every seventh year as a sacred year of release; 10, 11; to observe the yearly feast of the passover, and its attending feast of unleavened bread, and of pentecost, and of tabernacles; 14-17; to bring the first-fruits to the Lord's tabernacle or temple; 19; and to avoid mentioning the names of idols; 13; offering leaven with the blood of sacrifices, or boiltion, all covetousness, injustice, and infidelity, should be far from my heart and hand. If God be my pleasure, never should I wallow in fleshly lusts, or render others disgraced and miserable by my means. If God be my new-covenant husband and Lord, I should, as under the sweetest and strongest obligation, resist the devil, and detest his influence. Let me therefore honour JEHOVAN with due worship, and with the first-fruits of all my increase; and regard magistrates as his deputies on earth, who are bound in the most exact manner to punish crimes against God or men. If God be my pattern, let me prepare, of my goodness, for the poor. It is more blessed to give than to receive. While I have new-covenant provision, let my soul never live on that which is corrupt, or can be torn from me; but despising the blessings of earth, shew myself fully satisfied with the rich provisions of divine grace.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 29. The proportion of the first-fruits was between the fortieth and sixtieth part of the increase. By giving this they acknowledged themselves the Lord's tenants, and thus their crop was sanctified. These first-fruits also typified Jesus Christ and his people, who are dedicated to God, and bring blessings on mankind.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Behold how the righteous Lord loveth righteousness, and beholdeth the upright with a pleasant countenance! Let therefore the grace revealed in the gospel teach me to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world, rendering unto God and men their respective dues. If God be my por-

THOU shalt not raise a false report: but put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

2 Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; neither shalt thou speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment:

3 Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

4 ¶ If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldst forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.

6 Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not; for I will not justify the wicked.

8 ¶ And thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.

9 ¶ Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still: that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy olive yard.

12 ¶ Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed.

13 ¶ And in all things that I have said unto you be circumspect: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

14 ¶ Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt: and none shall appear before me empty:)

16 And the feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in the field: and the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.

17 Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

19 The first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not see the a kid in his mother's milk.

20 ¶ Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

21 Beware of him, and obey his voice; provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him.

22 But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries.

23 For mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I will cut them off.

24 Thou shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works: but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread and thy water: and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 There shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land: the number of thy days I will fulfil.

27 I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.

28 And I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee.

29 I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

† An occasion of sin and ruin.

31 And ^uI will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

32 ^xThou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

33 ^yThey shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods it will surely be a [†]snare unto thee.

CHAP. XXIV.

Having received from God the laws mentioned in the end of the twentieth, and in the two following chapters, (1) Moses comes down and repeats them to the people, who consent thereto; 1—3. (2) He writes them in a book, and reads them to the people, who again declare their consent to them; and then, by sacrifice and sprinkling of blood, ratifies the covenant between God and them, according to the tenor of these laws; 4—8. (3) As directed of God, Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, with seventy elders of Israel, ascend part of the mount, and there feast with in view of the manifested glory of God; 9—12. (4) Moses, attended part of the way by Joshua, ascends to the top of the mount, and remains there with God forty days; 13—18.

AND he said unto Moses, ^aCome up unto the LORD, thou and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and ^bseventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

2 And ^cMoses alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

3 ¶ And Moses came and told the people ^dall the words of the LORD, and all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, ^eAll the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

4 ¶ And Moses wrote all the words of the LORD, and ^frose up early in the morning, and ^gbuilded an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

5 And he sent young men of the children of Israel, who offered ^hburnt-offerings, and sacrificed peace-offerings of oxen, unto the LORD.

6 And Moses ⁱtook half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled ^mon the altar.

7 And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, ⁿAll that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Moses took the ^oblood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold ^pthe blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

9 ¶ Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel;

10 And they saw the ^qGod of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a sapphire-stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness.

11 And upon the ^rnobles of the children of Israel he ^slaid not his hand: also ^tthey saw God, and did eat and drink.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there; and I ^vwill give the tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Moses rose up, and his ^zminister Joshua: and Moses went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and behold Aaron and Hur are with you; if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses went up into the mount, and ^aa cloud covered the mount.

16 And the ^bglory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and ^cthe seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like ^ddevouring fire, on the top of the mount, in the eyes of the children of Israel.

18 And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and ^eMoses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

CHAP. XXV.

Contains, (1) God's demand of a voluntary collection from the Hebrews, for the erection of a tabernacle or tent for his residence among them; 1—9. (2) His directions how to frame; 1. An ark, or chest, for holding the tables of his law, covered with a mercy-seat, whence God, from between the cherubims, might converse with Israel; 10—22. 2. A table for holding the twelve loaves of shew-bread; 23—30. 3. A golden candlestick, for illuminating the outer apartment of the sanctuary;—all according to models shewn to Moses; 31—40.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, perhaps in human shape, appears as smiling on them; and they, with comfort and safety, feast in his presence.

Ver. 16. In these six days Moses is prepared to receive new commandments, as the people were in three days prepared for hearing the law.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—One instance of fellowship with God ensures and prepares for another more remarkable, while believers are allowed to come even to his seat—for this purpose his oracles are revealed, and his ordinances dispensed to us. But how many rashly consent to God's covenant, and resolve on duty, who in the issue prove very unsteadfast! Let me then bless the Lord that our new covenant is made with all the elect, however hard-hearted in themselves; and that it is a new testament in Christ's blood. His finished atonement hath glorified his father's perfections to the highest; hath magnified the law; and pacifies and purges our conscience from dead works. By these means I am determined to receive his words into my heart, as indeed the word of God, since I am allowed the clear and amiable displays of a reconciled God, while in his presence I feast on the flesh and blood of his Son. But behold, likewise, how my Redeemer, having fulfilled the law, and by himself purged away our sins, ascends into the hill of God, sits down on the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, and thence, in due time, he will return without sin unto salvation.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1. These, and other ceremonial institutes, are minutely described, because they flowed from the mere will of God. They were significant of great and important things; and were to be strictly observed in the adoration of a God, jealous with respect to his own worship.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Think, O my soul, have I taken heed to my ways, that I might not sin with my tongue? Have I always acted with conscience and impartiality in all my conduct? Have I always spoken only the truth, and that in due season, and with a good intent? Have I been a hater of bribery and all perverting of justice? Have I entertained strangers; done good to mine enemies; and prayed for them that despitefully use me? Do I in all things acknowledge God, the giver of my mercies? Am I careful to keep his sabbaths, and to observe every instituted opportunity of fellowship with him? Are even his most circumstantial laws hidden in my heart?—While I thus seriously examine myself, endeavour to conform myself to his will, and lament my infirmities and failings, let me rejoice that Jesus, the angel of the covenant, will safely lead me through this wilderness-world to the promised Canaan above, where no accursed inhabitant shall ever molest me, nor idols deceive me. Meanwhile, let him put out my inward corruptions, and the enemies of his people, by little and little; and let me keep myself from idols, and from voluntary intimacy with wicked men, cheerfully obeying his gracious voice, that I may not feel the rod of his chastisement, but in all my ways rejoice in his presence, blessing, and protection.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 4. The altar represented God the chief party in the covenant, and the twelve stony pillars the tribes of Israel, as having hard and stony hearts.

Ver. 6—8. The sprinkling of the blood on the altar, the book, the young men, the elders, and the pillars which represented the people, denoted the satisfaction of God's perfections, the fulfilment of the broken law, and the purification of men's consciences by the blood of Jesus. Hence, in ver 9, 10, God,

Ver. 8. While this tabernacle was a sign of God's presence with, and protection of, his people, it was a type (1) of Christ's person; Heb. viii. 2; (2) of the gospel-church, the habitation of God by the Spirit; 2 Cor. vi. 16; (3) of every Christian in whose heart God dwells; 1 Cor. iii. 16. and vi. 19; (4) of the new covenant and heavenly state; Is. lxvi. 1: and according to these different significations may the furniture thereof be understood in different views.

Ver. 10. The ark was the chief of all the sacred furniture which peculiarly sanctified the tabernacle, and for which it was principally made.

Ver. 16. The two tables of stone upon which the law was written are called the Testimony, because they witnessed the covenant between God and the people; testified what God required of them; and testified against them if they observed it not.

that they ^abring me an ^boffering: of every man that giveth it ^bwillingly with his heart ye shall take my offering.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass,

4 And ^cblue, and purple, and scarlet, and ^dfine linen, and goats' ^ehair,

5 And rams' skins died red, and badgers' skins, and ^fshittim-wood,

6 ^gOil for the light, spices for anointing oil, and for sweet incense, 7 ^hOnyx stones, and stones to be set in the ephod, and in the breast-plate.

8 And ⁱlet them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them.

9 According to all that I shew thee, ^jafter the ^kpattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of ^kall the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make ^lit.

10 ¶ And they shall make an ark of shittim-wood: ^mtwo cubits and a half ⁿshall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

11 And thou shalt overlay it with ^opure gold; within and without shalt thou overlay it; and shalt make upon it a ^pcrown of gold round about.

12 And thou shalt cast four rings of gold for it, and put ^qthem in the four corners thereof; and two rings ^rshall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it.

13 And thou shalt make ^sstaves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

14 And thou shalt put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be ^tborne with them.

15 The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.

16 And thou shalt put into the ark the ^utestimony which I shall give thee.

17 ¶ And thou shalt make a ^vmercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half ^wshall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

18 And thou shalt make two ^xcherubims of gold, of beaten work shalt thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy-seat.

19 And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end: ^yeven ^zof the mercy-seat shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

20 And the ^{aa}cherubims shall stretch forth ^{ab}their wings on high, covering the mercy-seat with their wings, and their faces ^{ac}shall look one to another; ^{ad}toward the mercy-seat shall the faces of the cherubims be.

21 And thou shalt put the ^{ae}mercy-seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the ^{af}testimony that I shall give thee.

22 *And ^{ag}there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy-seat, from between the two cherubims which ^{ah}are upon the ark of the testimony, of all ^{ai}things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

23 ¶ Thou shalt also make a table of shittim-wood: two cubits ^{aj}shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt overlay it with ^{ak}pure gold, and make thereto a ^{al}crown of gold round about.

25 And thou shalt make unto it ^{am}a border of an hand-breadth round about, and thou shalt make a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

26 And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be, for places of the staves to ^{an}bear the table.

28 And thou shalt make the ^{ao}staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them.

29 ^{ap}And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, ^{aq}to cover withal: ^{ar}of pure gold shalt thou make them

30 And thou shalt set upon the table ^{as}shew-bread before me alway.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold; of beaten work shall the candlestick be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same.

32 And ^{at}six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side:

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, ^{au}with a knop and a flower in one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, ^{av}with a knop and a flower; so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick ^{aw}shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, ^{ax}with their knops and their flowers.

35 And ^{ay}there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

36 Their knops and their branches

Ver. 17. The lid, or mercy-seat, placed between the tables of the law, and the shechinah, or cloudy symbol of the divine presence, denoted Jesus' atonement; which answers to all the demands of the law, and interposes between it and Jehovah, that he may deal mercifully with us in Christ.

Ver. 18. The cherubims signified angels, as prying into the mysteries of redemption, and ministering to Christ and his people; or ministers, as founded on Christ, admiring his work, and attending on God and his service.

Ver. 23. This table typified Christ, as having all fulness in him, and supporting and presenting before God all his people; and also the gospel-church and the ordinances of it.

Ver. 31. This candlestick typified Christ himself, or his gospel-church and ordinances thereof.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

40 And [°]look that thou make them after their pattern, ||which was shewed thee in the mount.

CHAP. XXVI.

Contains directions from God concerning, (1) The inner curtains of the tabernacle, and their coupling with taches of gold; 1—6. (2) The second curtains of goats' hair, and their coupling with taches of brass; 7—13. (3) The third covering of rams' skins died red; and the fourth, or uppermost, of badgers' skins; 14. (4) The boards of shittim-wood, to be erected for supporting the curtains, with their cross-bars and sockets; 15—30. (5) The vail, or hanging, between the holy and most holy place of the tabernacle; 31—35. (6) The vail, or hanging, at the door of the tabernacle, separating the holy place from the court; 36, 37.

MOREOVER, thou shalt make the [°]tabernacle with ten curtains of [°]fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with [°]cherubims [°]of cunning work shalt thou make them.

2 [†]The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The five curtains shall be [°]coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make [°]loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second; that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty [°]taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

7 ¶ And thou shalt make curtains of goats' hair, to be a covering upon the tabernacle: eleven curtains shalt thou make.

8 ||The length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle.

10 And thou shalt make fifty [°]loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make [°]fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the ^{*}tent together, that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the back-side of the tabernacle.

13 And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side, [†]of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle, on this side and on that side, to cover it.

14 And thou shalt make [°]a covering for the tent of rams' skins died red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make [°]boards for the tabernacle of shittim-wood standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

17 Two [°]tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south-side southward.

19 And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

20 And for the second side of the tabernacle on the north side there shall be twenty boards;

21 And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

24 And they shall be [°]coupled together beneath, and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring; thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver sixteen sockets; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board:

26 And thou shalt make [°]bars of shittim-wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle.

27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Since, in deep compassion to human poverty, JEHOVAH hath freely taken upon himself the whole expense of the work of redemption; the infinite expense of raising up a Saviour, erecting a church, and preparing a new covenant and an heavenly state, as means of his residence amongst us;—since he has made Jesus an ARK for holding and fulfilling his law: a propitiatory or MERCY-SEAT, whence, to the everlasting astonishment of angels and men, and by their ministration, he may declare his oracles, promises, and laws;—a TABLE, to feed his people, and on which the tribes of the redeemed are, in their successive generations, safely and honourably presented before God;—and a LIGHT to his church, by his word and Spirit:—may

I, many thousands more, be the willing members of his church! Let us surrender ourselves, and all that we have, whether more or less valuable, to the service of Christ! Following with care the prescriptions of heaven, let us come boldly to the throne of his grace, and commune with our God! Let us feast from day to day, especially from one sabbath to another, upon Jesus, the bread indeed,—Jesus, the finest of the wheat; that we may be to God a sweet savour of Christ! And, even in this earthly tabernacle and militant church, let us walk in the light of the Lord; so shall we shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life!

of the boards shall reach from end to end.

29 And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made.

32 And thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of shittim-wood overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold, upon the four sockets of silver.

33 And thou shalt hang up the vail under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the vail the ark of the testimony: and the vail shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy.

34 And thou shalt put the mercy-seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set the table without the vail, and the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make an hanging for the door of the tent, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework.

37 And thou shalt make for the hanging five pillars of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

CHAP. XXVII.

Contains directions from God, concerning, (1) The brazen altar upon which the sacrifices were to be offered; 1—8. (2) The court of the tabernacle, with the hanging for the door of it; 9—19. (3) The oil for the lamps of the candlestick; 20, 21.

AND thou shalt make an altar of shittim-wood, *five cubits long and five cubits broad: the altar shall be four-square; and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

2 And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof; his horns shall be of the same; and thou shalt overlay it with brass.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his shovels, and his basons, and his flesh-hooks, and his fire-pans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.

4 And thou shalt make for it a grate of net-work of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen rings in the four corners thereof.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

6 And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with brass.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to bear it.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: as it was shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

9 ¶ And thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle for the south side southward: there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen of an hundred cubits long for one side.

10 And the twenty pillars thereof and their twenty sockets shall be of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.

11 And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars and their twenty sockets of brass: the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the breadth of the court on the west side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten.

13 And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And on the other side shall be hangings fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

17 All the pillars round about the court shall be filleted with silver: their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of brass.

18 ¶ The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty every where, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.

19 All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the surface thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

20 ¶ And thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil-olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp to burn always.

21 In the tabernacle of the congregation without the vail, which is before the testimony, Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning before the LORD: it shall be a statute for ever unto their generations on the behalf of the children of Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—How graciously God suits the tokens of his favour to our circumstances, as he formed a moveable residence, and furniture for himself, to the wandering condition of his chosen people. But herein may I contemplate Jesus, mean and debased in the view of carnal beholders, but inwardly decked with all the golden glories of Godhead, and the pure graces of manhood! I see how every thing about him, as Mediator, is founded and fixed in, erected and joined together, according to the purpose, and by the infinite wisdom and power of God. Let me behold, likewise, the Christian church, outwardly despicable in the view of a carnal world, but inwardly decked, established, and knit together, by every precious ordinance, spiritual grace, faithful minister, or true saint! Let my entrance into her be by Jesus Christ, the door, the way, the truth, and the life: and amidst all my outward infirmities, let me be all-glorious within, a meet habitation of God through the Spirit! Thus shall I have access with boldness, by the blood of Jesus, into the sanctuary of fellowship with God on earth, and in due time into the heavenly state, the holiest of all.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Contains divine prescriptions concerning the priests who were to minister in the tabernacle, and their sacred vestments; 1—5: particularly, (1) The rich garments of the high-priest, including the ephod, or short jacket without sleeves, and girdle; 6—14: the breast-plate, with its precious stones, and Urim and Thummim; 15—30: the robe of the ephod, somewhat like a woman's gown; 31—35: and the mitre, with its golden plate; 36—39. (2) The plain vestments of the common priests, including their linen coats, breeches, bonnets, and girdles; 40—43.

Lev. 8. 2.
Heb. 5. 4, 5.

AND ^atake thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even ^bAaron, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.

2 ¶ And thou shalt make ^choly garments for Aaron thy brother, for glory and for beauty.

3 And thou shalt speak unto all that are ^dwise-hearted, whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

4 And these are the garments which they shall make; ^ea breast-plate, and an ephod, and a robe, and a brodered coat, a mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

5 And they shall take ^fgold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

6 ¶ ^gAnd they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined linen, with cunning work.

7 It shall have the two shoulder-pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

8 And the ^hcurious girdle of the ephod, which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 ⁱAnd thou shalt take two onyx-stones, and grave on them the names of the children of Israel:

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, ^kaccording to their birth.

11 With the work of an engraver in stone, like the engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ouches of gold.

12 And thou shalt ^lput the two stones upon the shoulders of the ephod for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel: and Aaron shall ^m†bear their names before the LORD upon his two shoulders for a memorial.

13 And thou shalt make ouches of gold;

14 And two chains of pure gold at the ends: of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make the ⁿbreast-plate of judgment with cunning work; after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen, shalt thou make it.

16 Four-square it shall be being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

17 And thou shalt ^o†set it in settings of stones, even ^p"four rows of stones: the first row shall be a ^q†sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

19 And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their ^r†enclosings.

21 And the stones shall be ^s"with the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be ^t"according to the twelve tribes.

22 ^u"And thou shalt make upon the breast-plate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breast-plate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breast-plate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breast-plate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt ^v†fasten in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod before it.

26 And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breast-plate in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, towards the forepart thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breast-plate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breast-plate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aaron shall ^w"bear the names of the children of Israel in the breast-plate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually.

30 ¶ And thou shalt put in the breast-plate of judgment the ^x"Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—Since I have the once debased, the all-atoning, all-perfect, powerful, and all-accessible, Jesus for my altar;—since I have his church and ordinances for a court and place of worship, divinely bounded and protected;—the oracles, gifts, and graces of his Spirit, for my illuminating oil;—let me, conscious of crimes unnumbered, flee to him as my refuge, and by faith lay hold on his horns of saving power and authority.

Let me give up myself, and all that I have, to God through him; that in his courts I may behold his person and work, and worship him in fear. Let me, whether minister or private Christian, exert myself, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified; and with exercised gifts and graces, let me shine forth as a light in the house of my God.

with the bullock and the two rams.4 And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring †unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt †wash them with water.5 And thou shalt take the †garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breast-plate, and gird him with the curious girdle of the ephod :6 And thou shalt †put the mitre upon REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—Come, my soul, is not the smell of my Redeemer's garments, his unspotted manhood, his mediatorial office, and his everlasting righteousness, as of a field which the Lord hath blessed ! Are not these for glory and for beauty to himself and to his people ! Is he not every way fitted to attract the admiration of angels and of men ! every way qualified to atone for, to remember, his people, and present them before God ! Are not even the appearances and actions of his debased state calculated to promote his own and his Father's honour, and our everlasting happiness ! Let me then behold and receive him as the Great High Priest of my profession ; behold how, in his manhood, in his mediatorial office, and finished righteousness, he bears the names of all his chosen in all their diversified conditions, and supports and presents them before God ? What sweet fruits, and joyful sounds, of gospel-grace issue from his incarnation, righteousness, and intercession ! In what a dignified manner hath he put away our sins that we die not ! And, though in 14 But the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin-offering.

15 Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt-offering unto the LORD; it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

19 And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments, with him.

22 Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration:

23 And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:

24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

25 And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

27 And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave-offering, and the shoulder of the heave-offering, which is waved, and which is heaped up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons:

28 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by statute for ever from the children of Israel; for it is an heave-offering:

and it shall be an heave-offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, even their heave-offering unto the LORD.

29 And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

30 And that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.

31 And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.

32 And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

33 And they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

34 And if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire; it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all things which I have commanded thee: seven days shalt thou consecrate them.

36 And thou shalt offer every day a bullock for a sin-offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar when thou hast made an atonement for it, and thou shalt anoint it to sanctify it.

37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; and it shall be an altar most holy: whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

38 ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; two lambs of the first year day by day continually.

39 The one lamb thou shalt offer in the morning, and the other lamb thou shalt offer at even:

40 And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil, and the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink-offering.

41 And the other lamb thou shalt offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat-offering of the morning, and according to the drink-offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

42 This shall be a continual burnt-offering throughout your generations at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; where I will meet you, to speak there unto thee.

43 ¶ And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and the tabernacle shall be sanctified by my glory.

CHAP. XXX.

Here Moses is further instructed concerning, (1) The altar of incense, its situation and use; 1—10. (2) The half-shekel of ransom-money required for the use of the tabernacle; 11—16. (3) The laver which stood beside the brazen altar for the priests to wash in; 17—21. (4) The making and use of the anointing oil; 22—33. (5) The incense and perfume to be burnt on the golden altar; 34—38.

AND thou shalt make ^aan altar to burn incense upon; of ^bshittim-wood shalt thou make it.

2 A ^c†cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; four-square shall it be; and two cubits shall be the height thereof: the horns thereof shall be of the same.

3 And thou shalt overlay ^dit with pure gold, the ^e*top thereof, and the ^f†sides thereof round about, and the horns thereof; and thou shalt make unto it a ^g†crown of gold round about.

4 And ^htwo golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two ⁱ†corners thereof; upon the two sides of it shalt thou make ^jit: and they shall be for places for the staves to ^kbear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the ^lstaves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it ^mbefore the vail that is by the ark of the testimony, before ⁿthe mercy-seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon ^osweet incense every morning; when he ^pdresseth the lamps he shall burn incense upon it.

8 And when Aaron ^q§lighteth the lamps at even he shall burn incense upon it, ^r†a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations.

9 Ye shall offer ^sno strange incense thereon, nor burnt-sacrifice, nor meat-offering; neither shall ye pour drink-offering thereon.

10 And Aaron shall ^tmake an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin-offering of atonements: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 ^uWhen thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after ^v*their number, then shall they give every man a ^wransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no plague among ^xthem when thou numberest them.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered^y; half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary; (a shekel ^z*is twenty gerahs;) an half-shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

15 ^{aa}The rich ^{ab}†shall not give more, and the poor shall not ^{ac}†give less, than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

16 And thou shalt take the atonement-money of the children of Israel, and shalt appoint it for ^{ad}the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be a ^{ae}*memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Thou shalt also make ^{af}a laver of brass, and his foot ^{ag}also of brass, to wash ^{ah}withal: and thou shalt put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein:

19 For Aaron and his sons shall ^{ai}wash their hands and their feet thereat:

20 ^{aj}When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD:

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be a statute ^{ak}bfor ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto thee ^{al}principal spices, of pure myrrh ^{am}*five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

24 And of cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil-olive an ^{an}†hin:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Through these dark shadows of good things to come, these washings, arrayings, oblations, and unctions, I look to Jesus and his ransomed offspring. I see his solemn call to his work, and theirs to their station. The infinite purity of his Godhead; the perfect holiness of his manhood; the complete humanity which he assumed; the extensive office which he undertook; the humble obedience which he fulfilled; the unbounded influences of the Holy Ghost which he received; fully qualified him to offer himself in his death, and to make continual intercession for us. Predestinated before the foundation of the world, promised and typified at the fall, and manifested in the evening and end of the world, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, he is the daily, the continued salvation, provision, and comfort, of our souls; and, as reconciled in him, God dwells with and blesses us with all spiritual blessings.—Let none then approach to the sacred ministry without being washed in Jesus' blood, regenerated by his Spirit, endowed with his gifts and graces, and, at the same time, using due care and deliberation to prepare for their awful work. In the exercise of that ministry let them daily exhibit Jesus as the atonement, food, and consolation, of sinners; so shall God be present in his ordinances, and bless the attenders.—Let every Christian likewise, as a redeemed priest unto God, always improve Jesus as made of God unto him wisdom, righteousness, sanctification; and redemption: that, being purged in his atoning blood, clothed with his imputed righteousness, and endowed with his Spirit, he may daily live by faith on the Son of God, and offer up the spiritual sacrifices of prayer, praise, and good works; nay, his whole self, as acceptable to God through him; and let him constantly hold fellowship with a sanctifying God as his God, and his ALL in ALL.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—In this golden altar surely I discern Jesus, the God-man, crowned with glory and honour, and set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, as the great intercessor for his people, and the mean of the acceptance of all their prayers, praises, and religious services! In this ransom-money was not Jesus pre-figured as giving himself equally for every one of his numbered, his chosen people, that no plague may be found among them! In this laver was not Jesus typified as the fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness, in which all his people and ministers ought to wash their conscience and heart before and after every approach to God! In this sacred oil, I behold the Holy Ghost in his precious and manifold, but well-connected, gifts and graces, with which Jesus, his people, his ordinances, and none else, are anointed of God! In this sacred incense I discern the precious and acceptable intercessions of my Redeemer, together with the cordial prayers, praises, and services of his people. Let me then, by faith, depend on his advocacy, since he presents

Let all the Israel of God rest and rejoice in him as the redemption-price to the justice of God, while we daily wash in the fountain of his blood and Spirit, till we be without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing: and let the genuine spirit and grace of Christ dwell in us, and not the counterfeit appearance; for dreadful is the hazard of turning his grace into licentiousness, pretending the possession of the Spirit, or counterfeiting the work of God.

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an ^aend of communing with him upon mount Sinai, ^btwo tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the ^cfinger of God.

CHAP. XXXII.

Exhibits a most shocking interruption of God's favours, and a delay of the erection of the tabernacle by Israel's sin.
(1) Weary of waiting for the promised land, for Moses' return from the mount, and for an institution of ceremonial worship among them, they make and worship a golden calf; 1—6.
(2) Intimating their wickedness to Moses, God threatens utterly to destroy them; but Moses intercedes for them; 7—14.
(3) Returning from the mount, he observes their crime; and, in detestation of it, breaks the tables of the law which he had brought with him, and burns their idol-calf; 15—20. (4) After examining Aaron concerning his part therein, he orders the ring-leaders in guilt to be slain by the faithful Levites; 21—29.
(5) Upon Moses' further intercession, God grants the Hebrews a reprieve, but denounces an after-reckoning with them; 30—35.

AND, when the ^apeople saw that Moses ^bdelayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, ^cUp, make us gods which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him.

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off ^dthe golden ear-rings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

3 And ^eall the people brake off the golden ear-rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf*: and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

5 And when Aaron saw it ^fhe built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, ^gTo-morrow is a feast to the LORD.

6 And ^hthey rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt-offerings, and brought peace-offerings: and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ⁱGo, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves:

8 They have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, These be thy gods O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses,

^mI have seen this people, and behold it is a stiff-necked people:

10 Now therefore ⁿlet me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation.

11 ¶ And Moses besought ^othe LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 ^pWherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and ^qrepent of this evil against thy people.

13 Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, ^rand all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD ^srepented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶ And Moses turned, and ^twent down from the mount, and the two tables of ^uthe testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And the ^vtables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when ^wJoshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome; but the ^xnoise of them that sing do I hear.

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that ^yhe saw the calf, and the dancing: and Moses' ^zanger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.

20 ^aAnd he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger

scribing a typical representation of those. But the most remarkable visits of God to men upon earth quickly come to an end; though he wisely frames every thing about his ordinances so as that it may be instructing and comforting. In these typical architects I may therefore behold Jesus, called of God to finish a work of redemption, and rear up a gospel-church.—Jesus, qualified of God, by the unmeasured unction of the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, to fulfil the arduous task, and actually completing his design, to his own glory and the salvation of his people.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 9. Stiff-necked signifies stubborn and disobedient, like unruly and unbroken bullocks, that will not submit their neck to the yoke.

Ver. 19. Moses brake the tables, not in rage, but in holy zeal, to mark that their sin might justly provoke God to give up his covenant-relation to them, and deprive them of his precious laws.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—Nothing, even of natural excellency, but cometh from God. How easily and completely he can furnish his instruments for whatever service he calls them to; and therefore with courage and comfort may such as have once his call venture on the hardest work! But commonly we may observe, for the honour of Christ, who needed no assistant, and especially for the comfort of his servants, God sends forth his noted agents by twos! Great is the danger of sabbath profanation; and yet how much are men disposed to it, especially if they can pretend the sacredness or the necessity of their work as an excuse! What exalted account God makes of Jesus Christ and his church! He, who spent but six days in creating a world, spends forty in pre-of my lord wax hot: thou knowest the people, that they are set on mischief.

23 For they said unto me, Make us gods who shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were ^bnaked, (for Aaron had made them naked unto their ^bshame among [†]their enemies,)

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And ^ball the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man ^bhis brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand ^bmen.

29 ¶ For Moses had said, § Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will ^bgo up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin.

31 And Moses ^breturned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned ^aa great sin, and have made them gods of gold.

32 Yet ^bnow, if thou wilt, forgive their sin: and if not, ^bblot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.

33 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^bWhosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

34 Therefore now ^bgo, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine angel shall go before thee; nevertheless, in the day when I visit I will ^bvisit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because they ^bmade the calf which Aaron made.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Here, (1) To the grief and humiliation of Israel, God refuses to attend them to Canaan, but offers them an angel for their guide; 1—6. (2) By means of the intercessions of Moses and his attendants at the new tent, the correspondence between God and the people is renewed, he manifesting his glory to them, and they worshipping him; 7—10. (3) By earnest supplication, perhaps of forty days continuance, (Deut. ix. 18, 25.) Moses obtains a promise of God's presence with the people, and a noted manifestation of his glory for himself; 11—23.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^aDepart, and go up hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I ^bsware unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it:

2 And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite:

3 Unto a ^aland flowing with milk and honey: for I will ^bnot go up in the midst of thee, for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way.

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings they ^bmourned: and no man did put on him his ornaments.

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye are a ^bstiff-necked people: I will come up into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now ^bput off thy ornaments from thee, that I may ^bknow what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel ^bstript themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

7 ¶ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, ^aafar off from the camp, and ^bcalled it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and ^bstood every man at his tent-door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the ^bcloudy

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—It is highly necessary that magistrates and ministers should attend to their charges closely, lest their absence occasion mischief: for those, who reckon God's counsels slow, readily rush headlong into ruin by their own; and most men are much readier to serve the devil than God, and to sacrifice one lust, pride itself not excepted, for the promoting of another still more sordid and absurd. Yea, even after the most solemn transactions with God, men quickly and fearfully stumble into sin; and the choicest saints are too apt to follow a multitude to do evil. But surely it is highly shameful when professed Christians imitate these idolaters in their mad revelling and mirth! All our wickedness is obvious and odious before God. And let professors of the true religion beware how they so corrupt themselves, lest God be ashamed to acknowledge them as his people! What a mercy is it for a guilty nation when they have powerful intercessors at the throne of grace! They have to do with a gracious God, who takes pleasure to repent himself of the evil. Holy zeal for God, when prudently manifested on proper occasions, is highly becoming: but backsliders in heart shall be filled with their own ways, and have their idols broken before their eyes. And O, what misery and shame do good men bring on nations by joining them in their wickedness! The best excuse which they can make for their conduct is pitiful and absurd: and therefore it deeply concerns all men, in an evil day, to know whether they be on the Lord's side or on that of his enemies. It is both necessary, honourable, and useful, to employ the strictest impartiality in the matters of God, and to use the most earnest intercessions with God, to avert, even for a time, his just vengeance from falling upon a nation which is ripened for destruction. And we have here the greatest encouragement to expect a gracious answer to our prayers.

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 5.—That I may try whether thou wilt repent of or persist in thy sin, and act towards thee accordingly.

Ver. 7.—This tabernacle was a tent erected by Moses for the worship of God till the appointed one should be finished; and the removal of it from the camp intimated the Lord's displeasure with them, and departure from them.

pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle-door: and all the people ^prose up and worshipped, every man in his tent-door.

11 And the LORD ^aspake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp; but his ^sservant Joshua the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, ^sBring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I ^tknow thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now ^uthy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is ^xthy people.

14 And he said, My ^ypresence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

15 And he said unto him, If ^zthy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? Is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be ^aseparated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^bI will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 ¶ And he said, I ^cbeseech thee, shew me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make all my ^dgoodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; ^eand will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

20 And he said, ^fThou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee ^gin a cleft of the rock; and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by:

23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my ^hback parts: but my face shall not be seen.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—Fearful is the danger and woe that attend apostasy from God, and the worshipping of idols in his room! His eye beholds the inward hardness and obstinacy of our hearts. And painful indeed are the convictions of an awakened conscience when God displays his terrors, and appears as an enemy! There is need of uncommon humiliation and prayer when God's wrath is once kindled against a people, and he has begun to remove his ordinances from them. But when a gracious God, and a multitude of groaning hearts, meet together at the throne of grace, it is a token of his merciful designs, for he is ready to return to his praying people, and indulge them with the most astonishing familiarity. Their desire of fellowship and boldness

(2) In meeting him there, and proclaiming his gracious character—upon which Moses founds further supplication for Israel; 5—9. (3) In his converse with Moses, he renews his promise of Canaan to the people, and his charge to extirpate the Canaanites and their idols, and to make no marriages with them; to dedicate every firstling, to observe the weekly and ceremonial sabbaths, offer the first-fruits; &c. 10—27. AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^aHew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the ^bwords that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.

2 And be ready in the morning, and ^ccome up in the morning, unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me in the top of the mount.

3 And no man shall ^dcome up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up ^eearly in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD ^fdescended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD.

6 And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The ^gLORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth,

7 ^hKeeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that ⁱwill by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

8 ¶ And Moses made haste, and ^kbowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped.

9 And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O LORD, let ^lmy LORD, I pray thee, ^mgo among us; for it is a ⁿstiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine ^oinheritance.

10 ¶ And he said, Behold, ^pI make a covenant: before all thy people I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD; for it is a terrible thing that I will do with thee.

11 ^qObserve thou that which I command thee this day; ^rBehold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebu-site.

of faith increases in his presence: and he will not refuse them any thing they ask, though it were to the whole of his kingdom. What blessing of direction, presence, or spiritual manifestation, can he deny us, who have Jesus our advocate within the veil! Come then, my soul, be no more a trifer in prayer, but make intercession with groans which cannot be uttered. Whatever I ask, believing, for myself, or my family, or the Church, God will give it. Let me, adoring the sovereignty of his grace, press after clearer and clearer displays of his glory, his goodness, till at last I see him as he is! Awake, ye prayerless wasters of time!—Base and unprofitable are your fellowships with men, if compared to this of Moses with his God!

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 1. Thus God left a mark of their rebellion on the tables in their not being hewn by himself; yet nevertheless he made his law to retain the same force; and manifested, that it is not grsciously inscribed in our hearts till once they be hewn and broken by Moses' covenant form of it.

12 Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee:

13 But ye shall destroy their altars, break their images, and cut down their groves.

14 For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God:

15 Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice;

16 And thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.

17 Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.

18 The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.

19 All that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.

20 But the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the first-born of thy sons thou shalt redeem: and none shall appear before me empty.

21 Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing-time and in harvest thou shalt rest.

22 And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the first-fruits of wheat-harvest, and the feast of in-gathering at the year's end.

23 Thrice in the year shall all your men-children appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.

24 For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in a year.

25 Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left unto the morning.

26 The first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

27 And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.

28 And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights: he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

29 And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai, with the two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, when he came down from the mount, that Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone while he talked with him.

30 And when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him.

31 And Moses called unto them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him: and Moses talked with them.

32 And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai.

33 And till Moses had done speaking with them he put a vail on his face.

34 But when Moses went in before the LORD to speak with him, he took the vail off, until he came out. And he came out, and spake unto the children of Israel that which he was commanded.

35 And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone: and Moses put the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

CHAP. XXXV.

The sad interruption of the settlement of God's worship among the Israelites being happily ended, (1) Moses reports to them the divine directions which he had received concerning the sabbath; their voluntary collection for the rearing and furnishing of the tabernacle, and the framing and furniture of it; 1—19. (2) The people with great cheerfulness bring in their directed contributions; 20—29. (3) Bezaleel and Aholiab are nominated and qualified to be principal artists in framing them; 30—35.

AND Moses gathered all the congregation of the children of Israel together, and said unto them, These are the words which the LORD hath commanded, that ye should do them.

2 Six days shall work be done; but on the seventh day there shall be to you a holy day, a sabbath of rest to the LORD: whosoever doth work therein shall be put to death.

3 Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath-day.

4 And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD commanded, saying, repeat his promises, warnings, and laws, to us, who are so ignorant, heedless, and forgetful. How great is their safety who live in close fellowship with him! He takes pleasure to honour such as honour him; and clear views of the glory of God beget in his people the most glorious conformity to him, and elevate above all the fears or hopes of nature.—But it is very becoming when those, who are most distinguished with gifts and graces, are, through lowliness of mind, scarcely conscious of their own excellencies! when others are more sensible of our spiritual beauty than we ourselves are!—and when ministers, who have the deepest insight into divine things, accommodate their instructions to their people's capacity!—In the whole of this breach and reconciliation between God and Israel, let me behold how the law entered that the offence might abound; but, where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that, as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign, through righteousness, unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord!

5 Take ye from among you an offering unto the LORD: Whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold, and silver, and brass.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—It is a great mercy to have God's law manifested to us; but especially written on our hearts when hewn by convictions of sin; and the necessity of reconciliation with God, through Christ, discovered thereby. Ministers must labour to hew men's hearts: but it is only God who can write divine truths in them. The most ready and believing dispatch is necessary in making up the breaches between God and our soul. But pleasant and transporting indeed are remarkable discoveries of the glory and grace of God! His new covenant name is exactly suited to our sinful and destitute condition! Clear and distinct views thereof produce the boldest pleadings of faith at his throne of grace; and we cannot sufficiently admire that God should so often vice in the holy place, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.20 ¶ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.21 And they came, every one whose ^vheart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments.22 And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing-hearted, and brought ^wbracelets, and earrings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold :

and every man that offered offered an offering of gold unto the LORD.23 And every man, with whom ^xwas found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found shittim-wood for any work of the service, brought it.25 And all the ^ywomen that werewise-hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.26 And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun goats' hair.27 And ^bthe rulers brought onyx-stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breast-plate ;28 And spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.29 The children of Israel brought a ^cwilling offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work ^dwhich the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, ^ethe LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah :31 And he hath filled him with the spirit of God ^fin wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship ;32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,33 And in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.34 And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.35 Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work, of the engraver, and of the ^gcunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise ^hcunning work.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Here, (1) The collected materials are delivered to Bezaleel and Aholiab, and their work is begun; 1—4. (2) The people offer so liberally that a necessary restraint is put upon them; 5—7. (3) We have a particular account of making the appurtenances of the tabernacle itself; its fine inner curtains, 8—13; its three outer coverings, 14—19; its boards, 20—30; cross bars, 31—34; its partition-vail, 35, 36; and vail or hanging for the door, 37, 38.

THEN wrought ^aBezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whom the LORD put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the sanctuary, ^baccording to all that the LORD had commanded.

2 And Moses ^ccalled Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise-hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it.

3 And they received of Moses all the offering which the children of Israel ^dhad brought, for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—As this, and the following chapters, generally relate no more but the execution of what was directed in chapters xxv. xxvi. xxvii. xxviii. xxx. xxxi. the notes and reflections there found are referred to. Only let me observe, that the glory of God, and happiness of men, are deeply interested in the exact observation of the sabbath; and that God will either have voluntary service, or will not accept of it at all. Sincere repentance always issues in hearty dedications to God: and it is comely when professors, according to their respective abilities, concur in promoting the honour and service of God. In such a work he graciously accepts, not according to what they have not, but according to what they have, if there be first a willing mind. And, since God liberally furnishes such as he calls to public offices in his church, the greater our gifts or grace, or the higher our station, the more earnest ought to be our labour in the service of Christ, and in helpfulness to our fellow-members.

15 And for the other side of the court-gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen.

17 And the sockets for the pillars were of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapiters of silver; and all the pillars of the court were filleted with silver.

18 And the hanging for the gate of the court was needlework of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: and ^{*}twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was [†]five cubits, answerable to the hangings of the court.

19 And their pillars were four, and their sockets of brass four; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapiters and their fillets of silver.

20 And all the pins of the tabernacle, and of the court round about, were of brass.

21 ¶ This is the sum of the tabernacle, even of the tabernacle of ^ktestimony, as it was counted, according to the commandment of Moses for the service of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, son of Aaron the priest.

22 And ^mBezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses.

23 And with him was Aholiab, son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

24 All the gold that was occupied for the work in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was [†]twenty and nine talents, and seven [†]hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

25 And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an ^{}hundred talents, and a thousand seven ^{}hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

26 A bekah for ⁿevery man, that is, half a shekel, after the ^oshekel of the sanctuary, for every one that went to be numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for [†]six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty men.

27 And of the hundred talents of silver were cast the ^psockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the vail; an hundred sockets of the hundred talents, a talent for a socket.

28 And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapiters, and filleted them.

29 And the brass of the offering was ^{*}seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred shekels.

30 And therewith he made the sockets [†]to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the brazen altar, and the brazen grate for it, and all the vessels of the altar, 31 And the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the court-gate, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of the court round about.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Contains (1) An account of the making the priests' sacred apparel, viz. the ephod and its curious girdle, and onyx stones for buttoning together its shoulder-pieces; 1—7; the breast-plate of judgment, with its twelve precious stones fixed in it; 8—21; the robe of the ephod; 22—26; the mitre, with its plate, for the high priest; 30, 31; and the coats, bonnets, breeches, and girdles, for the inferior priests; 27—29. (2) A summary account of the whole work presented to Moses when finished, and exactly corresponding to the divine prescriptions concerning it in chap. xxv. xxx. xxxv. 32—43.

AND of the blue, and purple, and scarlet, they made ^aclothes of service, to do service in the ^bholy place, and made the holy garments for Aaron; as the LORD commanded Moses.

2 ¶ And he made the ^cephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

3 And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, with cunning work.

4 They made shoulder-pieces for it, to couple it together: by the two edges was it coupled together.

blood for spiritual purification. What a small enclosure is the Church of Christ! Happy the period when death shall draw aside the curtains, and allow us free access to the house eternal in the heavens! But great and important things might be done for God in his church below, were but all her ministers and members, however weak, hearty and unanimous.

CHAP. XL.

The parts being all finished, here (1) God commands to erect the tabernacle on the three hundred and forty-first day from their leaving Egypt, and to consecrate it and the priests who were to serve in it; 1—15. (2) The tabernacle is reared up on the day appointed, being the first of their sacred year, and all its furniture exactly placed in it according to God's directions; 16—33. (3) God takes possession of it by the SHECHINAH, or cloud of glory, hovering above, and entering into it; 34—38.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

^a 2 On the first day of the ^afirst month shalt thou set up the ^btabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

^a 3 And thou shalt put therein the ark of the testimony, and cover the ark with the vail

^a 4 And ^dthou shalt bring in the table, and set in order ^ethe things that are to be set in order upon it; and thou shalt bring in the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof.

^a 5 And thou shalt set the ^faltar of gold for the incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle.

^a 6 And thou shalt set the altar of the burnt-offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

^a 7 And thou shalt set the ^glaver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and shalt put water therein.

^a 8 And thou shalt ^hset up the court round about, and hang up the hanging at the court-gate.

^a 9 And thou shalt ⁱtake the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof: and it shall be holy.

^a 10 And thou shalt ^kanoint the altar of the burnt-offering, and all his vessels, and sanctify the altar: and it shall be an altar ^lmost holy.

^a 11 And thou shalt anoint the laver and his foot, and sanctify it.

^a 12 And thou shalt ^mbring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water.

^a 13 And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and anoint him, and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

^a 14 And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats:

^a 15 And thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be an ⁿeverlasting priesthood throughout their generations.

^a 16 Thus did Moses: ^paccording to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he.

^a 17 And it came to pass, in the first month, in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the ^qtabernacle was reared up.

^a 18 And Moses ^rreared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars.

^a 19 And he ^sspread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 20 And he took and put the ^ttestimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the ^umercy-seat above upon the ark:

^a 21 And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and ^vset up the vail of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 22 And he ^wput the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the vail.

^a 23 And he set the bread in order upon it, before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

^a 24 And he put the ^xcandlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.

^a 25 And he lighted the lamps before the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 26 And he ^yput the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the vail:

^a 27 And he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 28 And he set up the ^zhanging at the door of the tabernacle.

^a 29 And he ^{aa}put the altar of burnt-offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and offered upon it the burnt-offering and the meat-offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 30 And he set ^{ab}the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there to wash ^{ac}withal.

^a 31 And Moses, and Aaron, and his sons, ^{ad}washed their hands and their feet thereat.

^a 32 When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^a 33 And he ^{ae}reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the ^{af}hanging of the court-gate. So Moses finished the work.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIX.—How honourable is the livery of ministers and believers—but how much more the glory of Immanuel, our Great High Priest! Great things may quickly be done in the church when ALL hearts and hands are active. And it is pleasant and profitable when every thing answers to the commandments of God: it is necessary therefore to try our whole work after it is finished, as well as while it is carrying forward; so shall our labour not be in vain in the Lord.

CHAP. XL. Ver. 1—33. The form of the tabernacle when erected was as follows: The court was sixty-one yards long, and half as much in breadth. It was inclosed by a linen hanging of about nine feet in height, suspended by silver hooks, on fifty-six brazen pillars, filleted with silver, and fixed in large sockets of brass. The only entrance, from the east, was twelve yards wide, and hung over with a fine vail of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars. Here, under the open sky, stood the brazen altar and laver; and hither every clean Hebrew or proselyte might come with his oblations. At the west end of this court stood the tabernacle itself; a close tent, in the form of a house, standing with its end towards the east. It was about eighteen and one-fourth yards long, six and one-twelfth broad, and as much in height. It was reared with forty-eight boards of shittim-wood, overlaid with gold, and fixed at bottom in ninety-six large sockets of silver, and bound together with five cross bars of the same materials. On this frame was suspended a fourfold covering.—The innermost consisted of ten embroidered linen curtains, each about seventeen yards in length, and about two and one half yards in breadth, coupled with taches, or buttons of gold. Over this was a covering of eleven curtains of goats' hair, coupled with taches of brass; the next was of rams' skins dyed red; the uppermost was of a strong leather, called badgers' skins. The whole east end was an entrance, and hung over with a fine vail of embroidered linen, suspended on five pillars, or boards, by golden hooks; and just before it, in the court, stood the brazen altar and laver. This tent was distinguished into two apartments: The first, or holy place, was in length twelve yards and six inches; into which only the clean priests might enter. At the inner or west end of it stood the golden candlestick, altar of incense, and table of shew-bread. The second, or most holy place, or oracle, was at the west end of the former, and separated from it by a fine vail of embroidered linen, suspended on four pillars, fixed erect in large sockets of silver. It was a square of ninety-six yards and three inches. Here, amidst gross darkness, at the west end, was set the ark covered by the mercy-seat, and overshadowed by the golden cherubims; between which hovered the shechinah, or cloud of the divine presence. The tables of the law were put into the ark. The golden pot of manna, Aaron's rod that budded, and a copy of the law of Moses, were afterwards repositied at the east or foreside of the ark. Into this apartment the high-priest alone entered, and he only upon the fast of geaeral expiation, and perhaps four times that day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XL.—It is comely when new years are commenced with remarkable transactions for God, and when every thing is perdren of Israel went onward in all their journeys:

37 But if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up.

38 For the cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.

formed and placed in due order; for God is ready to meet such as are occupied in his service, and remember him in all their ways. Desolate and dreary are ordinances if without the presence of God; but if the Spirit of God and of glory rest upon us we may be well comforted, for God is with us and for us; and who then can be against us? But was not this reared tabernacle a type of our vnce apparently mean but truly glorious Redeemer, in his manhood and mediatorial office; devised of God, and reared up with infinite skill; consecrated by the oil of the Holy Ghost, and his own bloody sufferings! In him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead. He is the mean of all our fellowship with God; and the treasury of all that atonement, purification, light, food, intercession, and acceptance, which is necessary for our souls. In his debased state he was made the atonement, the laver of purification; in his exalted state he is the eternal rest of JEHOVAH, and the enlightener, advocate, and feeder, of his people. Was it not likewise a figure of the gospel-church, planned by the wisdom of God, and reared up by inspired ministers of Christ! Outwardly mean, but inwardly glorious, she is the residence of God in Christ; and in her he is worshipped in an acceptable manner. In her a fulness of atonement, purification, spirit, light, and provision, of acceptable prayers, praises, and services, are to be found. Was it not a figure of heaven itself, where all its emblems are realized, and in which Jesus, JEHOVAH, and every thing substantial, are to be found in the most eminent degree!

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

LEVITICUS.

This book, so called from its connection with the Levitical tribe, contains the laws which God intimated to Moses from off the mercy-seat during the first month after the tabernacle was erected; viz. (1) Laws relative to sacred oblations, burnt-offerings, meat-offerings, peace-offerings, sin-offerings, trespass-offerings; i—vii. (2) The history of the consecration of Aaron and his sons, and the death of the two eldest; laws concerning priests' mourning, and abstinence from liquor; viii—x. Whatever this book, or some parts thereof, may appear to an ignorant and carnal mind,—to such as are truly sensible and evangelical, it is a rich, though obscure, mine of the gospel of Christ, typically exhibiting him as the Great High-priest, called and prepared of God for his work; exhibiting his sacrifice in its nature and form; and its influence, as appeasing the wrath of God, expiating the curse of sin, procuring peace to the mind, quieting the guilty conscience, nourishing the soul, and purifying the heart;—exhibiting the gospel-method of cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh or spirit, inherent or contracted, by due applications of his blood and Spirit: and, in fine, exhibiting the necessity of abstaining from sin, in all its forms, appearances, and temptations: of exact attendance on instituted means of grace, and of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 2—9. The Jewish oblations, in their matter and ceremonies, were not only typical of Christ, but most of them also emblems of the moral duties of Christians, whether ministers or people.—The matter of the offerings pointed at qualities in Christ, or in his people and their service. The male sex figured out the excellency of these; the being without blemish their purity; the voluntariness, the willingness and cheerfulness with which God must be served. The presenting at the door of the tabernacle in ordinary cases, (for in extraordinary ones it might be otherwise, 1 Sam. vii. 9. and xi. 15. 2 Sam. xxiv. 18. 1 Kings viii. 64. and xviii. 32. 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man of you bring an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

3 ¶ If his offering be a burnt-sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the taberimported the acceptableness to be through the person and mediation of Christ. The laying on of the offerer's hand imported the transferring of guilt on the sacrifice, and devoting it to God. The sprinkling of the blood round about the altar imported the divinity of Christ's atonement, and the extensive virtue of it, to all the church and ordinances thereof. The washing of the inwards and legs imports the perfect holiness of heart and life in Christ, and which ought to be in his people. The burning of the whole flesh imported that Christ was, and his people ought to be, wholly devoted to God. The holy fire denoted the wrath of God on Christ, and holy love in him and in his people.

nacle of the congregation before the LORD.

4 And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt-offering; and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him.

5 And he shall kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And he shall flay the burnt-offering, and cut it into his pieces.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:

9 But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt-sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.

11 And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar:

12 And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:

13 But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if the burnt-sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtle-doves, or of young pigeons.

15 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar:

16 And he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east-part, by the place of the ashes:

17 And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall not divide it asunder: and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: it is a burnt-sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

CHAP. II.

Here God (1) prescribes the matter and manner of those meat-offerings which were offered by themselves, and not as appendages of animal oblations; viz. that they should consist of raw flour, with incense, oil, and salt; or of flour, oil, and salt, baked or fried; but never have honey or leaven in them: and that, a little of them being burnt on the altar to the Lord, the rest should be given to the officiating priest for food; 1—13. (2) Directs concerning the appointed or voluntary offering of first-fruits; 12—16.

AND when any will offer a meat-offering unto the LORD, his offering shall be of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it, and put frankincense thereon:

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereof his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn the memorial of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

3 And the remnant of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons: it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

4 ¶ And if thou bring an oblation of a meat-offering baked in the oven, it shall be unleavened cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, or unleavened wafers anointed with oil.

5 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baked in a pan, it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil.

6 Thou shalt part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat-offering.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat-offering baked in the frying-pan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat-offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat-offering a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 And that which is left of the meat-offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat-offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with Lord, as an holy sacrifice, acceptable through Jesus Christ. Washed in every part, may my whole soul be inflamed with the sacred fire, the love of God shed abroad in my heart by the Holy Ghost! May an holy and prudent zeal for the Lord consume and burn up every selfish care and inward corruption; and influence me earnestly to lay out all my gifts and graces in winning poor sinners to a God in Christ!

CHAP. II. Ver. 2. This memorial put God, as it were, in mind of his covenant, to accept Christ, and his people's services through him. And it put them in mind that all their store came from God, and ought to be dedicated to his service.

Ver. 3. The most holy provision allotted for the priests was to be eaten by themselves in the sacred courts; but the less holy things, as tithes, first-fruits, &c. might be eaten by them and their families elsewhere in Canaan; Num. xviii. 9, 10. Deut. xii. 5—7. &c.

Ver. 11. Leaven was forbidden in voluntary meat-offerings; (1) To put them in remembrance of their hasty redemption from Egypt; (2) To teach them to avoid human inventions in the worship of God; (3) To mark the perfect purity of Christ, and the sincerity of his people's services. Honey was prohibited for much the same reason; for it hath a leavening virtue, and may signify carnal pleasures.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—In the oblation of these valuable, social, patient, pure, and peaceful animals, let me behold my all-excellent, social, patient, peaceful, and holy Redeemer, as presented before God in the council of peace, brought into this world, and in due time presented at Jerusalem; as having our sins imputed to him by his Father; and as offered by himself a sweet-smelling sacrifice, without spot, unto God, to vindicate and glorify his injured perfections, and to expiate our sin! How willingly he presented himself! How painful and dolorous were his sufferings, and chiefly those of his soul, while his love to us made him to lie in the flames of his Father's wrath, bearing our sins! He expired on a cross, on the north-west of Jerusalem, and extends the virtue of his death chiefly to the north-west parts of the world! For us, poor and destitute criminals, he exerted all his care; suffered his soul and body to be divided asunder; but neither separated from his Godhead! And, after lying in his grave, he put off every mark of mortality and guilt, and ascends to his throne on the right hand of God. What precious meat and drink-offerings of blessings and comfort to himself and to my soul do attend this oblation!—Let me therefore, all inflamed with his dying love, cheerfully render to the Lord the best that I have. Acknowledging myself the servant of death, and rejoicing that Jesus has borne my sins and guilt, let me, though unworthy to enter into God's house, offer my whole self and all that I have to the

Ver. 13. Salt was an emblem of sincerity and soundness in grace; purity, perseverance, and friendship; and of the perpetuity of God's covenant.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—While in these meat-offerings I contemplate Jesus Christ as the fruit of the earth, prepared by the anointing influence of the Holy Ghost, and by dolorous sufferings, to be, as Mediator, the eternal delight of JEHOVAH, and the delicate provision of his ransomed people, in a state of sacerdotal and holy fellowship with him, and the everlasting remembrancer of both, let me, receiving of the Spirit of Christ, with solemn prayer, and heart-burning affection, surrender myself to God through him, as a memorial that I was chosen from everlasting, and shall to eternity enjoy God as my ALL and IN ALL! Let me avoid infectious corruptions, carnal pleasures, and human inventions, in the worship of God; and have always my thoughts, my speech, and my practice, seasoned with the purifying salt of spiritual grace! And, while I take care to allow the ministers of the Lord their due, let me, in an especial manner, consecrate the days of my youth, and the first-fruits of all my increase, unto Jesus Christ their Master!

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Peace-offerings were offered; (1) To obtain some blessing desired; or (2) To thank God for some mercy received. And, as they respected the offerer's own advantage, he was allowed to offer either male or female.

Ver. 3. Here only the fat or tallow was the Lord's portion; the officiating leaven: for ye shall burn no leaven, nor any honey, in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

12 ¶ As for the oblation of the first-fruits, ye shall offer them unto the LORD; but they shall not be burnt on the altar* for a sweet savour.

13 ¶ And every oblation of thy meat-offering shalt thou season with salt: neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat-offering: with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt.

14 ¶ And if thou offer a meat-offering of thy first-fruits unto the LORD, thou shalt offer for the meat-offering of thy first-fruits green ears of corn dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of full ears.

15 And thou shalt put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon: it is a meat-offering.

16 And the priest shall burn the memorial of it, part of the beaten corn thereof, and part of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

CHAP. III.

(1) Prescribes the matter of peace-offerings; viz. bullocks, heifers, sheep, goats, male or female; and gives rules for presenting, killing, sprinkling the blood or burning the fat, in offerings from the herd; 1—5; or from the flock of sheep or goats; 6—16. (2) Prohibits the eating of fat or blood; 17.

AND if his oblation be a sacrifice of a peace-offering, if he offer it of the herd, whether it be a male or female, he shall offer it without blemish before the LORD.

2 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons the priests shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

3 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace-offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

5 And Aaron's sons shall burn it on the altar upon the burnt-sacrifice, which is upon the wood that is on the fire: it is an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And if his offering for a sacrifice of peace-offering unto the LORD be of the flock, male or female, he shall offer it without blemish.

7 If he offer a lamb for his offering, then shall he offer it before the LORD.

8 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle the blood thereof round about the altar.

9 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace-offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD: the fat thereof, and the whole rump, it shall he take off hard by the back-bone; and the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards;

10 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

11 And the priest shall burn it upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire unto the LORD.

12 ¶ And if his offering be a goat, then he shall offer it before the LORD.

13 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of it, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle the blood thereof upon the altar round about.

14 And he shall offer thereof his offering, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

15 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savour: all the fat is the LORD's.

17 It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither fat nor blood.

CHAP. IV.

Prescribes the matter of sin-offering for crimes committed through ignorance; and directs how to present, kill, sprinkle the blood, or burn the flesh or fat of (1) The bullock for a priest, or the occasional sin of the congregation; 1—12, 13—21. (2) The male kid for a ruler; 22—26. (3) A female kid for a private person; 27—35.

priest had the breast, the right shoulder, the cheeks, and the maw; chap. vii. 30 to 32. Deut. xviii. 3; and the offerer had the rest to feast upon with his friends; chap. vii. 15, 16.

Ver. 5. It was to be burnt upon the burnt-sacrifice, to mark that we are first to be reconciled to God by the death of Christ, before any of our services can be accepted.

Ver. 17. They were prohibited to eat fat or blood; (1) To teach them to beware of inhuman cruelties; (2) To exercise them in obedience, self-denial, and mortification, of their appetites; (3) To direct them to consider their redemption as obtained only by the blood, and their sanctification effected by the Spirit, of Christ, and not of themselves.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Still in these peace-offerings I behold Jesus, the Son of God and seed of the woman, making peace for men with God, by the blood of his cross, the travail of his soul; and obtaining eternal redemption for us. Let me learn then to thank God for every mercy received, and seek every blessing which I need, through Jesus' atonement, surrendering my soul wholly to his service and honour; so shall I at once be a sweet savour to my God, the rejoicing of ministers, and a comfort to myself and my friends. But never let me dare to make use of any thing relating to the Lord, and exhibiting his Christ, as if it were a common thing, or forget the smallest of his injunctions; but receive his truth in love, and diligently observe his precepts.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin ^athrough ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them :

3 If the ^bpriest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people ; then let him bring for his sin, which he hath sinned, a ^cyoung bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin-offering.

4 And he shall ^dbring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD ; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall ^etake of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times ^fbefore the LORD, before the vail of the sanctuary.

7 And the priest shall put ^gsome of the blood ^hupon the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tabernacle of the congregation ; and shall ⁱpour all the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt-offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And he shall take off from it all the ^jfat of the bullock for the sin-offering ; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

9 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away ;

10 As it was taken off from the bullock of the sacrifice of peace-offerings : and the priest shall burn them upon the altar of the burnt-offering.

11 ^kAnd the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, and with his legs, and his inwards, and his dung, 12 Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth ^lwithout the camp unto a clean place, where the ashes are poured out, and burn him on the wood with fire : ^mwhere the ashes are poured out shall he be burnt.

13 ¶ And if the whole congregation of Israel sin ⁿthrough ignorance, and the thing be hid from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done ^osome what against any of the commandments of the LORD, concerning things which should not be done, and are guilty ;

14 When the sin which they have sinned against it is known, then the congregation shall offer a ^pyoung bullock for the sin, and ^qbring him before the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And ^rthe elders of the congregation shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock before the LORD : and the bullock shall be killed before the LORD.

16 And the priest that is anointed shall bring of the bullock's blood to the tabernacle of the congregation :

17 ^sAnd the priest shall dip his finger ^tin some of the blood, and sprinkle it seven times before the LORD, even before the vail.

18 And he shall put ^usome of the blood upon the horns of the altar ^vwhich is before the LORD, that is in the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall pour out all the blood at the bottom of the altar of the burnt-offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

19 And he shall take all his ^wfat from him, and burn it upon the altar.

20 And he shall do with the bullock as he did with the bullock for a sin-offering, so shall he do with this : and ^xthe priest shall make an atonement for them, and ^yit shall be forgiven them.

21 And he shall carry forth the bullock without the camp, and burn him as he burned the first bullock : it is a ^zsin-offering for the congregation.

22 ¶ When a ^{aa}ruler hath sinned, and done ^{ab}some what through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD his God concerning things which should not be done, and is guilty ;

23 Or if his sin, wherein he hath sinned, come to his knowledge ; he shall bring his offering, a ^{ac}kid of the goats, a male without blemish :

24 And ^{ad}he shall lay his hand upon the head of the goat, and kill it in ^{ae}the place where they kill the burnt-offering before the LORD : ^{af}it is a sin-offering.

25 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it ^{ag}upon the horns of the altar of burnt-offering, and shall pour out his blood at the bottom of the altar of burnt-offering.

26 And he shall burn all his fat upon the altar, as the ^{ah}fat of the sacrifice of peace-offerings : and the priest shall make an atonement for him as concerning his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

27 ¶ And if ^{ai}any one of the ^{aj}common people sin through ignorance, while he doth ^{ak}some what against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and be guilty ;

28 Or if his sin, which he hath sinned, come to his knowledge : then he shall bring his offering, a ^{al}kid of the goats, a female without blemish, for his sin which he hath sinned.

CHAP. V.

Prescribes the matter, and directs the management, of trespass-offerings, which perhaps related to particular cases, excepted from the general rules of sin-offerings. (1) In several cases the offering was to be a lamb or kid; 1—6. (2) If the offender was poor, two doves were required; 7—10; or, if he was very poor, only an omer of fine flour; 11—13. But, (3) for sacrifice, committed through ignorance, it was to be a ram; 14—17.

AND if a ^asoul sin, and ^bhear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear ^chis iniquity.

2 Or if a soul ^dtouch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcase of an unclean beast, or a carcase of unclean cattle, or the carcase of unclean creeping things, and if it be ^ehidden from him; he also shall be ^funclean, and guilty.

3 Or if he touch the ^guncleanness of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty.

4 Or if a soul ^hswear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these.

5 And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall ⁱconfess that he hath sinned in that thing:

6 And he shall bring his ^ktrespass-offering unto the LORD for his sin which he hath sinned, a female from the flock, a lamb or a kid of the goats, for a sin-offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his sin.

7 ¶ And if ^lhe be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring for his trespass, which he hath committed, ^mtwo turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, unto the LORD; one ⁿfor a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering.

8 And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer ^othat which is for the sin-offering first, and ^pwring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder:

9 And he shall ^qsprinkle of the blood of the sin-offering upon the side of the altar; and ^rthe rest of the blood shall be wrung out at the bottom of the altar: it is a sin-offering.

10 And he shall ^soffer the second for a burnt-offering, according to the manner: and the priest shall make an atonement for him, for his sin which he hath sinned, and it shall be forgiven him.

11 ¶ But if he be not able to bring two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the ^ttenth part of an ephah of ^ufine flour for a sin-offering; he shall put ^vno oil upon it, neither shall he put ^wany frankincense thereon; for it is a sin-offering.

12 Then shall he bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take his handful of it, ^xeven a memorial thereof, and burn it on the altar, according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: it is a sin-offering.

13 ^yAnd the priest shall make an atonement for him as touching his sin that he hath sinned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven him: and ^zthe remnant shall be the priest's, as a meat-offering.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

15 If a soul commit a trespass, and sin ^athrough ignorance, in the holy things of the LORD; then he shall bring for his trespass unto the LORD a ^bram without blemish out of the flocks, ^cwith thy estimation by shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass-offering:

16 ^dAnd he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and shall add the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: and the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 ¶ ^eAnd if a soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; though he ^fwist it not, yet is he guilty, and shall bear his iniquity.

18 And he shall bring a ^gram without

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—In these offerings Jesus is yet represented as the strong and patient fatling; as the Lamb of God, and yet in the likeness of sinful flesh; laden with my imputed transgressions, and suffering the punishment thereof in his whole man, but chiefly in his soul, that I through him may obtain forgiveness. While I here discover how sin is aggravated, according to the station or number of the offenders, let me especially reflect how criminal and odious that must be which cannot be remitted without shedding of blood—the blood of God! How tremendous the justice of God, that can by no means clear the guilty! Let me, with the priests, never attempt to gain pleasure or profit by my sins; but, whenever I find myself guilty of evil, let there be an immediate application to Jesus, as made sin for me that I might be made the righteousness of God in him.

blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass-offering, unto the priest: and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist it not, and it shall be forgiven him.

19 It is a trespass-offering: he hath certainly trespassed against the LORD.

CHAP. VI.

Prescribes (1) Restitution, with a ram for a trespass-offering, in cases of common dishonesty; 1—7.—[This ought to have been placed in the preceding chapter.] (2) Returns to prescribe further laws concerning the offerings formerly directed; as, (1) That the ashes of the burnt-offerings should be removed from the brazen altar, and the sacred fire be perpetually kept burning on it; 8—13. (2) That the part of the people's meat-offerings, which was not burnt to the Lord, should be food for the priests; and the priests' meat-offering wholly burnt; 14—23. (3) That the flesh of sin-offerings of particular persons, except of priests, or of goat sin-offerings for the people, except of that on the day of expiation, should be food for the priests; the utensils in which it was boiled should be purified, and nothing of the blood carried without the court; 24—30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 If a soul sin, and commit a trespass against the LORD, and lie unto his neighbour in that which was delivered him to keep, or in fellowship, or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath deceived his neighbour;

3 Or have found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doth, sinning therein;

4 Then it shall be, because he hath sinned and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found,

5 Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, || §in the day of his trespass-offering.

6 And he shall bring his trespass-offering unto the LORD, a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass-offering, unto the priest:

7 And the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD: and it shall be forgiven him for any thing of all that he hath done in trespassing therein.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

9 Command Aaron and his sons, saying, This is the law of the burnt-offering. It is the burnt-offering, because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it.

10 And the priest shall put on his linen garment, and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath consumed with the burnt-offering on the altar, and he shall put them beside the altar.

11 And he shall put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes without the camp unto a clean place.

12 And the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall burn wood on it every morning, and lay the burnt-offering in order upon it; and he shall burn thereon the fat of the peace-offerings.

13 The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out.

14 ¶ And this is the law of the meat-offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD, before the altar.

15 And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat-offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat-offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even the memorial of it unto the LORD.

16 And the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: with unleavened bread shall it be eaten in the holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it.

17 It shall not be baken with leaven. I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire: it is most holy, as is the sin-offering, and as the trespass-offering.

18 All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire: every one that toucheth them shall be holy.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

20 This is the offering of Aaron and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD in the day when he is anointed; the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a meat-offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night.

21 In a pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baken thou shalt bring it in: and the baken pieces of the meat-offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

22 And the priest of his sons that is anointed in his stead shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD; it shall be wholly burnt:

23 *For every meat-offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt; it shall not be eaten.

24 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

25 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, saying, This is the law of the sin-offering: In the place where the burnt-offering is killed shall the sin-offering be killed before the LORD: it is most holy.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—How necessary it is to have a particular sight and sense of our sins! It therefore becomes us to keep an universal guard over all the powers of our soul and members of our body; and over none more than our tongue. Grievous is the crime of robbing God and his ministers! And, however mortifying, an honest restitution is necessary. Nor have we any reason to believe our crime pardoned while we retain the wages of unrighteousness; for all sin is unsavoury to the truly penitent soul! But bless the Lord, O my soul, that the oblation of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God,—of Jesus, the corn of wheat,—suits every trespass which I can be guilty of! Bless him that herein provision is made for the vilest sinner of mankind, and the poorest mortal upon earth; and that poverty is no bar in our way to heaven through him, nor our access to the God of heaven. Meanwhile, let me take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my heart, my hand, or my tongue; since nothing less than the blood of God can expiate the most unwitting and involuntary mistake!

LIKEWISE this is the °law of the trespass-offering: °it is most holy.

2 In the °place where they kill the burnt-offering shall they kill the trespass-offering: and the blood thereof shall he °sprinkle round about upon the altar.

3 And he shall offer of it °all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away:

5 And the priest shall °burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass-offering.

6 °Every male among the priests shall eat thereof: it shall be eaten in the holy place: °it is most holy.

7 As the °sin-offering is, so is the trespass-offering: there is one law for them: the priest that maketh atonement there-with shall have it.

8 And the priest that offereth any man's burnt-offering, even the priest shall have to himself the °skin of the burnt-offering which he hath offered.

9 And all the °meat-offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the frying-pan, and in the pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it.

10 And every meat-offering, mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, °one as much as another.

11 ¶ And this is the °law of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he shall offer unto the LORD.

12 If he offer it °for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving °unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried.

13 Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering °leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace-offerings.

14 And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an °heave-offering unto the LORD, and it shall °be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace-offerings.

15 And the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings for thanksgiving shall be eaten °the same day that it is offered: he shall not leave any of it until the morning.

16 But if the sacrifice of his offering be a °vow, or a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice: and on the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten:

17 But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice on the °third day shall be burnt with fire.

18 And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings be eaten at all on the third day, °it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an abomination, and the soul that eateth of it °shall bear his iniquity.

19 And the flesh °that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire: and, as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

20 But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, that pertain unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul shall °be cut off from his people.

21 °Moreover the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as the uncleanness of man, or any unclean beast, or any abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, °Ye shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat.

24 And the fat of the beast that °dieth

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Behold the criminal and odious nature of dishonesty in God's sight! No forgiveness thereof even through the blood of Jesus, is to be expected, but in the way of restoring that which hath been unjustly acquired. While, therefore, I take heed to put far away my corruptions, and to put due honour upon the ordinances of God, let love to him perpetually burn in my heart, as the effect of his everlasting love to me; nor let any human invention be ever mixed with my worship of him. The Lord's ministers should be always duly, though not nicely, supported. But let them never expect profit or subsistence by their sins, or attempt to expiate them; let the whole guilt thereof terminate upon Jesus, who finished transgression, and made an end of sin: and let them gratefully serve him as their great High Priest. While I perceive the insufficiency of these legal oblations, which even produced and transmitted uncleanness, I would reverence the blood of my Redeemer, and hope that, when my earthly tabernacle shall be dissolved, by the effectual application thereof I shall be presented without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, in the presence of his heavenly Father.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 13. The prohibition of leaven, in chap. ii. 11. related only to things burnt upon the altar; but did not prohibit the offering of leavened bread for the priest's food. (2) This was a thank-offering to God for blessings, of which leavened bread was one. And it might denote that God rejects not the grateful services of his people, though tainted and mingled with corruption.

Ver. 15. This intimated that Christ and his grace should be received without delay, and with thanksgiving speedily returned; and it also prompted them to invite the poor, or strangers, to share in the entertainment.

of itself, and the fat of that which is torn of beasts, may be used in any other use: but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be cut off from his people.

26 ^aMoreover ye shall eat no manner of blood*, whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings.

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

29 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace-offerings unto the LORD shall bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings.

30 His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire, the fat with the breast; it shall he bring, that ^kthe breast may be waved for a wave-offering before the LORD.

31 And the priest shall burn the ^lfat upon the altar: but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'.

32 And the right shoulder shall ye give unto the priest for an ^mheave-offering of the sacrifices of your peace-offerings.

33 He among the sons of Aaron that offereth the blood of the peace-offerings, and the fat, shall have the ⁿright shoulder for his part.

34 For the wave-breast and the heave-shoulder have I taken of the children of Israel from off the sacrifices of their peace-offerings, and have given them unto Aaron the priest and unto his sons by a statute for ever from among the children of Israel.

35 ¶ This is the portion of the ^oanointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons, out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire in the day when he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;

36 ^pWhich the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations.

37 ^qThis is the law of the burnt-offering, of the meat-offering, and of the sin-offering, and of the trespass-offering, and of the consecrations, and of the sacrifice of the peace-offerings;

38 Which the LORD commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he commanded the children of Israel to offer their ^roblations unto the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai.

CHAP. VIII.

Records the consecration of Aaron and his sons to their priestly office, as prescribed in Exod. xxix. 1-37. (1) The candidate's vestments, oil, and oblations, are got ready; and the Hebrews are assembled to witness it; 1-5. (2) Aaron and his four sons are washed, and dressed in sacred robes; 6-9, 13. (3) The tabernacle, with its utensils, and then the priests to serve in it, are anointed with sacred oil; 10-12. (4) A sin-offering, the flesh of which was burnt without the camp, and a burnt-offering, are offered for them; 14-21. (5) A consecration-ram, or peace-offering, being offered, the blood thereof, along with sacred oil, is sprinkled on the tip of their right ears, thumbs, and toes, and on their garments: the offerer's part of the flesh is given them to feast upon; while Moses, who for the occasion officiated as priest, hath the priest's portion; 22-32. (6) These ceremonies and oblations are repeated seven days successively; 33-36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Take Aaron and his sons with him, and ^athe garments, and ^bthe anointing oil, and a bullock for the sin-offering, and ^ctwo rams, and a basket of unleavened bread:

3 And gather thou all the congregation together unto the ^ddoor of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, ^fThis is the thing which the LORD commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, ^gand washed them with water.

7 And ^hhe put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith.

8 And he ⁱput the breast-plate upon him: also he put in the breast-plate the Urim and the Thummim.

9 And he ^kput the mitre upon his head; also upon the mitre, even upon his fore front, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD commanded Moses.

10 And Moses took the ^lanointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

11 And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

12 And he ^mpoured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him.

13 And Moses ⁿbrought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Ministers of the gospel ought to be plentifully supplied with every thing necessary and agreeable. And the more diligent any are in the services of religion, the more abundantly will they reap the advantages thereof. What glorious reward to himself, and redemption to his people, doth Jesus procure by his all-comprehending oblation! What robes! what delicious provision! May I and my friends share with him in his abundant nourishment and consolation! And let me not only timely perform my vows, but, where I am left most at liberty, let me with cheerfulness give to the Lord. As there is no medium between God's acceptance and abhorrence of my works, let me examine myself, and take heed to my steps. Let my receiving and feeding upon Jesus be as early, and earnest, and social, as possible; and let me, by an after-improvement of divine ordinances, obtain the real benefit thereof. Never let me attempt to live in sinful pollutions along with feasting on Christ! But always beware of a licentious appetite after things prohibited of God. And, while I manifest the utmost regard to Jesus and his atonement, let me, as a ransomed priest, feed upon him as my portion; feed upon his dearest love and choicest supports; always eyeing the grant, appointment, and command, of God as the rule and reason of my conduct.

the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it.

16 And he took all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burned it upon the altar.

17 But the bullock and his hide, his flesh and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD commanded Moses.

18 ¶ And he brought the ram for the burnt-offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

19 And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

20 And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat.

21 And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt-sacrifice for a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

23 And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

24 And he brought Aaron's sons; and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ear, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

25 And he took the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys and their fat, and the right shoulder:

26 And out of the basket of unleavened bread, that was before the LORD, he took one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder:

27 And he put all upon Aaron's hands, and upon his sons' hands, and waved them for a wave-offering before the LORD.

28 And Moses took them from off their hands, and burnt them on the altar upon the burnt-offering: they were consecrations for a sweet savour: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

29 And Moses took the breast, and waved it for a wave-offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' part; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 And Moses took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

31 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.

32 And that which remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.

33 And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for seven days shall he consecrate you.

34 As he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

36 So Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. IX.

Here, (1) Moses, directed by God, calls the priests and elders of the people to meet together, with their offerings, before the Lord on the eighth day, in hopes of a visit from him; 1-7. (2) The assembly being convened, Aaron, as appointed, offers a sin-offering and burnt-offering for himself and his sons; and a sin-offering, burnt-offering, meat-offering, and peace-offering, for the people, whom he then blessed; 7-22. (3) While Moses and Aaron return out of the tabernacle, and again bless the people, the glory of the Lord appears, and a fire from heaven consumes the burnt-offerings, and the fat of the other offerings which lay on the brazen altar; 23, 24. This fire was to be preserved for use in all their after-oblations.

AND it came to pass on the eighth day, that Moses called Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel;

2 And he said unto Aaron, Take thee a young calf for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin-offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt-offering;

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace-offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD; and a meat-offering mingled with oil: for to-day the LORD will appear unto you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Behold how exactly every thing in Jesus Christ, and his gospel-church, answers to the purposes of God, declared in the promises and predictions of his word! Before angels and men he is called to, prepared for, and solemnly set apart to, his Mediatorial work! Holy, harmless, and undefiled, he steps forth, vested by his Father in a marvellous manhood and Mediatorial function. Anointed with the Holy Ghost above measure, sanctified by his own blood, and made perfect through suffering, he himself and his Father rejoice in his office and his execution of it. And the tabernacle of his body the church, and all instituted ordinances, are, together with him, consecrated to the service of God by his oblation, blood, and Spirit. Let ministers of the gospel learn with what solemn and deliberate preparation they ought to enter on their work. Let every saint observe what solemn washing in the fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness, what putting on of the Lord Jesus, what sprinkling of his blood and Spirit, what feasting on his flesh as meat indeed, what self-dedication, what mortification of inward lusts during their whole week of life, are necessary to prepare them for their sacerdotal service in the house eternal in the heavens!

5 And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation: and all the congregation drew near and stood before the LORD.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do: and the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and offer thy sin-offering and thy burnt-offering, and make an atonement for thyself and for the people: and offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin-offering, which was for himself.

9 And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him: and he dipped his finger in the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar.

10 But the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver, of the sin-offering, he burnt upon the altar; as the LORD commanded Moses.

11 And the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.

12 And he slew the burnt-offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

13 And they presented the burnt-offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head; and he burnt them upon the altar.

14 And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt-offering on the altar.

15 ¶ And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin-offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

16 And he brought the burnt-offering, and offered it according to the manner.

17 And he brought the meat-offering, and took an handful thereof, and burnt it upon the altar, beside the burnt-sacrifice in the morning.

18 He slew also the bullock and the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump, and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver:

20 And they put the fat upon the breasts, and he burnt the fat upon the altar:

21 And the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved for a wave-offering ing before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

22 And Aaron lifted up his hand towards the people, and blessed them, and came down from offering of the sin-offering, and the burnt-offering, and peace-offerings, 23 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out, and blessed the people: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

24 And there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt-offering and the fat: which when all the people saw they shouted, and fell on their faces.

CHAP. X.

The making and worshipping of an idol calf, in opposition to JEHOVAH, newly manifested as their God, and to his law as their rule, had lately retarded the erection of the tabernacle. Now the preference of strange or common fire to the newly-granted sacred fire interrupts the Levitical institutions. Here is, (1) The sin and fearful death of Aaron's two eldest sons, their father's composure of spirit, and the divine orders given and observed about the funerals and mourning; 1—7. (2) To prevent such profanation for the future, the priests are forbidden to drink any intoxicating liquor while they attend their sacred work; 8—11. (3) Moses repeats the orders for Aaron and his remaining sons to eat their share of the late oblations; and receives Aaron's excuse for burning instead of eating their share of the people's sin-offering; 12—20.

AND Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not.

2 And there went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them, and they died before the LORD.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the LORD spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron held his peace.

4 And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar his sons, Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes; lest ye die, and lest wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

7 And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: for the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—Here also I behold my Redeemer offering up himself a sacrifice without spot unto God, to expiate sin, glorify God, and procure provision and peace to his people, I behold him, again and again, blessing his chosen: I discern the Almighty Father kindling his indignation against him and kindly accepting his oblation in our stead. While I adore his grace and kindness, let me learn likewise a lesson of diligence and obedience. If I desire the benefit and comfort of divine appearances I must attend upon divine ordinances: there no religious service can be acceptable to God till the guilt of my sin be removed by an actual interest in the great propitiation; and all therefore, but especially ministers, ought to begin their religion at themselves. God's presence in ordinances effectually attests them to be his. Displays of his divine glory ought to be entertained with joyful gratitude and holy reverence; and the fire of God's Spirit being once granted, to inflame our affections and consume our corruptions, must be cherished and supported with the daily fuel of meditation and prayer.

CHAP. XI.

The Israelites being rendered a holy people, separated to the service of God, and yet but babes, here, (1.) God prescribes their diet; what cattle, fishes, fowls, and creeping things, they might eat of, and what not; all which figuratively pointed out what manner of persons they might or might not safely make their patterns and intimate companions. Such cattle only as chewed the cud and divided the hoof were clean; 1—8: such fishes only as had fins and scales were clean; 9—12: fowls, ravens, solitary, impure feeders, and such as the heathens had judged ominous, were unclean; 13—19: all flying insects, except those of the locust-kind, and all creeping things, were unclean; 20—24, 28, 29, 41, 42. (2) He prescribes how far the carcasses of unclean animals extended their ceremonial pollution, and the manner of purification therefrom by washing; 24—40. (3) He declares their relation to himself as a leading reason of their cleanliness in diet and holiness in conversation; 43—47. Compare Deut. xiv.

AND the LORD spake unto ^aMoses, and to Aaron, saying unto them,

2 Speak ^aunto the children of Israel, saying, ^aThese are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

3 ^aWhatsoever parteth the hoof, and is cloven-footed, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

4 Nevertheless, ^athese shall ye not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

5 And the coney, because he cheweth the cud but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

6 And the ^ahare, because he cheweth the cud but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And ^athe swine, though he divide the hoof, and be cloven-footed, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

8 Of ^atheir flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcase shall ye not touch; they are unclean to you.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: ^awhatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

10 And all ^athat have not fins and scales in the seas, and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an abomination to you:

11 They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcasses in abomination.

12 Whatsoever hath no fins nor scales in the waters, that shall be an abomination unto you.

13 ¶ And these are they which ye shall have in abomination among the fowls; they shall not be eaten, they are an abomination: ^athe eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray,

14 And the vulture, and the kite after his kind;

15 Every raven after his kind;

16 And the ^aowl, and the night-hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind, grace my spiritual unction with carnal cares, or the sorrow of the world, which worketh death. While my soul trembles at God's righteous judgments, never let my confusion occasion mistakes in any part of my duty: and, if I desire more of intimate fellowship with God, let me hearken to the voice of his messengers, and, after all interruptions, re-apply myself to my work.—Let ministers seriously ponder how dangerous it is to change God's ordinances even in the smallest circumstance; or to be animated to their work from earthly and carnal motives! Base and dangerous is it, especially for them, to be overcharged with surfeiting or drunkenness, and the cares of this life, in a work of such importance and concern, which requires the most faithful attention to reprove the sinner, to comfort the believer, and tenderly to regard the reasonable excuses of such whose minds are distressed!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Stand in awe, my soul, and sin not! Let no honours, no gifts, no graces, render thee proud or inattentive to God's institutions. Who can stand before this holy Lord God, the fire of whose zeal for his own institutions burns hottest the nearest to his altar! His noted favours and his tremendous judgments are often most closely connected: and, for the warning of others, he sometimes punishes the first transgressors with the most fearful severity, and deeply marks their sin in their punishment. How insufficient were the giving of the law, the typical tabernacle, or the ceremonial priesthood, to prevent either sins or judgments! When God severely afflicts me or mine, let me draw my heart-composing considerations from the word, the providence, the glory, of God as concerned in it; and never may my indulgence of private affection interfere with the honour or sovereign will of God, nor lead me to dis-

17 And the little owl, and the cormorant, and the great owl,

18 And the swan, and the pelican, and the gier-eagle, 19 And the stork, the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

20 All fowls that "creep, going upon all four, shall be an abomination unto you.

21 Yet these may ye eat of every flying creeping thing that goeth upon all four, which have legs above their feet, to leap withal upon the earth;

22 Even these of them ye may eat; the locust after his kind, and the bald locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind.

23 But all other flying creeping things, which have four feet, shall be an abomination unto you.

24 And for these ye shall be unclean: whosoever toucheth "the carcase of them shall be unclean until the even.

25 And whosoever beareth ought of the carcase of them shall "wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

26 The carcasses of every beast which divideth the hoof, and is not cloven-footed, nor cheweth the cud, are unclean unto you: every one that toucheth them shall be unclean.

27 And whatsoever "goeth upon his paws, among all manner of beasts that go on all four, those are unclean unto you: whoso toucheth their carcase shall be unclean until the even.

28 And he that beareth the carcase of them shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: they are unclean unto you.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the "creeping things that creep upon the earth; the weasel, and the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind,

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole:

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep: "whosoever doth touch them when they be dead shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be, wherein any work is done, it must be "put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel, whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and ye shall break it.

34 Of "all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean; and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcase falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, "they shall be broken down; for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless, a "fountain or pit, wherein there is "plenty of water, shall be clean; but that which toucheth their carcase shall be unclean.

37 And if any part of their carcase fall upon any "sowing-seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean;

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcase fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

39 And if any beast of which ye may eat die, he that "toucheth the carcase thereof shall be unclean until the even.

40 And he that "eateth of the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

41 And every "creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination; it shall not be eaten.

42 Whatsoever "goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever "hath more feet among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat, for they are an abomination.

43 Ye shall not make "yourselves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.

44 For "I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy; for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

45 For I am the LORD that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: "ye shall therefore be holy, for I am holy.

46 "This is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth:

47 To "make a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten.

CHAP. XII.

Here (1) God states the ceremonial uncleanness of women in childbirth; 1—5. (2) Prescribes the manner of purification from it, by a burnt-offering for thanksgiving, and a sin-offering for expiation; 6—8.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, and protected with Jesus' righteousness and grace, let me, by faith and love, swim against the tides of corruptions and troubles, avoiding intimacy with cruel, self-seeking, sensual, superstitious, and earthly-minded men, and even the most distant approaches and temptations to it. But, if at any time I be defiled therewith, without delay should I apply the cleansing blood and Spirit of Jesus Christ to my soul; bitterly lament that the infection will not be wholly extirpated till the evening-tide of my death; and, if I am the Lord's, diligently aim to be holy, as he is holy; and perfect, as my Father who is in heaven is perfect.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Highly it becomes me, as the servant of God, to live as one separated from the world to his service, always to follow his directions, whether with respect to soul or body, and to eat for health, not from lust. Let even my body therefore be carefully preserved as a temple of the Holy Ghost, while, in a becoming manner, I imitate these clean animals, and become not almost, but altogether, a Christian. Let me be addicted to meditation on the truths of God, which I have received for my spiritual food; and be steady in my steps, and inclined to render unto God and men their respective dues.—Cloathed

CHAP. XIII.

Here God prescribes (1) Rules by which the priests should judge whether persons were leprous or not. A swelling with a white spot bright and reddish, gave ground of suspicion, and required a second inspection: if, on the second inspection, the hair in the sore was become white or yellow; if the sore appeared deeper than the skin, and continued to spread; or if it had quick raw flesh in it; or if there was a white reddish sore in the bald head; the person was to be declared leprous.—But if, on the second inspection, the sore was not, in appearance, deeper than the skin; if it did not continue spreading, and had not turned the hair in it white or yellow; or if it had overspread the whole body with a leprous scurf; the person was to be held ceremonially clean; 1—44. (2) Rules for the behaviour and residence of lepers; 45, 46. (3) Rules for judging of, and extirpating, the leprosy from garments, a plague peculiar to the Hebrews; 47—59.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

* Or, swelling.

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a rising, a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like the plague of leprosy; then he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests:

3 And the priest shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh: and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy; and the priest shall look on him, and pronounce him unclean.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague seven days:

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin, then the priest shall shut him up seven days more.

6 And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean: it is but a scab: and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

7 But if the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again:

8 And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a leprosy.

9 ¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest:

10 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be quick raw flesh in the rising,

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up: for he is unclean.

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy cover all the skin of him that hath the plague from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: it is all turned white: he is clean.

14 But when raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean.

15 And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean: for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy.

16 Or if the raw flesh turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—What alarming stigmas the Lord put upon that sex by which sin entered into our race, till Jesus the woman's seed, had finished transgression! But, alas! sinful uncleanness cleaves to all, yea even to our most natural and necessary actions, and would for ever exclude us from fellowship with God in his ordinances, and in heaven, had not he sent forth his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, and the fountain opened to purge away our sin and our uncleanness. So infectious is original corruption; and so infinitely necessary is it to improve Jesus' atonement and purifying influence, while we thank him for his mercies, and devote ourselves to his service.—Let parents consider what gratitude, what thanksgiving, what solemn dedication of themselves and seed to God, ought to attend safe deliveries in child-birth; and how desirable, comfortable, and edifying, to have children early circumcised with the circumcision which is of Christ!

Before Christ 1490. it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the bile.

21 But if the priest look on it, and behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark, then the priest shall shut him up seven days :

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean : it is a plague.

23 But if the bright ^pspot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning bile ; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

24 ¶ Or if there be any flesh, in the skin whereof there is a † hot burning, and the quick flesh that burneth have a white bright spot, somewhat reddish, or white,

25 Then the priest shall look upon it : and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be ^qturned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin, it is a leprosy broken out of the burning ; wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean : it is the plague of leprosy.

26 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark, then the priest shall shut him up seven days :

27 And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day : and, if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean : it is the plague of leprosy.

28 And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark, it is a rising of the burning ; and the priest shall pronounce him clean ; for it is an inflammation of the burning.

29 ¶ If a man or woman have a plague upon the ^rhead or the beard, 30 Then the priest shall see the plague : and, behold, if it be in sight ^sdeeper than the skin, and there be in it a yellow thin hair, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean : it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it, then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days :

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague : and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no yellow hair, and the scall be not in sight deeper than the skin,

33 He shall be ^tshaven, but the scall shall he not shave ; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more :

34 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall : and, behold, if the scall be ^unot spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him clean ; and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean :

35 But if the scall ^vspread much in the skin after his cleansing, 36 Then the priest shall look on him : and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair ; he is unclean.

37 But if the scall be in his sight ^wat a stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein, the scall is healed, he is clean ; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

38 ¶ If a ^xman also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots, 39 Then the priest shall look : and, behold, if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white, it is a freckled spot that groweth in the skin ; he is clean.

40 And the man whose ^yhair is fallen off his head, he is bald ; yet is he clean.

41 And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead bald ; yet is he clean.

42 And if there be in the ^zbald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore ; it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead.

43 Then the priest shall look upon it : and, behold, if the rising of the sore be white reddish in his bald head, or in his bald forehead, as the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh, 44 He is a leprous man, he is unclean : the priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean ; his plague is in his head.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—In this filthy distemper, for which no cure but the power of God is prescribed, with shame and confusion of face I behold the penal, the dreadful, the defiling, the spreading and obstinate, nature of reigning corruptions; and how they exclude from fellowship with God and his people! Jealous of myself, it becomes me to present my heart and my ways before my all-seeing High Priest, that he may search and try me. If he find me pining away in mine iniquity; wilfully increasing unto more ungodliness; depending on self-righteousness as the ground of my acceptance with God; habitually disposed to rage at reproof; fixed in gross heresy, or given to boast of that which is plainly sinful; I am certainly a leper, a servant of sin: and let me, with the deepest agony and grief, bewail my condition, while by faith I apply to him, for his word only can effect the cure, and his grace relieve the misery. If he find in me the opposite marks of real grace, particularly a deep sense of universal filthiness in heart and life, still let me wash myself in Jesus' blood, on account of my remaining corruptions and daily infirmities.—Let me submit to his trial the garments of my conversation, that he may purge out what is amiss; and save my soul, though my works should be burnt up.—Let ministers learn with what tenderness and exact attention to God's prescriptions they should judge of the states of others, in order either to admit them to, or exclude them from, the seals of God's covenant.

Represents the ceremonial infectious nature of running issues, and the manner of purification from them, in (1) Men, 1—18. (2) Women, 19—33.

AND the LORD spake ^aunto Moses and to Aaron, saying,

2 Speak ^bunto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When any man hath a ^crunning issue out of his flesh because of his issue he is unclean.

3 And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue; whether his ^dflesh run with his issue, or his flesh be stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness.

4 ^eEvery bed, whereon he lieth that hath the issue, is unclean; and every ^fthing whereon he sitteth shall be unclean.

5 And whosoever toucheth his bed ^fshall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be ^gunclean until the even.

6 And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

7 And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

8 And if he that hath the issue ^hspit upon him that is clean, then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

9 And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean.

10 And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall ^hwash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

11 And whomsoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, ^hhe shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

12 And the ⁱvessel of earth, that he toucheth which hath the issue, shall be broken; and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water.

13 And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue, then he shall number to himself ^kseven days for his cleansing, and ^lwash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take to him ^mtwo turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, and come before the LORD unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest:

15 And the priest shall offer them, the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering; and the ⁿpriest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD for his issue.

16 And if any man's ^oseed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even.

17 And every garment, and every skin whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even.

18 The ^pwoman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and be unclean until the even.

19 ¶ And if a woman ^qhave an issue, and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be ^rput apart seven days; and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even.

20 And ^revery thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean; every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean.

21 And whosoever toucheth her bed ^sshall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

22 And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

23 And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he toucheth it he shall be unclean until the even.

24 And if any man ^tlie with her at all and her flowers be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days; and all the bed whereon he lieth shall be unclean.

25 And if a woman ^uhave an issue of her blood many days out of the time of her separation, or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean.

26 Every bed whereon she lieth all the days of her issue shall be unto her as the bed of her separation; and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—No human endeavours, but God alone, can cure my spiritual plagues. By his grace, through the application of the blood and Spirit of Jesus, the God-man—of Jesus, the once slain, but now alive and ascended Saviour—I must be cleansed from my reigning corruptions. Thus shall I have access into God's camp, his church below; and, as a bird escaped, fly away towards heaven, rejoicing in my deliverance. But not till, through the Spirit, I repeatedly wash myself and my performances in the fountain of his blood; till I search out and mortify my corruptions, the deeds of my body, and receive the full efficacy of Jesus' righteousness, and the influences of his blessed Spirit, for the sanctification of my whole powers and members; shall I be admitted to my real habitation, or enter into unreserved and immediate fellowship with divine persons, holy angels, and glorified saints. But blessed be the Lord, that my all-comprehending offering, Christ Jesus, suits me, whether I be poor or rich, and renders my person and all my services constantly acceptable before God.—In this plague of the house, let me observe how sin worketh the dissolution not only of human bodies, but of families, nations, and churches; and that no human projects, but Jesus and his Spirit preached and applied, can prevent their destruction; and that, where there is a continued obstinacy in sinning, notwithstanding mercies and judgments, inevitable ruin must necessarily ensue.

things shall be unclean, and shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

28 But if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall ^ynumber to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean.

29 And ^zon the eighth day she shall take unto her two turtles, or two young pigeons, and bring them unto the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

30 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD for the issue of her uncleanness.

31 ^aThus shall ye separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, when they defile my tabernacle that is among them.

32 ^bThis is the law of him that hath an issue, and of him whose seed goeth from him, and is defiled therewith;

33 And of her that is sick of her flowers, and of him that hath an issue, of the men and of the woman, and of him that lieth with her that is unclean.

CHAP. XVI.

Contains the divine institution of the great fast of expiation, or annual purification of the Jewish nation; the whole sacerdotal work of which was committed to the high-priest. (1) Upon that day of the year only durst he enter into the oracle, or most holy place; 1, 2. (2) He must perform the principal service of the day dressed in his plain linen garments, like those of the common priests, not in his golden robes; 4. (3) Sin-offerings and burnt-offerings must be presented both for himself and for the people: 3, 5. (4) Having offered his own bullock for a sin-offering, he must carry part of the blood of it into the most holy place; and having entered with his hands full of incense, with a censer full of burning coals from the altar of burnt-offering, he must burn the incense before the mercy-seat, and sprinkle the blood towards it; 6—14. (5) Of the two goats, provided for a sin-offering for the people, one, according to the direction of the lot, must be slain, and part of the blood sprinkled before the mercy-seat in the most holy place; and another part of it, together with part of the bullock's blood, sprinkled on the golden altar, if not also on the brazen one. The other goat, having all the sins of the Hebrew nation transferred on him by the high priest's confession of them over his head, must be dismissed into the wilderness; 15—22. (6) The burnt-offerings for the high priest and people being slain, and laid on the altar, the fat of the sin-offerings must be burnt above them, and the flesh of it burnt without the camp; 23—28. (7) The conductor of the scape-goat into the wilderness, the high priest, and the man who burnt the flesh of the sin-offering, must wash themselves from the ceremonial pollution contracted in their work; 24, 26, 28. (8) The people must observe the day in holy resting from their labours and in bitter mourning for their sins; 29—34.

AND ^athe LORD spake unto Moses after ^bthe death of the two sons of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD and died;

2 And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the vail before the mercy-seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for I will ^dappear in the cloud upon the mercy-seat.

3 Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place: ^ewith a young bullock for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering.

4 He shall ^fput on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with the linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore shall he ^gwash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

5 And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel two ^hkids of the goats for a sin-offering, and one ram for a burnt-offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer ⁱhis bullock of the sin-offering, which is for himself, and make an atonement for himself, and for his house.

7 And he shall take the two goats, and ^jpresent them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And Aaron shall cast ^klots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for ^lthe scape goat.

9 And Aaron shall ^mbring the goat upon which the LORD's lot ⁿfell, and offer ^ohim for a sin-offering.

10 But the ^pgoat, on which the lot fell to be the scape goat, shall be presented alive before the LORD, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scape-goat into the wilderness.

11 ¶ And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin-offering, which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself:

12 And he shall ^qtake a censer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the vail:

13 ^rAnd he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy-seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not:

14 And ^she shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger ^tupon the mercy-seat eastward; and before the mercy-seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.

15 ¶ Then shall he ^ukill the goat of the sin-offering that is for the people, and bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it ^vupon the mercy-seat, and before the mercy-seat:

16 And he shall ^wmake an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation that ^xremaineth among them ^yin the midst of their uncleanness.

17 And there shall be ^zno man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.

as well as my soul, be kept pure for the Lord. Let me, with the most earnest care, avoid the company of apostate, erroneous, unchaste, frothy, and wicked, persons; and have no fellowship in thought, word, or deed, with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Without this circumspection and care, I shall certainly contract guilt, stains, infamy, and hurt, which will not be purged away, but follow me, till I die.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—In these things, as in a figure, I behold how shameful and infectious are the scandalous outcroakings of original and inward corruption, and particularly those which are any way connected with fleshly lusts. Neither the corrupters nor the corrupted can have fellowship with God or his people but in a believing improvement of Jesus' blood and Spirit, and in bitter and unfeigned repentance of their sin. Let my body, therefore,

18 And he shall ^ygo out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and make an atonement for it, and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and ^hhallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 ¶ And when he hath made an end of ^areconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the ^blive goat :

21 And Aaron shall ^lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand [†]of a fit man into the wilderness.

22 And the goat shall ^dbear upon him all their iniquities unto a land [‡]not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall [†]put off the linen garments, which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there:

24 And he shall [†]wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, and offer his burnt-offering, and the burnt-offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

25 And the ^efat of the sin-offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scape goat shall ^bwash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 And the bullock for the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them ^kshall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 ¶ And this shall be a statute [†]for ever unto you: that in ^mthe seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall ⁿafflict your souls, and do ^ono work at all, whether it be one of our own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you.

32 And ^rthe priest, whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall ^{||}consecrate to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement and shall put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments :

33 And he shall make an atonement for the ^sholy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar; and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.

34 And this shall be an ^teverlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins ^uonce a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. XVII.

Here, to preserve the honour of the tabernacle, priests, ceremonial atonements, and purifications, G. d. forbids. (1) The offering of any sacrifices, in ordinary cases, any where but at his altar, or by any other than his priests, and also the sacrificing to devils, under pain of excommunication or death: 1—5. (2) The eating of blood under the same penalty: and the eating of animals which died of themselves, or had been torn by beasts, under pain of ceremonial washing, 10—16.

AND the ^aLORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ^bSpeak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever there be of ^cthe house of Israel, that ^dkilleth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp,

4 And bringeth it not ^eunto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD; ^fblood shall be imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man shall ^gbe cut off from among his people :

5 To the end that the children of Israel may ^hbring their sacrifices, which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them for peace-offerings unto the LORD.

6 And the priest shall ⁱsprinkle the blood upon the altar of the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and ^jburn the fat for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—In these ceremonial observances I am still directed to Jesus as appointed by God, and fully qualified to make atonement for all the sins of an elect world. I behold, in his debasement, strip of his glorious robes of light and majesty, clothed with a mean but a pure manhood; and at once standing as the laborious High Priest, and as the God-honouring and sin-expiating sacrifice. He needed not to offer for himself; but the Lord lays upon him the iniquities of us all. As our slain goat he atones for them, and as our scape goat he carries them all into the land of forgetfulness; dying for our offences, but raised again, and ascending to glory, for our justification. Behold him entering into the celestial oracle in the virtue of his own blood! There he appears in the presence of God for us, pleading his own merits, and offering up the incense of continual intercession for us; putting off his robes of debasement, laying aside every vestige of the likeness of sinful flesh, and clothed and crowned with glory and honour. The sprinkling of his blood sanctifies the church, and all the ordinances of it: and renders our sacrifices and incense of grateful obedience, of fervent prayer and praise, acceptable to his Father. He returns also in the Spirit from within the vail to bless all nations in the gospel: and at last will return personally in the clouds, without sin, unto our eternal salvation. But while, in the purification of these agents after their sacred work, I perceive the imperfections of the most noted ceremonies for purging the conscience, let me diligently observe what pollution I contract in my most religious, my most solemn, services: and let me live by faith, looking to Jesus whom I have pierced, and mourning bitterly over my transgressions as the cause of his sufferings! Nor let me ever forget what infinite glories must dwell in Christ, who answers, nay, infinitely more than answers, to all these sacrifices, these oblations, these priests, these means of purification, of which I have hitherto read!

8 And thou shalt say unto them, ^aWhatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a ^oburnt-offering or sacrifice, 9 And bringeth it not unto ^pthe door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer it unto the LORD; even that man shall be ^qcut off from among his people.

10 ¶ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that ^reateth any manner of blood; I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you ^supon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, ^tNo soul of you shall eat blood; neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, ^uwhich hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall ^veven pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

14 ^wFor it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh; for ^xthe life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 ¶ And every soul that eateth ^ythat which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country or a stranger, he shall both ^zwash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even; then shall he be clean.

16 But ^aif he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh, then he shall bear his iniquity.

CHAP. XVIII.

Contains (1) A general prohibition of conformity to the corrupt usages of the heathen; 1—5. (2) Particular laws against incest of various forms; 6—18; and against beastly lusts and barbarous idolatries; 19—23. (3) An enforcement of these laws, from the ruin of the Canaanites by the sins prohibited; 24—30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, ^asaying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the ^bLORD your God.

3 ^cAfter the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do: neither shall ye walk in their ordinances.

4 Ye shall ^ddo my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments; ^ewhich if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD.

6 ¶ ^fNone of you shall approach to any that is ^gnear of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

7 The ^hnakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

8 ⁱThe nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover; it is thy father's nakedness.

9 ^jThe nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home or born abroad, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for their's is thine own nakedness.

11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, she is thy sister, thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

12 ^kThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister; she is thy father's near kinswoman.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister; for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

14 ^lThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt.

15 ^mThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter-in-law: she is thy son's wife; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

16 ⁿThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife; it is thy brother's nakedness.

17 ^oThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness.

18 Neither shalt thou take ^pa wife to her sister, to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her lifetime.

19 ¶ ^qAlso thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

20 Moreover, ^rthou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her.

private. In this blood of animals, so noted because made an atonement for men, I behold the blood of the new covenant enjoined to me—the blood of Jesus Christ shed for me. Let me, therefore, impressed with the repeated commandments of Heaven, maintain the deepest reverence for it, and every thing connected with it, and detest every thing murderous or cruel. And let a thing deathful, dead, or dying, nothing that can be torn to pieces, or torn from me, but the ever-living Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be the provision of my soul and portion of my heart! If I am defiled by such things, either I must wash in Jesus' fountain opened, or perish in my sin.

23 Neither shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith: neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is confusion.

24 Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you:

25 And the land is defiled: therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.

26 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you:

27 (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled;)

28 That the land spue not you out also when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you.

29 For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people.

30 Therefore shall ye keep mine ordinance, that ye commit not any one of these abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye defile not yourselves therein: I am the LORD your God.

CHAP. XIX.

Here we have, (1) Jewish laws; concerning their peace-offerings, 5—8; gleanings of fields and vineyards, 9, 10; forbearance, and sanctification of their fruit trees, 23—25; against mixtures of cattle, seeds, or cloth, 19; superstitious eating with the blood, trimming their heads, or marking their flesh; 26—28. (2) Moral laws obligatory on all men in their foundation, as from the authority of God, and our relation to him; in their sum, as comprehending universal holiness and love, 2, 18; and in many particular branches: as, against enchantment, divination, and witchcraft, 26, 30; idolatry, 4; profanation of God's name, 12; for sanctification of the sabbath, 3, 30; in correspondence with the first table:—and for honouring parents and aged persons, 3, 32; against neglect of brotherly admonition, hatred, revenge, adultery, whoredom, 17, 18, 20—22, 29; unjust judgment, theft, withholding of dues, oppression of strangers, false weights, 11, 13, 15, 32, 34—36; lying, slander, contempt of natural infirmities, tale-bearing, false-witnessing, 11, 14, 16;—in correspondence with the second table.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, Ye shall be holy; for I the LORD your God am holy.

3 Ye shall fear every man his mother and his father, and keep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

4 Turn ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

5 ¶ And if ye offer a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will.

6 It shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD: and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

9 And when ye reap the harvest of your land thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God.

11 Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another.

12 And ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

13 Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning.

14 Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling-block before the blind, but shalt fear thy God: I am the LORD.

15 Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

16 Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer among thy people; neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.

17 Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.

18 Thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

19 Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind. Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed: neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.

20 And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman that is a bond-maid, ments inflicted on others would tend to deter us from their sins. As God seldom leaves men to the rage of their lusts till they forsake him and his institutions, let me, conscious of my own inward readiness to commit the worst of crimes, and in the firm faith of God's infinite excellency, high dignity and authority over me, of his new covenant grant of himself, and delightful relation to me, as the Lord my God, cleave closely to his commandments, as an effectual preservative from them. And, while I live solely on Jesus' perfect fulfilment of the law, in gratitude for his goodness, let me always abound in the work of the Lord.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—What a sink of shocking pollution is our world! Sinful and dangerous is conformity to the men of it; and yet is it little avoided, nay, often much studied, by many professors of the true religion! With infinite wisdom has God framed his rules of marriage for avoiding uncleanness, and for spreading of love and friendship among mankind; and yet sinners debase themselves, and violate the dictates of nature, in order to fulfil their filthy and furious lusts, arising from the abominable source of a desperately wicked heart. What need to distrust ourselves, and abstain from every, even the smallest appearance of evil; for filthy lusts and absurd idolatries ripen, not only individuals, but nations, for ruin; and to observe the judg-

CHAP. XX.

Requires (1) That such as will not abstain from sin out of love to God, and regard to his authority, be deterred by the fear of punishment; and some leading sins prohibited in the two preceding chapters are declared punishable by death, viz. the giving of children to Molech, 1—5; consulting with witches, 6, 27; cursing of parents, 9; adultery, 10; incest, 11, 12, 14, 17, 19, 20, 21: unnatural lusts, 13, 15, 16, 18. (2) Contains general requirements of universal holiness; enforced from what God was to them, and had done or would do for them; and from the danger of disobedience; 7, 8, 22—26.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ¶ Again, thou shalt say to the children of Israel, Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his seed unto Molech*, he shall surely be put to death: the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

3 And I will set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to defile my sanctuary, and to profane my holy name.

4 And if the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and kill him not;

5 Then I will set my face against that man, and against his family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people.

6 ¶ And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

7 ¶ Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy; for I am the LORD your God.

8 And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the LORD who sanctify you.

9 ¶ For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; his blood shall be upon him.

10 ¶ And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 ¶ And the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

12 And if a man lie with his daughter-in-law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought confusion: their blood shall be upon them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—In these peace-offerings let me behold Jesus, my peace-maker with God, and speedily receive and live on him by faith. In these gleanings let me observe what care God takes of the poor: nor can I have any true religion without a similar temper. Yea, let me think what gleanings of promises, and deeds of grace, for us poor strangers of the Gentiles, are left in every corner of the Jewish scriptures. In these forlorn trees, let me learn to avoid all rash desires of created enjoyments, or even honouring the Lord with first-fruits not arrived at their perfection. Let me never attempt to alter God's frame of creatures; never attempt to mix works and grace; Jesus' righteousness and my own; his Spirit and my natural abilities; his truths and my own fancies; his ordinances and my own inventions. If I enjoy the directions of God's word and Spirit, let me be ashamed to copy after heathen superstition; but let me carefully observe the positive institutions of my God, and never neglect the weightier matters of the law. If God has delivered his moral precepts so briefly, let me extend my meditations on them: and, in all my obedience, let me be influenced by the firm faith that the lawgiver is JEHOVAH, my God in Christ. Whatsoever is not of this faith is sin. Nor can my obedience be sincere without being universal to all his commandments.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—At what a terrible expence do Satan's votaries readily serve him!—and shall I count any thing too dear for the Lord! Miserable is the state of a nation when the vilest idolatries, inhumanities, and abominations, break out; and especially when they pass unpunished: but corrupt nature is prone to evil; the commands of God are therefore enforced with the most awful penalties, and threatenings of death; and filthy pleasures infallibly issue in fearful punishments: nor are any more exposed to the severe indignation of God than those professors who wilfully imitate the profane world. But honourable, pleasant, and profitable, is a course of universal holiness; especially amidst a multitude of temptations and examples to the contrary: and delightful is the study of it when God as our own God sanctifies us wholly, soul, body, and spirit; and thus forms us for himself, that we may dwell alone and shew forth his praise.

Before Christ 1490.

15 Neither shall he ^{profane} his seed among his people: for I the LORD do sanctify him.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Speak unto Aaron, saying, Whosoever he be of thy seed in their generations that ^{hath} any blemish, let him not approach to offer the ^{bread} of his God:

18 For whatsoever man he be that hath a blemish, he shall not approach: a blind man, or a lame, or he that hath a flat nose, or any thing superfluous.

19 Or a man that is broken-footed, or broken-handed,

20 Or crook-backed, or ^a dwarf, or that hath a blemish in his eye, or be scurvy, or scabbed, or hath his stones broken;

21 No man that hath a blemish of the seed of Aaron the priest shall come nigh to offer the offerings of the LORD made by fire: he hath a blemish; he shall not come nigh to offer the ^{bread} of his God.

22 He shall eat the bread of his God, both ^{of} the most holy and of the holy.

23 ^{Only} he shall not go in unto the vail, nor come nigh unto the ^{altar}, because he hath a blemish; that he profane not my sanctuaries; for I the LORD do ^{sanctify} them.

24 And Moses told it ^{unto} Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXII.

For the honour of his sanctuary, God here further prescribes (1) That no priests should eat their share of the sacred offerings while under any ceremonial uncleanness; 1—9. (2) That none but priests should ever eat thereof; and, if any did it unwittingly, he should make restitution; 10—16. (3) That no animals but such as were unblemished, and these at least eight days old, should be offered in sacrifice; and that the dam and her young should never be offered on the same day; 17—28. (4) That the late command of eating the flesh of thank-offerings on the day it was offered should be punctually observed; 29—33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they ^{separate} themselves from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they profane not my holy name in those things which they ^{hallow} unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, ^{Whosoever} he be of all your seed, among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be ^{cut off} from my presence: I am the LORD.

4 ^{What} man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath a running issue, he shall not eat of the holy things until he be clean. And whoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or a man whose seed goeth from him;

5 Or ^{whosoever} toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The ^{soul} which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of ^{the} holy things, because it is his food.

8 That which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, lest they ^{bear} sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it: I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 ¶ There shall no ^{stranger} eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

11 But if the priest ^{buy} any soul ^{with} his money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house: they shall eat of his meat.

12 If the priest's daughter also ^{be} married unto ^a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things.

13 But if ^{the} priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, or have no child, and is returned unto her father's house, as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat; but there shall no stranger eat thereof.

14 ¶ And if a man eat of the holy thing ^{unwittingly}, then he shall ^{put} the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.

15 And they shall not ^{profane} the holy things of the children of Israel which they offer unto the LORD;

16 Or ^{suffer} them to bear the iniquity of trespass when they eat their holy things: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^{Whosoever} he be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his free-will-offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt-offering;

19 Ye shall offer ^{at} your own will a male without blemish of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats.

20 ^{But} whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer; for it shall not be acceptable for you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—In these ceremonial figures I behold Jesus, my priest for ever, untainted with selfish affections, or immoderate passions—I behold him holy, harmless, and undefiled—perfect as his Father who is in heaven is perfect; personally united with an unspotted manhood; graciously united to virgin-churches; and spiritually married to washed and sanctified souls; nor ever decoyed from attending his work, no not by the most powerful temptations. Let me learn likewise what noted examples gospel-ministers ought to be of holiness and purity; what close and earnest attention they ought to give to their work; with what patience and resignation they ought to bear the loss of worldly comforts; how circumspect they ought to be with respect to their marriage and family; and how, as servants, they ought to labour to be perfect and unblemished, even as their Master. Yea, if I name the name of Christ, whatever be my place in his church, let me depart from iniquity, and follow after holiness in all manner of conversation. While God is my portion, as well as my master, on no account should I desert or neglect his worship; and, while my God liveth, never should I sorrow for deceased relations, or withdrawn comforts, as those who have no hope. Since I am a child of Jesus, let me never by whorish pollutions or apostacy discredit him, or endanger myself. Since I am betrothed to him, let me never willingly lay his enemy, an heir of hell, in my bosom. And, since God hath promised to supply all my wants, let me cast my cares on him, and firmly trust that he will perfect his work which concerneth me, rendering me perfect, even as my Father which is in heaven is perfect. And let me bless the Lord that, though my infirmities should disqualify me for office in the church, they do not debar me from partaking of Jesus, my sacred provision, in the courts and ordinances of his grace.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, Concerning the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my feasts.

3 Six days shall work be done; but the seventh day is the sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the sabbath of the LORD in all your dwellings.

4 These are the feasts of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons.

5 In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the LORD's passover.

6 And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the LORD: seven days ye must eat unleavened bread.

7 In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein:

8 But ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD seven days: in the seventh day is an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein.

9 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a sheaf of the first-fruits of your harvest unto the priest:

11 And he shall wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted for you; on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it.

12 And ye shall offer that day, when ye wave the sheaf, an he-lamb without blemish of the first year for a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

13 And the meat-offering thereof shall be two tenth-deals of fine flour mingled with oil, an offering made by fire unto the LORD for a sweet savour: and the drink-offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of an hin.

14 And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the self-same day that ye have brought an offering unto your God: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

15 And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave-offerings; seven sabbaths shall be complete:

16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat-offering unto the LORD.

17 Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave-loaves of two tenth-deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baken with leaven; they are the first-fruits unto the LORD.

18 And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt-offering unto the LORD, with their meat-offer-

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Beholding, in these figures, the perfect and permanent purity of my Redeemer's person and nature; the persevering exactness of his obedience; the absolute perfection of his sacrifice of himself, and its unfailing virtue for preventing the destruction of his spiritual seed; we may observe that it is altogether necessary to exclude wicked persons, and even scandalous saints, from the more sacred provision of the church, the seats of God's covenant; that every person or work, dedicated to the service of God, should be devoted to him in holiness; and the greatest care be used in meddling with holy things; for cursed is the deceiver that offereth unto the Lord things corrupt or unripe. But especially must we remember that all delay of the cordial reception and improvement of Jesus Christ, and his fulness, offered for our comfort in the gospel, is infinitely sinful and dangerous; for thus only can we secure access to God; and nothing can powerfully influence us to obedience but a firm faith and deep sense of his redeeming love.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—While I consider these sacred festivals as memorials—of the finished work of creation—of Israel's deliverance from Egypt of the giving of the law at Sinai—of the provocation of the golden calf, and of the Hebrews dwelling in tents—let me also view them as typical figures of the gospel rests in the apostolic, millennial, eternal, periods. Jesus' person work, and fulness, appear as the end, and the substance of them all; and the oblations then offered represent to me Jesus, my burnt-offering, who satisfied justice, and glorified all the divine perfec-tions in my stead; Jesus, my sin-offering, who expiates every crime; Jesus, peace-offering, whose blood pacifies an offended God, quiets my conscience, comforts my heart; Jesus, my meat-offering, who is meat indeed for the nourishment of my soul. Yea they represent to me how his people, and their sacrifices offered through him, are the delight of his Father, and the joy of his heart. In the first fruits of barley and flour let me behold Jesus, in his ascension and glory, as having in all things the pre-eminence, sanctifying the harvest of elect men, and all their fruits of righteousness; and as offered the present and endless nourishment of my soul. Let them also figure out called of God, who are first-fruits to God and the Lamb; and their ready acceptable service. In the passover I discern him as our passover sacrificed for us. In the feast of unleavened bread I see him as through his whole life a man of sorrows; but holy, harmless, and undefiled. In pentecost I behold him rest, and ye shall afflict your souls in the ninth day of the month at even: from even unto even shall ye celebrate your sabbath.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses,
saying,

34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, 'The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the LORD.

35 On the first day shall be an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

36 'Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: 'on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a solemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein.

37 These are the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt-offering, and a meat-offering, a sacrifice, and drink-offerings; every thing upon his day:

38 Beside the 'sabbaths of the LORD, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your free-will-offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have 'gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

40 And ye shall take you on the first day the 'boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm-trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall 'rejoice before the LORD your God seven days.

41 And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year: 'it shall be a statute for ever in your generations; ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

42 Ye shall 'dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

43 'That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

44 'And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

exhibited as the law-fulfiller in the apostolic period for the salvation of multitudes. In the feast of trumpets I hear the gospel-sound, from morning to evening of the Christian period, proclaiming a full salvation through a crucified Redeemer to all the ends of the earth. In the fast of expiation I again behold him finishing transgression, and making an end of sin, the sin of a whole elect world, in one day; and, having by himself purged away our sins, sitting down at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, there to appear in the presence of God for us. And in the feast of tabernacles he is prefigured as tabernacling in our nature and world, that we might have familiar fellowship with him, particularly in the apostolic and millennial, but chiefly in the eternal, period. Let me bless the Lord for such manifold memorials of Jesus; and especially that our privileges under the gospel are still more excellent, our enemies themselves being judges. Let me observe holy seasons in an holy manner. Let the sabbaths of the Lord be kept in all our hearts, in all our dwellings, and by all under our care. Let us honour the Lord with the first-fruits of all our substance. While kind to strangers, to the poor and destitute, let us hearken to the joyful sound of salvation to miserable sinners; and, looking on Jesus Christ as crucified for us, let us afflict our souls till God himself wipe away all tears from our eyes: and when our harvest and vintage of labours are ended, then shall we commemorate with pleasure our hardships by the way, and rejoice to change them for an eternal weight of glory.

CHAP. XXIV.

Here is (1) A repetition of some laws, for the execution of which there was present need; viz. that the lamps in the sanctuary should be kept burning every night, and the golden table always covered with shew-bread, renewed every sabbath; 1—9: and that murder, or striking of persons, and destroying their beasts, should be impartially punished; 17—22. (2) A blasphemer having, for the third time, interrupted God's giving of his ceremonial institutes, [compare Exod. xxii. Lev. x.] a solemn stoning to death is appointed as the punishment of every blasphemer; 10—16.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel that they bring unto thee pure oil-olive beaten for the light, *to cause the lamps to burn continually.

3 ^bWithout the vail of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: It shall be a statute for ever in your generations.

4 He shall order the lamps upon ^athe pure candlestick before the LORD continually.

5 ¶ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake ^atwelve cakes thereof: two tenth-deals shall be in one cake.

6 And thou shalt ^aset them in two rows, six on a row, upon the ^apure table before the LORD.

7 And thou shalt put ^bpure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread ^afor a memorial, even an offering made by fire, unto the LORD.

8 Every sabbath ye shall ^aset it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.

9 And ^ait shall be Aaron's and his sons'; and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire by a perpetual statute.

10 ¶ And the son of an Israelitish woman, ^awhose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp;

11 And the Israelitish woman's son ^ablasphemed the name of the LORD, and cursed. And they ^abrought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan:)

12 And they ^aput him in ward, ^athat the mind of the LORD might be shewed them.

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

14 Bring forth him that hath cursed ^awithout the camp; and let all that heard ^ahim ^alay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation ^astone him.

15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^a'Whosoever curs-eth his God shall bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

17 ^aAnd he that ^akilleth any man shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And he that ^akilleth a beast shall make it good; ^abeast for beast.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done so shall it be done to him:

20 Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

22 Ye shall have ^aone manner of law, as well for the stranger as for one of your own country: for ^a'I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And Moses spake to the children of Israel, that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and ^astone him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. XXV.

To mark the land of Canaan as his peculiar property, and to secure time for religious instruction, to try their faith in his providential provisions, and to prevent their hastening to be rich, or their oppression of the poor, God here (1) Appoints every seventh year to be a year of release, in which no fields should be cultivated, or spontaneous product claimed by the masters, and no debts demanded; 1—7, 18—22. (2) Appoints every forty-ninth or fiftieth year to be a jubilee, in which not only the land should lie untilled, and debts be forborne or remitted, but every family should return to the fields of their ancient possession, and every bond-servant of the Hebrew nation have his liberty granted; 8—17. (3) Prescribes laws for the sale and redemption of lands and houses as connected with the jubilee, 14—16, 23—34; and concerning the sale and redemption of Hebrew bond-servants sold to Israelites or to proselytes; 39—55. (4) Commands clemency to poor debtors; 35—38.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses ^ain mount Sinai, saying,

2 ^aSpeak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into ^athe land which I give you, then shall the land ^akeep a sabbath unto the LORD.

3 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruits thereof:

4 ^aBut in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD: thou shalt neither sow thy field nor prune thy vineyard.

5 That which ^agroweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes ^aof thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be ^ameat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—While in Jesus' light I see light, and feed upon him, especially from sabbath to sabbath, let me essay to give light in his church, and be a good savour of Christ, in the feeding of his people with the true bread which cometh down from heaven. Let such as desire to enjoy gospel light never grudge the necessary expenses of it. And never let the pure oil of divine truth be adulterated with the fancies of men. What a mercy is it that they who come to God find a table spread for them in the wilderness: and that on every sabbath ministers are to provide fresh provision for the souls of their people! That the saints, in one generation after another, are set upon the table of the church, and especially on Christ, to the honour and delight of JEHOVAH! Let me further observe that a graceless offspring is often the fruit of an unhal- lowed marriage: that quarrels usually end ill; and that judges ought to act with deliberation, and yet with impartiality and zeal. I tremble therefore at the load of uncontrolled blasphemy which lies unpardoned on Britain; since men have spared the heaven-daring miscreants till they are so common that stones would almost be wanting to cast at them all! Let my soul weep in secret places for their crimes! Shall not God visit for these things? Shall not his soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.

8 ¶ And thou shalt number ^bseven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet [†]of the jubilee to sound, on the ^ktenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim [†]liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubilee unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

11 A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye ^mshall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

12 For it is the jubilee; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

13 ⁿIn the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession.

14 ¶ And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye ^oshall not oppress one another:

15 ^pAccording to the number of years after the jubilee thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee*:

16 According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for *accord-*ing to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

17 Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; but thou shalt ^qfear thy God: for I am the LORD your God.

18 ¶ Wherefore ye ^rshall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And the land ^sshall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, ^tWhat shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

21 Then I ^uwill command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

22 And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

23 ¶ The land ^vshall not be sold ^{||} [‡]for ever: for the land is mine; for ye are ^wstrangers and sojourners with me.

24 And in all the land of your possession ye ^xshall grant a redemption for the land.

25 If thy brother be ^ywaxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and ^zhimself be able to redeem it;

27 Then let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

28 But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubilee: and in the jubilee it shall go out, and he ^bshall return unto his possession.

29 ¶ And if a man sell a dwelling-house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; within a full year may he redeem it.

30 [†]And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubilee.

31 But the houses of the villages which have no walls round about them shall be counted as the fields of the country: [†]they may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubilee.

32 ^cNotwithstanding, the cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if ^{||}a man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, shall go out in the year of jubilee: ^dfor the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession among the children of Israel.

34 But the field of the suburbs of their cities may ^enot be sold, for it is their perpetual possession.

35 ¶ And if ^fthy brother be waxen poor, and [§]fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt ^{*}relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger or a sojourner; that he may live with thee.

36 ^gTake thou no usury of him or increase: but fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.

38 ^hI am the LORD your God, who brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and to be your God.

39 ¶ And ⁱif thy brother *that dwell-*eth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee, thou shalt not [†]compel him to serve as a bond-servant:

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubilee:

41 And then ^kshall he depart from thee, both he and his children with him, and shall return unto his own family, and unto the possession of his father shall he return.

CHAP. XXVI.

Here, after a general demand of due regard to God, to his sabbaths and sanctuary; 1, 2. (1) Obedience to God's laws is enforced with manifold promises of plenty, peace, victory, increase in number, God's special favour, presence, and continued covenant-relation; 3—13. (2) Disobedience to them is threatened with divine opposition, bodily distempers, famine, war, harassment by wild beasts, captivity, desolation of their land, destruction of their idols, faintness of heart, and pining away, in their sins; 14—39. (3) Repentance, amidst the deepest afflictions, is encouraged by promises of God's merciful regard and deliverance; 40—46.

YE shall make you ^ano idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a ^{*}standing image, neither shall ye set up [†]any [†]image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God.

2 ^bYe shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the LORD.

3 ¶ ^cIf ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them;

4 Then ^dI will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

5 And your ^ethreshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time: and ye ^fshall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

6 And ^gI will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down and none shall make you afraid: and I will ^hrid evil beasts out of the land; neither shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall ⁱchase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

9 For I will ^khave respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and ^lestablish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall eat ^mold store, and ⁿbring forth the old because of the new.

11 And ^oI will set my tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not abhor you.

12 ^pAnd I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 ^qI am the LORD your God, who brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bond-men; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 ¶ ^rBut if ye will not hearken unto a summary of the oracles and providences of God relative to the Jewish nation. In the first part of it we have a summary of much of the contents of those promises already met with, and of those hereafter contained in the Bible, with respect to the Jewish nation. All the prosperity they met with in the days of Joshua, the judges, the kings, the deputies of the Persian, Grecian, or Roman powers, were but the fulfilment of these predictions. In the second part of it we have a summary of all the threatenings which relate to their nation, whether denounced by Moses, the prophets, Christ, or his apostles. All the miseries which that nation endured under the judges, kings, Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks and Romans, for about fifteen hundred years; and all the miseries they have endured in their present dispersion among the Gentiles, which have already continued above seventeen hundred years without any interruption is but a literal accomplishment of them. The third part has been in some measure verified in some of their former deliverances; especially in the mercies which they received in their return from Babylon, and afterwards until the time of Christ. But we expect a more full accomplishment of it in the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted to the Christian faith, and replaced in their own land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—While in these sabbatical years I call to mind the happiness of Adam in Paradise, and by faith discern the rest, the liberty, the happiness, the common salvation of a new covenant state, of the gospel period, and of the celestial state, all purchased by Jesus' atoning blood, and published and offered to us in the gospel, may I be disengaged from all undue affection to created comforts, and never hasten to be rich, but depend on God for daily bread, in following the ways of religion and charity. In view of my eternal jubilee let me consider wisely the cases of the poor; study equity in all my dealings: and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made me free. Blessed be his glorious name—though I have forfeited all my happiness—though I have sold myself a bond servant to Satan and my lusts—my Kinsman-Redeemer Christ has paid all my debt; all my ransom! And whom the son hath made free, they are free indeed! Let me adore his sovereignty, that, while almost all the world are detained in everlasting bondage, the seed of Abraham, according to the Spirit, are made the Lord's free men.

CHAP. XXVI. This chapter, which mostly corresponds with Deut. xxviii. is me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant:

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it.

17 And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you.

18 And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you seven times more for your sins.

19 And I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass:

20 And your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

21 And if ye walk contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me; I will bring seven times more plagues upon you according to your sins.

22 I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and your high-ways shall be desolate.

23 And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me;

24 Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins.

25 And I will bring a sword upon you, that shall avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy.

26 And, when I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ye shall eat and not be satisfied.

27 And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me;

28 Then I will walk contrary unto you also in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.

30 And I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

31 And I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will not smell the savour of your sweet odours.

32 And I will bring the land into desolation: and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your sabbaths when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you shall pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.

40 ¶ If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity;

42 Then will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity; because, even because they despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the LORD their God.

45 But I will for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.

46 These are the statutes and judgments and laws which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel in mount Sinai by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. XXVII.

Contains the laws of the dedication of persons, 1—8; cattle, clean and unclean, 9—13; houses and lands, 14—25; and of other things to God; 26—34. The general rules were, (1) That nothing which was the Lord's by an antecedent claim, as firstlings of animals, or first-fruits, or tithes, could be devoted at all; 26, 27, 30—34. (2) To render persons deliberate in devoting to the Lord, and redeeming back from him, nothing could be redeemed back without paying a fifth part more than the estimated value of the person or thing dedicated by a vow; 2—25. (3) No firstlings of animals fit for sacrifice, or any person or thing devoted under a curse, could be redeemed at all; 9, 10, 28, 29.

While they wickedly proceed from evil to worse, the judgments of God justly increase in their number and degree; and such as remain, unhumiliated under afflictions from God, and convictions from their own conscience, have nothing to expect but wrath to the uttermost. Such as dare to contend with their Maker will find the struggle most unequal. Disappointments, diseases, evil beasts, sword, famine, pestilences, captivity; and, in fine, death and hell; wait his call to destroy them. How dreadful then is the nature of sin! How certain the ruin of impenitent sinners! Aggravated is their guilt whom mercies cannot engage or corrections deter: and God will be just to give up those to despair and death in sin, who give up themselves to work wickedness with greediness.

But behold how all who return to God, even though late, are graciously received by him! It is his grace, concurring with his afflictive providences, that softens the stupid and hardened heart, and humbles the sinner; that renders him patient under his troubles, but earnestly anxious to escape from his sins;—renders him more solicitous to have the end of afflictions answered than to have the burden of them removed; and then marvellously God remembers mercy in the midst of judgments; and opens to the believing mind a firm foundation of hopes, and gracious source of blessings, in Jesus and his covenant of grace! Amidst such fulness of merit, and freedom of promise, none need despair, relying thereon. Blessing God for my pious ancestors, and the benefits I enjoy through them, following in their steps, let me deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—While in these devoted things I, with under, behold Jesus voluntarily devoted, irredeemably devoted to his Father's vice, in our stead, and ransoming us by his precious blood, let me be always cheerful and liberal in his work ; but let me never be hasty in my vows, lest I involve myself in difficulties, and repent of my rashness. Never let me covet, for my selfish purposes, that which belongs to the Lord ; but cheerfully pay my vows, without reserve or change. And, though I need not sell my house for his service, yet must I sanctify it to him by his constant worship and fear in the midst of it. And, since I myself have been solemnly devoted to his service, let me never be weary of it, or desire a change of my proprietor ; but, whether I live or die, let me be wholly and only the Lord's.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES,

NUMBERS.

This book is so called because it so largely represents the repeated numbering of the Hebrew warriors, Levites, spies, punished transgressors ; their oblations, booty, and their journies, &c. in the wilderness. It contains, (1) The principal articles of their history for thirty-nine years ; particularly of the numbers, stations, and marching-order, of their tribes ; i. ii. iii. iv. ix. x. : the oblations of their princes at the dedication of the tabernacle ; vii. : the consecration of the Levites ; viii. : observation of the second passover ; ix. : departure from Sinai ; x. : destruction of the murmurers by a fiery pestilence, and the flesh for which they had tasted ; appointment of seventy elders to assist Moses ; xi. : Miriam's leprosy and cure ; xii. : the search of Canaan by spies, and their punishment for a contempt of that promised land ; xiii. xiv. : the punishment of Korah and his companions, and of the people who murmured at it ; xvi. : the budding of Aaron's rod ; xvii. : the behaviour of Moses and Aaron when the people murmured at Kadesh ; refusal of a passage by the Edomites ; and the death of Miriam and Aaron ; xx. : the victory over Arad ; plague of fiery serpents, and cure of their bites ; conquest and division of the kingdoms of Sion and Og ; xxi. xxxii. : the repeated attempts of Balak and Balaam to curse the Israelites, and God's defeating of them ; xxii--xxiv. : the enticement of the Israelites to whoredom and idolatry by Midianitish women, and the revenge thereof in the death of twenty-four thousand Israelites, and the almost utter destruction of the Midianites ; xxv. xxxi. : a third numeration of the Israelites ; xxvi. : a rehearsal of their journies ; xxxiii. : a delineation of their territory in Canaan, and an appointment of twelve princes to divide it ; xxxiv. : (2) With these narratives is intermingled a variety of laws concerning the ejection of unclean persons from the camp ; suspicious of wives for adultery, v. ; Nazariteship, priests' blessing the people, vi. ; lighting of sacred lamps, viii. ; observance of the passover in the second month, ix. ; making and blowing of silver trumpets, x. ; and concerning meat-offerings, drink-offerings, heave-offerings, sin-offerings, stoning for breach of the sabbath, fringes on the borders of their garments, xv. ; sacred portion of the priests and Levites, xviii. ; purification by the ashes of the red heifer, xix. ; inheritance, and marriage of heiresses, xxvii. xxxvi. ; oblations at sacred festivals, xxviii. xxix. ; vows, xxx. ; manslaughterers and cities of refuge, xxxv.

CHAP. I.

The Israelites had been numbered a few months before, when the ransom-money was collected for the service of the tabernacle ; Exod. xxxviii. 26. Now (1) Moses, Aaron, and the twelve princes of their tribes, are appointed of God to number them again, in order to rank them into proper divisions in their camp, to distinguish them from others, and to manifest God's fulfilment of his promises to the patriarchs in the multiplication of their seed ; 1--16. (2) The number of fighting men in every tribe, and the sum of the whole are stated ; 17--46. (3) The Levites are not numbered among them, as they were not to fight but to serve at the tabernacle ; 47--54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 "Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls ;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel : thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be 'a man of every tribe ; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you : 'Of the tribe of Reuben ; Elizur the son of She-deur.

8 Of Issachar ; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun ; Eliab the son of He-lon.

bered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But the Levites after the tribe of their fathers were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel:

50 But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And when the tabernacle setteth forward the Levites shall take it down: and when the tabernacle is to be pitched the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

52 And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

53 But the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony; that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel: and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of the testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

CHAP. II.

Contains (1) The divine appointment for marshalling the numbered Israelites into four squadrons of three tribes each, to pitch their camps round about the tabernacle of God as their centre; 1, 2, 17: viz. (1) The tribes of Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun, in the vanguard or front, on the east of the tabernacle; 3—9. (2) The tribes of Reuben, Simeon, and Gad, on the right wing, southward of the tabernacle; 10—16. (3) The tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin, in the rear, westward behind the tabernacle; 18—24. (4) Those of Dan, Asher, and Naphtali, in the left wing, on the north side of the tabernacle; 25—31. (2) It contains the Israelites' ready obedience to God's appointments; 32—34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

3 ¶ And on the east side toward the rising of the sun shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch throughout their armies: and Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah.

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 Then the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

8 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand and fourscore thousand and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies. These shall first set forth.

10 ¶ On the south side shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben, according to their armies: and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be Elizur the son of Shedeur.

11 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

12 And those which pitch by him shall be the tribe of Simeon: and the captain of the children of Simeon shall be Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

13 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

14 Then the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph the son of Reuel.

15 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were an hundred thousand and fifty and one thousand and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies. And they shall set forth in the second rank.

17 ¶ Then the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward with the camp of the Levites in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place by their standards.

18 ¶ On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—In this numbered people I discern the true Israel of God, numerous as the sand by the sea-shore; all numbered of Jesus, and written in his book of life; all under his government and laws, declared by his prophets and apostles; all ranked in goodly order in their respective generations, for the wars of the Lord; and all honourably distinguished from the world, that lieth in wickedness, and from the mixed multitude of hypocrites. Here likewise I may observe that ministers and magistrates ought to take heed to every one of the flocks over whom the Lord hath made them overseers: that the more honour any one hath conferred upon him, the more active he ought to be in well-doing, according to his station; and to do without delay whatever the Lord requires of him. When I see the numbers of the respective tribes so little proportioned to their families at their entrance into Egypt, about two hundred and fifteen years before, I cannot but think how little even outward things go by common probabilities, and how unstable all created comforts are. When I read the sum total, I see how truly and marvellously God, in a few years, fulfilled his promises in multiplying the patriarchs' posterity, notwithstanding all that the Egyptians could do to diminish them. Who likewise but must admire the liberal kindness of God, in forty years' miraculous maintenance of such multitudes of sinners; while he discerns the destructive nature of sin, which, in forty years, buried them all but two in the earth, and most of them in hell! When I see the Levites distinguished from the rest, let me think how honourably God rewarded their honest zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf; and that ministers ought to be more holy than ordinary saints, to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the sins of others; and that, though they are not to entangle themselves in worldly business, or in intimacy with carnal men, yet they are not to be idle, but spiritual, soldiers of Christ, set for the defence of his church and gospel.

Contains (1) A genealogy of the priests and Levites; 1—4, 17—20: (2) God's donation of the Levites to Aaron and his priestly offspring, as their assistants, instead of the first-born of Israel, whom he had claimed as his property at the departure from Egypt (Exod. xiii.); 5—13. (3) The numbering of the male Levites from a month old and upwards, and the stations and charge assigned to their different families; the Gershonites to pitch just behind the tabernacle westward, and to take care of the curtains and coverings; 14—26: The Kohathites to pitch on the south side; and to have charge of the ark, table, candlestick, altars, and other sacred utensils; 27—32. The Merarites on the north side; and to take care of the boards and bars of the tabernacle; 33—37: and Moses and the priests to pitch eastward at the door of the tabernacle; 38, 39. (4) The actual exchange of the Levites for the first-born, and the redemption of the supernumerary first-born with money; 40—51.

THESE also are the ^agenerations of Aaron and Moses in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, ^cthe priests which were anointed, ^{*}whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 ^dAnd Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD when they offered strange fire before the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 ^eBring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep ^fall the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 ^gAnd thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they ^hshall wait on their priest's office: and ⁱthe stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, I have ^ktaken the Levites from among the children of Israel, instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: ^ltherefore the Levites shall be mine;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What a God of order is our God in all the churches! With unreserved submission ought we to refer to him the choice of our inheritance for us, and the fixing of the bounds of our habitation. Our life on earth is a moveable as well as warlike condition. Here we have no continuing city; let us seek for one to come, which hath foundations, and whose builder and maker is God. But surely it is an high honour to have the presence and ordinances of God amongst us here below. Happy are all his ransomed tribes; they have equal access to him; they are all so marshalled in the church as best answers their abilities; and have God's tabernacle and ordinances placed among them. And it is pleasant and amiable when magistrates, and every one beside in their stations, become protectors and encouragers of the church; and when every thing, both in church and state, is regulated exactly according to the command of God.

17 And these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni, and Shimei.

19 And the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram, and Izehar, Hebron, and Uzziel.

20 And the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli, and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites according to the house of their fathers.

21 Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And the charge of the sons of Gershon, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, 26 And the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and the cords of it for all the service thereof.

27 And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izeharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward.

36 And under the custody and charge of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, keeping the charge of the sanctuary for the charge of the children of Israel: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 All that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand.

40 And the LORD said unto Moses, Number all the first-born of the males of the children of Israel from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

41 And thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the first-born among the children of Israel.

43 And all the first-born males, by the number of names from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

44 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Take the Levites instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

46 And for those that are to be redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the first-born of the children of Israel, which are more than the Levites;

47 Thou shalt even take five shekels apiece by the poll; after the shekel of the sanctuary shalt thou take them: (the shekel is twenty gerahs:)

48 And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron and to his sons.

49 And Moses took the redemption-money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites;

50 Of the first-born of the children of Israel took he the money; a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

Contains (1) The appointment of God for mustering all the serviceable men of the tribe of Levi from thirty to fifty years of age; for their bearing of their respective shares of the tabernacle, and its furniture, when the Israelites should march in the wilderness; particularly of the Kohathites and their charge which, being most holy, was all, except perhaps the brazen laver, to be covered, and not to be touched by them under pain of death; 1—20: of the Gershonites and their charge; 21—28: and of the Merarites and their charge; 29—33. (2) The actual numbering of them in obedience to this command, with the particular and total sums; 34—49.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers,

3 From ^athirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, all that enter into the ^bhost to do the ^cwork in the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 This shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about the most holy things.

5 ¶ And when the camp setteth for ward Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down the ^dcovering vail, and cover the ark of testimony with it:

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall ^eput in the staves thereof.

7 And upon the ^ftable of shew-bread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to ^gcover withal: and the ^hcontinual bread shall be thereon:

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a ⁱcovering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof:

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the ^jcandlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuff-dishes, and all the oil-vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it:

10 And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof, within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.

11 And upon ^kthe golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof:

12 And they shall take all the ^linstruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put ^mthem in a cloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put ⁿthem on a bar:

13 And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon:

14 And they shall put upon it ^oall the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the flesh-hooks, and the shovels, and the ^pbasons, all the vessels of the altar; and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of ^qcovering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward; after that the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: but they shall not ^rtouch any holy thing, lest they die. These ^sthings are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.

16 ¶ And to the office of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, ^tpertaineth ^uthe oil for the light, and the sweet incense, and the daily meat-offering, and the anointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

18 ^vCut ye not off the tribe of the families of the Kohathites from among the Levites:

19 But this do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto the most holy things; Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service and to his burden:

20 But they should not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die.

21 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

22 Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families:

23 From ^wthirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them; all that enter in ^xto perform the service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

24 This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for ^yburdens:

25 And they shall bear ^zthe curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them: so shall they serve.

27 ^{aa}At the ^{ab}appointment of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens and in all their service: and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens.

28 This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation: and their charge shall

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—I bless the Lord, who made an exchange of his only begotten Son for an elect world of first-born men, and caused him to redeem them with his hard service, extending to the whole church, and all the concerns of it. But let the awful punishment of such as have profaned the service of God, as if it had been a common thing, excite me to the utmost reverence, care, and diligence, regulated by the divine command. If my work be hard God will supply me with proper help. If God hath saved my life he hath a right to dispose of me as he pleases, with respect to my station and work: and it is my duty cheerfully to comply, whether my work be more or less hard or honourable: but the greater the honour, the greater is the danger if I mistake. And while I bless God that he hath a tribe of ministers and people, and lament that it is in general by far the smallest, let me, with Moses, shew no ambition to have my own family distinguished in honour, but only in holiness and virtue.

29 ¶ As for the sons of Merari, thou shalt number them, after their families, by the house of their fathers;

* See ver. 3.

30 From ^athirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old shalt thou number them, every one that entereth into the ^yservice, to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation.

31 ^zAnd this is the charge of their burden, according to all their service in the tabernacle of the congregation: the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof,

32 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords, with all their instruments, and with all their service: and by name ye shall reckon the instruments of the charge of their burden.

33 This is the service of the families of the sons of Merari, according to all their service, in the tabernacle of the congregation, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

34 ¶ And Moses and Aaron, and the chief of the congregation, numbered the sons of the Kohathites after their families and after the house of their fathers;

* With ch. 3. 22.

36 And those that were numbered of them by their families were ^btwo thousand seven hundred and fifty.

37 These were they that were numbered of the families of the Kohathites, all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, which Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

38 ¶ And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon, throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers,

39 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation;

* With ch. 3. 22.

40 Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the houses of their fathers, were ^ctwo thousand and six hundred and thirty.

41 These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD.

42 ¶ And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari,

43 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation;

44 Even those that were numbered of them, after their families, were ^dthree thousand and two hundred.

45 These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

46 All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron and the chief of Israel numbered, after their families, and after the house of their fathers;

47 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that came to do the service of the ministry, and the service of the burden, in the tabernacle of the congregation;

48 Even those that were numbered of them, were ^eeight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.

49 ^fAccording to the commandment of the LORD they were numbered by the hand of Moses, ^gevery one according to his service, and according to his burden: thus were they numbered of him, as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. V.

(1) The camp of the Israelites being now formed and sanctified, by the erection of the tabernacle in its centre, divine orders are issued to exclude from it all persons polluted with leprosy or running issues or by dead bodies; 1—4. (2) The laws for restitution of things unjustly gotten, and for appropriation of the hallowed presents to the priests, are repeated; 5—10. (3) A new law is given for the trial of wives suspected of adultery, by water of purification; 11—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel that they ^aput out of the camp every leper, and every one that hath an issue, and whosoever is defiled by the dead:

3 Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, in the midst whereof I dwell.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp: ^bas the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Speak unto the children of Israel, ^cWhen a man or woman shall commit any sin ^{*}that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty;

7 Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God's service, especially in the ministry, is a warfare. He deserves and he requires the best of our time and strength. His ministers ought not to be novices either in knowledge or experience. Apparently insignificant mistakes in their work may cost one his life, nay, his eternal salvation: it is therefore necessary that we should give the strictest attention to the directions of scripture. Distressful is the paucity of God's faithful servants: yet are they in his hand, and he proportions their number and ability to their work. But let me especially rejoice that the whole care of the churches, and of the elect, is upon our Redeemer: not Levites, in the power of their might, but the Almighty Jesus bears and carries us, and all our concerns: not the prudent sons of Aaron, but the only wise Son of God rears and dissolves particular churches on earth; rears and dissolves the particular frames of our spirit; dissolves our bodies in death, and again rears them up in the resurrection. He hath destroyed the veil and face of the covering cast over all people; that it is not now death, but life, for us sinful men to behold, and even enter by faith into the holiest of all! Let us therefore, whether ministers or private Christians, draw near with boldness, and behold, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, that we may be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest; beside ^dthe ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

9 ¶ And every [†]offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.

10 And every man's hallowed things shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be his.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him,

13 And a man ^elie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner:

14 And the ^hspirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled: or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled:

15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley-meal; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, bringing iniquity to remembrance.

16 And the priest shall bring her near, and ^kset her before the LORD:

17 And the priest shall take ^lholy water in an earthen vessel; and of the ^mdust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water:

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and ⁿuncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy-offering: and the priest shall have in his hand ^othe bitter water that causeth the curse:

19 And the priest shall ^pcharge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness ^qwith another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse:

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband;

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, The LORD make thee a ^rcurse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth. ^smake thy thigh to rot, and thy belly to swell;

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot: and the woman shall say, Amen, amen.

23 And the priest shall write these curses ^tin a book, and he shall blot them out with the bitter water:

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse: and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy-offering out of the woman's hand, and shall ^uwave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar:

26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the ^vmemorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, ^wthat the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be ^xa curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean; ^ythen she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

29 ^aThis is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another instead of her husband, and is defiled;

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be ^bguiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall ^cbear her iniquity.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—In these figures I discern that the church of God on earth ought carefully to be purged from scandalous persons and crimes; and that polluted and dishonest sinners shall be excluded from the celestial mansions. How necessary then to put away all filthiness of the flesh and spirit; and to avoid even the most distant approaches towards dishonesty, particularly with respect to Jesus Christ and his ministers! For those who preach the gospel must live by the gospel. Yea, let me avoid every thing which may beget dishonourable suspicions; and, on the contrary, beware of indulging them without sufficient ground. But innocence is the surest comfort and support under the most malignant accusations. How dreadful it is when God's curse is the seasoner of sensual pleasures! Vain is every attempt to conceal our transgressions, for though waters of jealousy are no more, the eye of God can see, and the voice of conscience will speak out. Yea, often God most strangely brings to light the hidden things of darkness; and, however they may escape present censure or punishment, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, and dreadfully punish! Let me therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul: and, if I am unjustly accused, let me commit my cause to God, who judgeth righteously, that he may bring me to the light, and cause me to behold his righteousness. Meanwhile, let me, with the utmost accuracy examine how far I am chargeable with spiritual whoredom or apostasy; and particularly observe whether the cross of Christ, and the afflictions of the gospel, are to me a savour of death unto death or of life unto life.

gar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes or dried :

4 All the days of his separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine-tree, from the kernels even to the husk :

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall come at no dead body:

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the consecration of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration, then he shall shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before shall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite: when the days of his separation are fulfilled, he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

14 And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish for peace-offerings,

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread, anointed with oil, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin-offering and his burnt-offering :

17 And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat-offering and his drink-offering.

18 And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven :

20 And the priest shall wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD: this is holy for the priest, with the wave-breast and heave-shoulder: and after that the Nazarite may drink wine.

21 This is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, besides that that his hand shall get: according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses
saying,

23 Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

24 The LORD bless thee, and keep thee :

25 The LORD make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee :

26 The LORD lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.

27 And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel, and I will bless them.

CHAP. VII.

God having fixed his residence in the midst of the Hebrew camp, the twelve princes of their tribes acknowledge him as their Sovereign, with proper presents. (1) When the tabernacle or pavilion of God is dedicated, they present six covered waggons, for the easy transporting of it; 1—9. (2) When the altar for God's service is dedicated, they each, on his day, offer utensils and oblations correspondent to it; 10—88. (3) The Lord testifies his acceptance of their presents by familiar converse with Moses immediately after; 89.

AND it came to pass on the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle, and had anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified them ;

2 That the princes of Israel, heads of the house of their fathers, who were the princes of the tribes, and were over them that were numbered, offered :

3 And they brought their offering before the LORD; six covered waggons, and twelve oxen; a waggon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—In these Nazarites let me behold the blessed Jesus solemnly separated by himself and his Father to the service of God in our redemption:—Jesus, never defiled with carnal comforts or pleasures, nor intoxicated with sinful lusts or worldly cares, nor polluted by his connection with sinners naturally dead in trespasses and sins:—Jesus, who, for Nazarine hair, hath the most noted graces and good works; yea, hath his people growing up into him as their head:—Jesus, never failing, but persevering in his work, and finishing it in all his all-comprehensive offering of himself for us; and, in his resurrection, laying aside every token of continued subjection to an angry God or broken law. Let these Nazarites let ministers also, let saints, separated to the service of God, learn to deny themselves, mortify the deeds of the body, renounce this world, and the pleasures of sin or sense, and behave as solemnly consecrated to God alone. Let every breach of their vows, through fellowship with dead and unfruitful works of darkness, occasion repeated application to Jesus's purifying blood, and to more diligence in duty. And, after finishing their course, let them thank God for his gracious assistance, account themselves unprofitable servants, and trust only to Jesus's all-sufficient sacrifice of himself as the ground of their hope and joy.—In this priestly benediction of the Hebrews, let me behold Jesus, appointed of God to bless sinful men; yea, becoming blessings to them;—and God discovering his grace, by rendering his ordinances, apparently simple in themselves, effectual for blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ. Let me therefore look only to God for what blessings I need; and by faith hold communion with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in order to the enjoyment of them.

84 This was the ^pdedication of the altar, in the day when it was anointed, by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold:

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed *two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

CHAP. IX.

Contains (1) A repetition of the law for the observance of the passover, now to be kept the second time. (2) A new law for observing it in the second month by such as could not attend it in the first; 6—14. (3) An account of the residence of the pillar of cloud on the tabernacle, and its use for directing the Hebrews in their journeys and rests; 15—23.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Let the children of Israel also keep the passover at his appointed season.

3 In the fourteenth day of this month, at even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel that they should keep the passover.

5 And they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even, in the wilderness of Sinai: according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And there were certain men, who were defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day: and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day:

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They shall leave none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from among his people: because he brought not the offering of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire, until the morning.

16 So it was always: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode there the children of Israel pitched their tents.

18 At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in the tents.

19 And when the cloud tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up they journeyed.

23 At the commandment of the LORD they rested in the tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—In these lighted lamps I behold Jesus endowed with the fulness of the spirits of God, and set up to be the light of the world, the light of the church;—and ministers enlightened in themselves, and set up for lights to others, that they may see to perform the service of the tabernacle. In these Levites I behold Jesus, holy, harmless, and undefiled, solemnly set apart as the surety of elect sinners, to the hard service of his debasement; which being finished, and atonement thus made for his people, and every plague averted from them, he retired to his heavenly rest, to minister, without fatigue, in the sanctuary above.—But with what holiness, and solemn dedication to God, ought ministers to be prepared for their work! How voluntary their call by their people; and how solemn their ordination to their office! Honourable indeed is their service for Jesus and his ransomed people if faithful; they become a remarkable mean of turning away God's wrath from nations and churches; and, if faithful and diligent, while their strength continues, their people ought to support them decently when they become old and infirm; and Jesus Christ will for ever reward them in the heavenly state.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—We need repeated excitements to the most pleasant and solemn services of God; though it is an infinite favour that, in these deserts of trouble, we may keep the Lord's solemn feasts. Those who know their value will delight in the observance, and rejoice to see others hungering and thirsting after God's ordinances, even when hinderances are laid in their way. Ministers ought ever to be careful in debarring scandalous sinners from the seals of the covenant; yet, on the contrary, ever cautious, and attentive to God's word, in determining particular cases. But here let me reflect on the mercy that, though we Gentiles were of old afar off, and in our uncleanness, God hath brought us nigh by the blood of his Son, and hath provided a second, a gospel passover for us! If then we be unavoidably disappointed of public ordinances, let us take the first opportunity of approaching his house or table. Providential hinderances may disappoint us of the means, but cannot, if our hearts be right, deprive us of the grace thereof; God will amply supply our wants some other way: while such as reject God's ordinances will be rejected by him. Habitual neglect of the Lord's supper is a fearful sign of a naughty heart.—Let Jesus, and JEHOVAH in him, be our pillar of cloud, to direct our motions

Exhibits (1) God's injunctions for the making and use of the silver trumpets; 1—10. (2) The orderly march of the Israelites from mount Sinai into the wilderness of Paran; 11—28. (3) Moses' entreaty of Hobab, his brother-in-law, to continue with them; 29—32. (4) Moses' prayer at the removal and resting of the ark, according to the direction of the cloudy pillar; 33—36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Make thee ^atwo trumpets of silver; of ^ba whole piece shalt thou make them; that thou mayest use them for the calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

3 And when they shall blow with them ^call the assembly shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow but with one trumpet, then the princes, who are ^dheads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.

5 When ye blow an alarm, then ^ethe camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.

6 When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the ^fcamps that lie on the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys.

7 ^gBut when the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall blow, but ye shall not sound an alarm.

8 And ^hthe sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations.

9 And if ye ⁱgo to war in your land against the enemy that oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be ^kremembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

10 Also ^lin the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets ^mover your burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings; that they may be to you for ⁿa memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

11 ¶ And it came to pass on the ^otwentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel ^ptook their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai: and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.

13 And they first took their journey ^qaccording to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 ¶ In the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah according to their armies: and over his host was Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And the tabernacle ^rwas taken down; and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, ^sbearing the tabernacle.

18 ¶ And ^tthe standard of the camp of Reuben set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

20 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

21 And the Koathites set forward, ^ubearing the sanctuary: and ^vthe other ^wdid set up the tabernacle against they came.

22 ¶ And the ^xstandard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasse was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideoni.

25 ¶ And the ^ystandard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, ^zwhich ^{aa}was the rereward of all the camps throughout their hosts: and over his host was Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Asher was Pagiel the son of Ocran.

27 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Naphtali was Ahira the son of Enan.

28 ^{ab}Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel according to their armies when they set forward.

29 ¶ And Moses said unto ^{ac}Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.

30 And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my ^{ad}kindred.

31 And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us ^{ae}instead of eyes.

32 And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

33 ¶ And they departed from the ^{af}mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the ^{ag}ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them in the three days' journey, to ^{ah}search out a resting-place for them.

upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.

35 And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, ^kRise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee.

36 And when it rested he said, ^kReturn, O LORD, unto the many thousands of Israel.

CHAP. XI.

Since the affair of the golden calf (Exod. xxxii. xxxiii.) the Hebrews had been generally dutiful and happy: but now, (1) By their unreasonable murmuring, they draw a fiery plague upon themselves, which is removed by Moses' intercession; 1-3. (2) Immediately after, the people are dissatisfied at the manna, and for want of flesh; which last, God, in wrath, bestows on them for a whole month, and renders a destructive plague to them; 4-9, 16-23, 31-35. (3) Provoked by the people's murmuring, Moses grieves for want of help to govern them; and has seventy elders promised, who should be qualified by the Spirit of God, and given to him for his assistants; 10-17, 24-30.

AND when the people ^acomplained it [†]displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled; and the ^bfire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the ^cuttermost parts of the camp.

2 And the people ^dcried unto Moses; and when Moses ^eprayed unto the LORD the fire [‡]was quenched.

3 And he called the name of the place [¶]Taberah; because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

4 ¶ And the ^fmixt multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also [§]swept again, and said, ^gWho shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember ^hthe fish which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul ⁱis ^jdried away; there is nothing at all, besides this manna, before our eyes.

7 And ^kthe manna was as coriander-seed, and the ^{*}colour thereof as the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went ^labout, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and ^mbaked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the ⁿdew fell upon the camp in the night the manna fell upon it.

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and the ^oanger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou ^pafflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, ^qCarry them in thy bosom, as a nursing-father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou swearest unto their fathers?

13 Whence ^rshould I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because ^sit is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, ^tkill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me ^useventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them ^vunto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.

17 And I will ^wcome down and talk with thee there: and I will ^xtake of the spirit which ^yis upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall ^zbear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, ^aSanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, ^bWho shall give us flesh to eat? for ^cit was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD ^dwill give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a ^ewhole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you; because that ye have ^fdespised the LORD who ^gis among you, and have wept before him, saying, ^hWhy came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people among whom I ⁱam are ^jsix hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month:

22 ^kShall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^lIs the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and ^mgathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD ⁿcame down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and ^otook of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass ^pthat, when the spirit rested upon them, they ^qprophesied, and did not cease.

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp; the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them; and they were of them that were written, but went not out unto the tabernacle; and they prophesied in the camp.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

28 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them.

29 And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? would God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and that the LORD would put his spirit upon them.

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

31 ¶ And there went forth a wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten homers: and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

33 And while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people, and the LORD smote the people with a very great plague.

34 And he called the name of that place Kibroth-hattaavah: because there they buried the people that lusted.

35 And the people journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah unto Hazeroth; and ſabode at Hazeroth.

CHAP. XII.

Here (1) Moses hath his patience further tried, by his own brother and sister quarrelling with his marriage and government; 1—3. (2) God calls them to account for their conduct, vindicates Moses, and punishes Miriam, who had been first in the transgression, with a leprosy; 4—10. (3) Aaron submits; and, upon Moses' intercession, Miriam is healed, but is exposed to shame seven days; 11—16.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How often men sin outrageously, immediately after the most solemn exercises; and make the very commandments of Heaven the occasions of such sinning! We often murmur against the dispensations of providence, even without any shadow of reason; nay, in direct contradiction to every reason; for ingratitude is the basest vice. Discontented persons loathe their very blessings, and seem solicitous to make themselves miserable; readily preferring the worst things which God withholds to the best which he bestows; and even the filthy pleasures of sin and sense to his unspeakable gift of grace.—It is a fearful mark of the curse of God upon the heart when men repine amidst plenty! Those, who follow the people of God for base and carnal ends, quickly become murmurers when they meet with disappointments. A mixture of carnal and self-seeking men are ruinous to the church; and a mixture of carnal affections are the plague of the renewed heart. Through these it is that even the greatest saints are apt to lose their temper, extol their service, quarrel with the disposals of providence, and distrust the power and kindness of God, when they meet with great provocations from their fellow-creatures—and to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, when they are especially called to reprove them by a contrary conduct. But God often tries his people, chiefly in respect of their most eminent graces, to humble them and to prove them, when he finds them wanting; for the meekest are ready to wish themselves freed from trials, rather than to glorify God under them; nay, to wish death when their temper is very unfit for it! But how richly God qualifies men for work when he calls them to it! Let me then never grudge to

2 And they said, Hath the LORD indeed spoken only by Moses? hath he not spoken also by us? And the LORD heard it.

3 (Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.)

4 And the LORD spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam, Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out.

5 And the LORD came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth.

6 And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the LORD will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.

7 My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house.

8 With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the LORD shall he behold: wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

9 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against them, and he departed.

10 And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and, behold, Miriam became leprous, white as snow: and Aaron looked upon Miriam, and, behold, she was leprous.

11 And Aaron said unto Moses, Alas, my lord, I beseech thee, lay not the sin upon us, wherein we have done foolishly, and wherein we have sinned.

12 Let her not be as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh out of his mother's womb.

13 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days? let her be shut out from the camp seven days, and after that let her be received in again.

15 And Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days: and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again.

16 ¶ And afterward the people removed from Hazeroth, and pitched in the wilderness of Paran.

any the honours for which God hath fitted him; never condemn the government which God hath appointed; never forbid those who act for the honour of God, even though they follow not with us; nor ever neglect to accept the assistance which God affords me in my work, though it should eclipse my renown! But let me always remember that a curse or frown attends even God's granting of that which men ask in a murmuring and peremptory manner, and that he can easily render created comforts a tremendous and destructive plague!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Too common, but very sinful, are contentions among saints; nor doth any thing produce hotter disputes than jealousy of power. Grace, natural affection, duty, and safety, are all trampled under foot when men strive for grandeur and rule. But God takes a peculiar pleasure in vindicating and honouring his faithful ministers or people. He remarks exactly, and severely avenges, the injuries done to those who, from a meek regard to his law, will not avenge themselves. It is dangerous therefore to revile God's servants: they who do it shall at last be obliged to bow to them, and confess their sin. Yea, often God deals most sharply with his principal favourites when they offend him; and marks the abominable nature of their sin in the filth, pain, or shame of their punishment. But it is becoming when offending saints make the deepest submissions. And acceptable to God, honourable to us, and effectual for our neighbour's advantage, are sincere and affectionate intercessions for those who have injured us. But, even while our sins hinder our heavenly journeys, the Lord will take care of our honour and comfort, if once we be penitent and humble.

CHAP. XIII.

The Hebrews had just come to the south border of Canaan; and here (1) God, provoked by their distrust of his promise and care, commands them to spy out the land by some of their principal men; 1, 2. (2) Moses nominates twelve spies, and instructs them how to search it; 3—20. (3) In forty days they review the whole country, and bring back a remarkably fruitful cluster of grapes; 21—25. (4) All the spies, except Caleb and Joshua, report that, however fruitful the land was, it was impossible for them to conquer the powerful inhabitants and strong cities thereof; 26—33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 *Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ^bruler among them.

3 And Moses, by the commandment of the LORD, sent them from the wilderness of Paran: all those men were ^cheads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: Of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 Of the tribe of Judah, ^dCaleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim, ^eOshea the son of Nun.

9 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu.

10 Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Susi.

12 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called Oshea the son of Nun ^fJehoshua.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way ^gsouthward, and go up into the mountain:

18 And see the ^hland, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents or in strong holds;

20 And what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein or not. And be ye of ⁱgood courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. (Now the time was the time of the first-ripe grapes.)

21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land from the wilderness of ^kZin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto ^lHebron; where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, the children of Anak, were. (Now Hebron was built seven years before ^mZoan in Egypt.)

23 And they came unto the ⁿbrook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a ^obranch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook ^pEshcol because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after ^qforty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to ^rKadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and shewed them the fruit of the land.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with ^smilk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

28 Nevertheless, the people be ^tstrong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great: and moreover, we saw the children of Anak there.

29 The ^uAmalekites dwell in the land of the south: and the Hittites, and the Jebusites, and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains: and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan.

30 And Caleb ^vstilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

31 But the men that went up with him said, ^wWe be not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we.

32 And they brought up an evil ^xreport of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land through which we have gone to search it, is a land that ^yeateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people that we saw in it are ^zmen of a great stature.

33 And there we saw ^athe giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as ^bgrasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.

CHAP. XIV.

Represents the final breach between God and that generation of Israelites, for their unbelief and contempt of the promised land. (1) Crediting the report of the wicked spies, the whole congregation bitterly murmurs against God, and propose returning to Egypt: nor could all that Moses and Aaron, Caleb and Joshua, say, still their tumult; 1—10. (2) God having threatened them with utter and immediate destruction, Moses intercedes for them, and earnestly supplicates mercy and forgiveness; 10—19.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—It is hazardous to indulge our own senses and reasonings rather than simply to submit to the revelations of God; for often the Lord chooses men's delusions, and permits them to be ensnared by their own believing devices. How often are most of those, who are employed in the most important transactions, evil and wicked; and get themselves remarked, chiefly to their lasting dishonour! Yea, the manifold experience of the power of God, and the frequent repetition of his promises, are of little avail with such as have abandoned themselves to the rage of their unbelief. The cowardly heart magnifies every object, and increases every difficulty; and unbelief obstinately concludes every enemy too mighty for us: while zeal for God dares every danger, and faith makes men confident of success. Credit therefore, O my soul, what the Lord hath spoken concerning the heavenly Canaan and my entrance into it. Let me live by faith, not by sight. Let not unbelief and carnal sense, but faith and hope, be my spies, to enter within the vail. And let repeated tastes of grapes from Eshcol, repeated tastes of intimate fellowship with God, make my heart desire to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better.

(3) At Moses' request, God mitigates the sentence; swears that none of that generation, except Caleb and Joshua, should ever enter Canaan; but promises to give it to their children, after their wandering forty years in the wilderness; 20—35. (4) The public and immediate death of the wicked spies, and the discomfiture of such as, contrary to God's command, attempted directly to invade Canaan, confirmed the threatening, and presaged the ruin of the other mutineers; 36—45.

16 Because the LORD was not able to bring this people into the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my LORD be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying, 18 The LORD is long-suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and as thou hast forgiven this people from Egypt even until now.

20 And the LORD said, I have pardoned according to thy word:

21 But, as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, have tempted me now these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice;

23 Surely they shall not see the land which I swore unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoke me see it:

24 But my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.) To-morrow turn you, and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red-sea.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, 27 How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, As truly as I live, saith the LORD, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

29 Your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me,

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I swore to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh and Joshua the son of Nun.

31 But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which ye have despised.

32 But as for you, your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years, and bear your whoredoms, until your carcases be wasted in the wilderness.

34 After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even forty

AND all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or would God we had died in this wilderness!

3 And wherefore hath the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another, Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.

5 Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land.

8 If the LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us: their defence is departed from them, and the LORD is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And the glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them?

12 I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, Then the Egyptians shall hear it; (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they have heard that thou LORD art among this people, that thou LORD art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying, days (each day for a year) shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know ^omy breach of promise.

35 I the LORD have said, ^pI will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 ¶ And the men which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him by bringing up a ^slander upon the land, 37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land ^died by the plague before the LORD.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people ^mourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they ^rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised; for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said, "Wherefore now do ye transgress the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper.

42 Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

43 For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

44 But they ^presumed to go up unto the hill-top: nevertheless ^the ark of the covenant of the LORD and Moses departed not out of the camp.

45 Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, and ^discomfited them, even unto ^aHormah.

CHAP. XV.

To prefigure Jesus' receiving gifts for men, yea, for the rebellious, God here manifests his reconciliation to the Hebrews, by giving them new laws, part of which were to be observed only in Canaan; appointing (1) The stated quantities of the meat-offerings and drink-offerings which were to attend the burnt-offering or peace-offering of a sheep, goat, lamb, or, bullock, presented by an Hebrew or proselyte; 1—16. (2) The heave-offerings of their dough; 17—21. (3) Sacrifices for the sins of ignorance committed by the congregation, or by a particular person; 22—29. (4) The infallible punishment of presumptuous sinners; an instance of which is given in a sabbath-breaker; 30—36. (5) The wearing of fringes on the borders of their garments, as memorials to excite them to an exact obedience to God's laws; 37—41.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—The headstrong and unmortified passions hurry them furiously on to their own ruin: and such as are discomfited with God's providence, and resolve to mend themselves, always make their case worse and worse. Unbelieving murmurers are prone to charge God himself with the most base and malicious designs, and to wish for misery under a pretence of care to avoid it. What an infinite advantage is God's presence and favour! but if he leave us we become an easy prey to every invader. How easy is it when the abused servants of Christ in meekness instruct them that use themselves, if God, peradventure, will give them repentance, to the acknowledging of the truth! Though often they draw upon themselves barbarous treatment from such as they labour to save. But God tenderly remarks the labours of his faithful servants, and interferes for their relief in the critical moment. What a blessing to a nation are those who can effectually plead their case at a throne of grace; wrestle for mercy and forgiveness; and fill their hearts with arguments, from God's own honour, power, declared mercy, and grace, and their own former experience thereof! God is ready graciously to

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^aWhen ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

3 And will make an ^boffering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt-offering, or a sacrifice, in ^{*}performing a vow, or in a free-will-offering, or in your solemn feasts, to make a ^csweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd or of the flock;

4 Then shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring a ^dmeat-offering of ^ea tenth-deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of oil.

5 And the fourth part of an hin of wine for a ^drink-offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt-offering or sacrifice for one lamb.

6 Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat-offering two tenth-deals of flour mingled with the third part of an hin of oil.

7 And for a drink-offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

8 ^{*}And when thou preparest a bullock for a burnt-offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow or peace-offerings unto the LORD;

9 Then shall he bring with a bullock a meat-offering of three tenth-deals of flour mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink-offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD, as ye do so he shall do.

15 ^gOne ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law and one manner shall be for you and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, hear and answer such intercessions, even when he will not forbear shewing his indignation at the sins which have provoked him! He keeps an exact account of men's conduct, that he may reward or punish it in due time. Terribly offensive to him is the contempt and discrediting of his promises, and most effectual for provoking him to abandon the guilty to irretrievable and everlasting ruin! But ringleaders in guilt and presumptuous adventurers, in opposition to God's express command, often fall under distinguished marks of his wrath, and are made pledges of the final destruction of those whom they have seduced to, or encouraged in, sin. Take heed, therefore, O my soul, lest I be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin; lest there be in me an evil heart of unbelief, departing from the living God: and fear, lest, a promise being left me of entering into his rest, I should seem to come short of it through unbelief! But let me be a man of another spirit than the world; and let me singly cleave to and fully follow after, the Lord. If for so doing men revile and persecute me, God will amply reward me with an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you, 19 Then it shall be that, when ye eat of ^bthe bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave-offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the ^cfirst of your dough for an heave-offering; as ye do ^dthe heave-offering of the threshing-floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave-offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have ^eerred, and not observed all these commandments which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even ^fall that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ^gought be committed by ignorance ^hwithout the knowledge of the congregation, that all the congregation shall ⁱoffer one young bullock for a burnt-offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, with his meat-offering and his drink-offering, according to the ^jmanner, and one kid of the goats for a sin-offering.

25 And the ^kpriest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin-offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

27 ¶ And ^lif any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she-goat of the first year for a sin-offering.

28 And the ^mpriest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye ⁿshall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doth ^oought ^ppresumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

31 Because he hath ^qdespised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off; his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And, while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the ^rsabbath-day.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they put him ^sin ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, The man shall be ^tsurely put to death: all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and ^ustoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and ^vbid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue:

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and ^wremember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them; and that ye seek not ^xafter your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring:

40 That ye may remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

41 ^yI am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD your God.

CHAP. XVI.

Here we have God's giving of laws again interrupted by a most terrible mutiny in the congregation. (1) Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, with their accomplices, raise a rebellion against Moses and Aaron. Korah and his Levites contend for the priesthood. Dathan and Abiram refuse to obey the orders of Moses as a leader. Moses appeals in both causes to God's determination; 1—15. (2) While Korah, and his fellow-pretenders to the priesthood, make their presumptuous appearance at the tabernacle for the Lord's decision, he discovers his glory; and had consumed the whole congregation which had taken part with them, had not Moses and Aaron interceded for them; 16—22. (3) God, in a most awful manner, gives judgment against these rebels. Such as continued in their tents were swallowed up alive by the earth: such as presented themselves at the tabernacle were consumed with fire from heaven! Their censers were afterwards formed into plates, as a second covering for the brazen altar, and for a memorial to deter others from invading the priests' office; 23—40. (4) On the morrow after the people upbraided Moses and Aaron as murderers of these rebels, and the Lord punished their sin by a terrible plague; but, by Moses' intercession, and Aaron's offering of incense, it was quickly stopped; 41—50.

NOW ^zKorah the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi; and Dathan and Abiram the sons of Eliab, and On the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men:

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, ^{aa}famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they gathered themselves together ^{ab}against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, ^{ac}Ye take too much lation of the sabbath! Is it not shameful that we should need memorials of obedience to the laws of God, so great and gracious—nay, God, even our own God! Enter then, my soul, into the spirit of these things. While I live on Jesus' flesh and blood, and rely on his atonement alone, let me cheerfully give myself, and all that I have, to the Lord. Never dare to sin against light and love; to violate the sabbath of the Lord my God, by thinking my own thoughts, speaking my own words, doing my own ways, or finding my own pleasures. But let his law be written on my heart; and every providence, every enjoyment, be improved by me as an excitement to holy obedience!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Behold the propriety of a just proportion in our religious services, and the care of God to have his ministers decently provided for! But chiefly behold the agreeable nourishment and heart-cheering consolations of the Holy Ghost, which attend the offering of our Redeemer once for all! Behold the kindness of God, in inviting Gentiles to his church, and pressing their entrance into it in due time, in such a multitude of laws, favourable to strangers! Behold how the Lord must be honoured with the first-fruits of all our substance. But especially behold the indispensable necessity of Christ, as our propitiation for sin, however inadvertently it be committed; and the infinite danger of wilful and presumptuous sinning exemplified in this vio-upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy every one of them, and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

4 ¶ And when Moses heard it he fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah, and unto all his company, saying, Even to-morrow the LORD will shew who are his, and who is holy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do; Take you censers, Korah, and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow: and it shall be that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi:

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the LORD: and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab; who said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover, thou hast not brought us into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the LORD, Respect not thou their offering: I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying, 21 Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment.

22 And they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

25 And Moses rose up, and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; for I have not done them of mine own mind.

29 If these men die the common death of all men, or if they be visited after the visitation of all men, then the LORD hath not sent me.

30 But if the LORD make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit, then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are hallowed.

gainst their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be ^aa sign unto the children of Israel.

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be ^aa memorial unto the children of Israel, that no ^astranger, which is not of the seed of Aaron, came near to offer incense before the LORD; that he be not as Korah and as his company: as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

41 ¶ But ^aon the morrow all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the ^aglory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 ^aGet you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they ^afell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and ^aput on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he ^aput on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he ^astood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, beside them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron ^breturned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and the plague was stayed.

CHAP. XVII.

Enough had been done to deter every Levite from any competition with Aaron and his sons for the priesthood; but perhaps some princes of the other tribes still inclined to be priests to those under their authority: this point is therefore here divinely settled. (1) All the chief princes stand candidates, in their respective rods lying before the ark of the Lord for one night; 1—7. (2) By the miraculous budding of Aaron's rod on the morrow, while the rest continued in their dry and withered state, God marked out Aaron and his family alone to enjoy the priesthood; 8, 9. (3) To commemorate this decision, Aaron's blossoming rod is laid up before the ark, to be exhibited afterwards if need were; 10, 11. (4) The Israelites, not without murmuring, acquiesce in the divine determination, and resolve not to come near God's holy things; 12, 13.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according to the house of ^atheir fathers; of ^aall their princes according to the house of their fathers, twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod ^ashall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation ^bbefore the testimony, where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, ^athat the man's rod whom I ^cshall choose shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel; and ^aevery one of their princes gave him ^aa rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their father's houses, ^aeven twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods [†]before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was ^cbudded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^aBring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the [†]rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 ^aAnd Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, ^bBehold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—It is hard for the best of characters to stand before envy. Unsanctified honours often puff up men to their own destruction: and, if God exalt them above most of their brethren, they can endure to be in subjection to none. Yea, God permits unsanctified professors, especially ministers and magistrates, to go often the most fearful lengths in sin. Every act of disobedience to, or contempt of, God's vicegerents in the church or state, is by him accounted rebellion against himself: and often would sinful nations be utterly ruined, were it not for the intercession of those saints whom they abuse and persecute. But God can, and sometimes does, execute upon presumptuous sinners the most terrible correspondent vengeance. And though, with care, he distinguishes between the more and the less guilty, yet he sets up proper memorials of his judgments, that others may hear, and fear to do so wickedly. But, notwithstanding, hardened sinners, who survive, forget the most awakening alarms, and return to their persecution of God's servants! Yet still, in the most endearing manner, ought we to promote the welfare and salvation of those who have injured us: and, when we are maliciously accused, the greatest comfort is the testimony of a good conscience. How like unto their master Christ do ministers act, when they expose their very lives to prevent the ruin of such as abuse them! And quickly the Lord repents him of the evil, when earnestly entreated by such as, along with himself, are abused by sinners. Let me now, with trembling, remember my faults this day.—How often have I, as these rebels, gone about to establish my own righteousness, and refused to submit to the laws of Christ; and thus attempted to thrust him from his office of priest and king over the people of God, in order that I might usurp his place! How often have I refused to come at his call, and offered strange incense before him! How often, the moment in which I had witnessed the awful vengeance of heaven, and obtained a distinguished deliverance, have I returned to my former iniquities! And remarkably is it of the Lord's mercies that I am not consumed! not swallowed up alive into hell by an opening earth! not burnt with fire from heaven! But here let me admire the wonderful zeal and love of my great High Priest, when he ran from his throne of glory, when he came among dying sinners—himself exposed to all their miseries—to stop the plague of sin, already begun in the woes of life, the stings of conscience, and the sentence of death, and to bring in everlasting righteousness and redemption. How superior his Priesthood! If they did not escape who despised Moses and Aaron, how shall I escape if I despise Jesus the great High Priest, Jesus the King in Zion!

13 Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die. Shall we be consumed with dying?

CHAP. XVIII.

Having fully confirmed the priesthood to Aaron and his sons, God here reminds them (1) What should be their work and charge, and what assistance the Levites should give them in the more servile part of it; 1-7. (2) What should be their wages; what the peculiar perquisites of the priests; what the property of the Levites, and what the priest's share out of it; 8-32.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, Thou and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall ^abear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

2 And thy ^bbrethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee: but thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle; ^conly they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they nor ye also die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and a ^dstranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ^eye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar; that there be ^fno wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

6 And I, behold, I have ^gtaken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: to you they are given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 Therefore thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and within the vail; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift: and ^hthe stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, I also have given thee ⁱthe charge of mine heave-offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them ^jby reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

9 This shall be thine of the ^kmost holy things, reserved from the fire: every oblation of theirs, every meat-offering of theirs, and every sin-offering of theirs, and every trespass-offering of theirs, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee and for thy sons.

10 In the ^lmost holy place shalt thou eat it; every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee.

11 And this is thine; the ^mheave-offering of their gift, with all the wave-offerings of the children of Israel: I have given them unto thee and to thy sons, and to thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: every one that is clean in thy house shall eat of it.

12 ⁿAll the ^obest of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, the first-fruits of them which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee.

13 And whatsoever is ^pfirst ripe in the land, which they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine; every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

14 ^qEvery thing devoted in Israel shall be thine.

15 ^rEvery thing that openeth the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine: nevertheless, the first-born of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.

16 And ^sthose that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, according to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, ^twhich is twenty gerahs.

17 But the ^ufirstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the ^vwave-breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All ^wthe heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is a ^xcovenant of salt for ever before the LORD unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, ^yThou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: ^zI am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

21 ¶ And, behold, I ^{aa}have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth ^{ab}come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin ^{ac}and die.

23 But the Levites shall ^{ad}do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, ^{ae}that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

24 ^{af}But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave-offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—It is very desirable to prevent all disputes among the people of God; but often very difficult to extinguish some men's enmities to what was never theirs. Abundant is the grace of God, who will work miracles to prevent the sin and ruin of such as have rebelled against him; and what a mercy is it when a minister's call to his office is manifested by success therein; and if sinners, even at the last, be brought to repentance! Nothing surely but a remarkable bestowal of gracious influence will effectually all murmurings against the dispensations of God, and bring sinners to submit to them. But in this budding rod let me not only behold the fruitfulness of the Aaronic priesthood, in its usefulness to the people, and the certain succession of priests, while the ceremonial period continued, with the speedy vengeance which overtook the invaders thereof; but let me chiefly remark the eternal, the sole High Priesthood of our Lord Jesus, manifested by the blessed effects of the gospel rod of his strength in the conversion, sanctification, and comfort, of sinful men.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up ^aan heave-offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth part of the tithe.

27 And this your heave-offering shall be reckoned unto you [†]as though it were the corn of the threshing floor, and as the fulness of the wine-press.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering unto the LORD of all your tithes which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave-offering to Aaron the priest.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave-offering of the LORD, of ^aall the ^{||}best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof out of it.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshing-floor, and as the increase of the winepress.

31 ¹And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is ^myour reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

32 And ye shall bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it: neither shall ye ^apollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die.

CHAP. XIX.

Here God prescribes the method of purification from the defilement contracted from dead corpses. (1) Sacred ashes were to be formed from the burning of a red heifer, cedar wood, hyssop, and scarlet wool, with much ceremony; 1—10. (2) To purify from the extremely infectious pollution contracted from dead bodies, water, impregnated with a small quantity of these ashes, was to be sprinkled on the third and seventh day upon an unclean person, besides his washing of himself; and once upon unclean things; under pain of destruction; 11—20. (3) The priest who killed the heifer, and sprinkled her blood; the man who burnt her flesh; he who gathered the ashes; and he that sprinkled or even touched the water of purification; were thereby rendered unclean, and were to wash their clothes; 7, 8, 10, 21.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a ^ared heifer ^bwithout spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which ^cnever came yoke:

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her ^dforth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face:

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and ^esprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times:

5 And one shall ^fburn the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn:

6 And the priest shall take ^gcedar-wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

7 Then ^hthe priest shall wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a ⁱman that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and ^klay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation: for it is a purification for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be ^lunto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that ^mtoucheth the dead body of any ^{*}man shall be unclean seven days.

12 He shall ⁿpurify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever ^otoucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law when a man dieth in a tent: ^pall that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days.

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And ^qfor an unclean person they shall take of the ^rashes of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and [†]running water shall be put thereto in a vessel:

18 And ^sa clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that toucheth a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—The ministerial work is necessary and important; and the greatest care and diligence is necessary to render a person faithful in it. He must not only put away sin from himself, but take all care to prevent it in others. And extensive is the account that must be given to God, not only for himself, but for others under his care. How needful then is it that all in their stations, particularly parents, masters, and magistrates, should exert themselves to render the ministry comfortable and successful! God will have his servants decently provided for in the church, and in the heavenly state!

nor will ever a godly people fail to make a liberal provision for a gospel ministry. But base are the minds of those ministers, who, having a competency, entangle themselves with the affairs of this life, or desire to excuse themselves from being charitable out of what God hath brought to their hand! And may I not also, in all this, discern the extensive charge, faithful labours, and glorious rewards, of my Redeemer; and his improvement of all to his Father's honour, and his people's good!

CHAP. XX.

For about thirty-seven years we have almost nothing recorded of Israel's travels, or God's providences towards them. Now, in the beginning of the fortieth, (1) Miriam dies, and the Israelites murmur for water; 1-5. (2) While God engages his power and pity to supply them, Aaron and Moses, by their unbelief, and other misbehaviour in procuring it, provoke him to exclude them from Canaan; 6-13. (3) Notwithstanding the Israelites' humble and repeated requests, the Edomites refuse them a passage through their country into Canaan; 14-21. (4) Aaron dies upon mount Hor; his son Eleazar succeeds him, and the Israelites lament his death; 22-29.

THEN came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there.

2 ¶ And there was no water for the congregation: and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

3 And the people chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they fell upon their faces: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes, and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This is the water of Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was sanctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us:

15 How our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us and our fathers:

16 And when we cried unto the LORD he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt: and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border:

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's highway, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high-way: and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only (without doing any thing else) go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel turned away from him.

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying,

24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Behold, how polluted are men, dead in trespasses and sins—much more abominable than the beasts that perish! To carnal reasoning some of God's ordinances appear absurd. How strange is it to make ashes, mingled with water, the mean of purification from the deepest defilement! But it is infinitely dangerous to contemn the least of his institutions. These ceremonies are indeed insufficient to take away sin, for the most remarkable of them for atonement or purification spread the defilement! But the meaning here is concerning Christ and his church. Being apprehended by the chief priests and elders of Israel, slain without the camp, burnt in the furnace of his Father's wrath; and his blood, his life, offered to God for the satisfaction of his justice; the virtue of his death, connected with the clean water, the pure influences of his Spirit, doth, in all generations, purge his people's consciences, and all their concerns, from dead works to serve the living God. Let it be then the care of my soul to begin, continue, and end my life, with a believing application thereof. It is death; it is damnation, if I neglect it. Having fellowship with him in his resurrection, by justification and regeneration, I shall, in due time, enter on his eternal sabbath, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came 29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

CHAP. XXI.

Here (1) The Israelites are attacked by Arad, a Canaanitish king; against whom, by means of a vow, they at last prevail: 1—3. (2) For murmuring at their way, and their food, they are plagued with fiery serpents; but on their repentance, have a brazen serpent erected, as an effectual mean of cure: 4—9. (3) They march forward several stages; and at Beer find excellent water: 10—20. (4) Entering Canaan, taken in its largest signification, they conquer the kingdoms of Sihon and Og on the east of Jordan, and take possession thereof: 21—35.

AND when king Arad the Canaanite, who dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came by the way of the spies, then he fought against Israel, and took some of them prisoners.

2 And Israel vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place Hormah.

4 ¶ And they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red Sea, to compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way.

5 And the people spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul loatheth this light bread.

6 And the LORD sent fiery serpents among the people; and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses,
Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole; and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sun-rising.

12 From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the LORD, *What he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon,

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab.

16 And from thence they went to Beer:
that is the well whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 Then Israel sang this song, Spring up, O well; sing ye unto it:

18 The princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the lawgiver, with their staves. And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah:

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel: and from Nahaliel to Bamoth:

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country of Moab, to the top of Pisgah, which looketh toward Jeshimon.

21 ¶ And Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

22 Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well: but we will go along by the king's high-way until we be past thy borders.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Much of our time is spent as a tale that is told, passed away in God's wrath, without any thing worth remarking. And death at length makes quick and repeated inroads in families which have been long forborne. Miriam, Aaron, and Moses, now die all in one year. And, as it was with them, so God often writes indignation upon the death of his own people, who are saved in the Lord their God: for in the chastisement of his choicest saints he is severely strict, as, indeed their sins dishonour him in a distinguished manner. Children readily imitate their parents in their wickedness. Bad customs and tempers cleave close to men, and shew themselves whenever an occasion presents itself: and those are often ready to wish for death who are very unfit for it. Men's principal friends are often treated the worst; but the mercy and power of God are exerted for the relief of sinful rebels against him. Yet, alas! how prone are the best of men to unbelief under long or repeated trials, and to passion under great provocations! And often reproaches, just in their matter, may be very sinful in their manner. How lasting are quarrels between families and nations; and how inveterate the hatred of Edomites of the world against the church and people of God! Little of earthly comforts can we hope for in our way to the Canaan above! But when believers look most beautiful on the borders of the grave, and when faith disarms death of all its terrors—when they depart deliberately and cheerfully into the joy of our Lord—how comely and how comfortable! And it is a peculiar joy to dying ministers to see the cause of God transmitted into the hands of zealous and faithful successors.

But let me not bid adieu to Aaron, the saint of God, till I behold in him, as in a figure, Jesus, the great High Priest of my profession! Seasonable and divinely solemn was his call to his work! With an unmeasurable unction of the Holy Ghost, and perfect purity of nature, was he prepared for it. By his miracles; his destruction of his Jewish and Gentile opposers; by the marvellous influence of the gospel-rod of his strength: is his office confirmed and ratified of God! He delivers his chosen tribes from spiritual slavery; justifies and sanctifies them; leads them up through this wilderness world; and he can well speak to their respective cases and doubts. He is our sole High Priest, and the spiritual Father of all such as are made priests unto God; and with amazing holiness, courage, labour, patience, and pity, he executes his work. At the expense of his life he averted the plague of infinite vengeance from his unreasonable abusers: and, having finished his work of obedience, he publicly and willingly, upon mount Calvary, resigned himself unto death, leaving his robes of finished righteousness to his spiritual seed.

23 And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.

27 Wherefore they that speak in *§*proverbs say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is a *§*fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Wo to thee, Moab! thou art undone, O people of *h*Chemosh! he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We have shot at them; Heshbon is perished even unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.

31 Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out *l*Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

33 ¶ And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, Fear him not: for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they smote him and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

CHAP. XXII.

Here (1) Balak, king of Moab, afraid lest the Israelites, now encamped on his border, should also seize on his country, calls Balaam, a noted sorcerer of Mesopotamia, to implicate ruin upon them, that they might be destroyed: but God prohibits Balaam from going with his messengers; 1—14. (2) Balak, by more honourable messengers, and larger proffers of reward, again invites Balaam, who goes with them; but, by the speech of his ass, and by an express intimation of his mind, God checks him in the way, and charges him to take heed what he did; 15—35. (3) Balak gives Balaam an hearty and solemn reception; but is informed by him that perhaps God might not permit him to curse the Israelites, even when he had come for that purpose; 36—41.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Continued courage and dependance upon God are highly necessary, that at last we may prove more than conquerors. Religious vows, when properly conducted, are likewise sometimes profitable. But upon what inconsiderate temptations, prevailing lusts, formerly punished, again break forth! Often the long continuance of God's mercies with men render them cheap in their eyes. But let us remember it is hazardous to offend God, who hath so many instruments of vengeance at his beck; and that sufferings for sin should lead us to repentance for it; especially since God is so ready to forgive the penitent, and to turn away his wrath. But, O unspeakable mercy! as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so Jesus Christ, the

AND the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab on this side Jordan by Jericho.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And Moab was sore afraid of the people, because they were many: and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the face of the earth, and they abide over against me:

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people, for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I know that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me: and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

9 And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying, 11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: Come now, curse me them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get ye into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zip-

Son of man was lifted up on a cross, and is now lifted up in the gospel, for the cure of all those deadly maladies contracted from the seduction of the old serpent the devil—when we look to him by faith! In all our wanderings on earth God can grant us wells of comfort, and fill our mouths with his praise; he can bestow noted victories in favour of his people, even on this side death. And what easy work it is to conquer the strongest enemies when God's time is come, and he performs all things for us! Yet in these victories let me observe, that they, who intend mischief to others, often fall into the pit which themselves have digged; that worldly possessions are changeable and frail; and especially that ill-gotten gain is seldom long enjoyed!

por, || Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me.

17 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled because he went: and the angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.

23 And the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD she fell down under Balaam: and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD opened the mouth of the ass; and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

30 And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, upon which thou hast ridden ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out to withstand thee, because thy way is perverse before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it displease thee, I will get me back again.

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, Go with the men: but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? Wherefore camest thou not unto me? Am I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

39 And Balaam went with Balak; and they came unto Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

CHAP. XXIII.

Unknown to Moses and his people, Balak and Balaam are here labouring to ruin them, while God exerts his power to preserve them. (1) Altars are built, and sevenfold sacrifices offered, in order to promote the destructive cursing of them; but God, to Balaam's great grief, compels him to bless them; 1—12. (2) Balaam and Balak make a second attempt, in the same manner, to curse them; but God again compels Balaam to bless them, extol their God, and foretell their subduing of all their opposers; 13—26. (3) At Balaam's advice, the wonted preparations are made for a third attempt to curse them; 27—30.

AND Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven oxen and seven rams.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken: and Balak and Balaam offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, Stand by thy burnt-offering, and I will go:

most presumptuous claims to God, and pretence of high regard to his will, are used when they would gladly counteract it. Wicked messengers indeed rarely report the whole of the truth as it really is: and the Lord often apparently indulges dissemblers in their own way, and permits them to follow the course which he had once prohibited: and how fond are they with eagerness to follow his permission, and even go beyond it! The brute creation are often endangered, and suffer for man's sin; even by the wickedness of those to whom they have been assistant. But vain is every attempt to destroy the church while her God can so easily check it. In the most unexpected form he can rebuke such as think to oppose him, however hearty sinners may be in their evil work, or liberally kind to such as they hope will assist them in it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Relations by blood are sometimes the bitterest enemies to one another; and seek to ruin those who might expect kindness from them. The most awful things in religion, imprecations of divine wrath not excepted, are often transformed into ordinances of the devil: and sinners, with great expense and toil, court the assistance of hell, when they might have freely from heaven whatever they need. Yea, great men, who scorn to worship their Maker, frequently cringe as slaves to the very slaves of the devil! What inestimable value do carnal men put upon earthly riches and honours, as if these were sufficient to determine to any thing! And there is great need to realize eternal things, that nothing temporal may be able to decoy us. But religion is sometimes put on as a cloke by those who have no real regard to it. And the peradventure the LORD will come to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And he went to an high place.

4 And God met Balaam; and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt-sacrifice, he and all the princes of Moab.

7 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, Come, curse me Jacob, and come, defy Israel.

8 How shall I curse whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy whom the LORD hath not defied?

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

10 Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all: and curse me them from thence.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah, and built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt-offering while I meet the LORD yonder.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt-offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

19 God is not a man that he should lie, neither the son of man that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and he hath blessed, and I cannot reverse it.

21 He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: the LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king is among them.

22 God brought them out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn.

23 Surely there is no enchantment against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 ¶ And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, Told not I thee, saying, All that the LORD speaketh that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of Peor, that looketh toward Jeshimon.

29 And Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

CHAP. XXIV.

Here (1) Notwithstanding all preparations to the contrary, Balaam, directed by God, again blesses the Israelites, and foretells their fruitfulness, honour, conquests, dominion, courage, and safety; 1—9. (2) Balak, now quite enraged, dismisses Balaam from his service; 10, 11. (3) Balaam having offered his excuse for his conduct, leaves with Balak some predictions of Israel's and the Messiah's glory, and of the destruction of the Moabites, Edomites, Amalekites, Assyrians, Greeks, and Romans; 12—25

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and the spirit of God came upon him.

3 And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, their God till they who hate the life will wish to die the death of the righteous. But, alas! how obstinate and unwearied are sinners in their wicked courses, and in running from one refuge of lies to another! And it is always necessary for the saints to watch and pray, since, unknown to them, their enemies may be adding one attempt after another to destroy them.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. He would not again, in his magical and superstitious manner, consult God, but resolved to curse them without asking God's leave.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—What a costly parade in religion will the worst of men make, in order to obtain their wicked ends! But fearful is their disappointment who think to make God their debtor by their services. All instruments are in his hands, and he can indulge to hypocrites the most amazing manifestations of himself, when it is for the advantage of his people; or make use of the worst of instruments to carry on his most excellent works. But beautiful is the appearance of God's church when every thing therein is regulated according to his prescriptions. Happy and safe are they who have the gracious, the almighty, and faithful, God for their protector and portion: though troops overcome them, they shall overcome at the last; and be more than conquerors through him that loved them: he will make their enemies to acknowledge the sovereign dominion unchanging care, and almighty power of Ver. 6—8. These predictions not only respect the glorious state of the Jews under Joshua, David, Solomon, Asa, Jehoshaphat, &c.; but also represent the extent, flourishing state, remarkable increase, and marvellous power, of the spiritual kingdom of Christ.

Ver. 17—19. These predictions had their accomplishment in the victories and conquests of the Hebrews over the Moabites or Edomites, and neighbouring nations, in the days of Ehud, Gideon, and Jephthah; Judg. iii. vii. xi. David, 2 Sam. v. viii. x. Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xx. 2 Kings iii. Uziah, 2 Chron. xxvi.; and after the Chaldean captivity, in the time of Hyrcanus and Alexander Jannæus; and perhaps may have a further literal accomplishment when the Jews take possession of Canaan. They may also relate to the conquests of the heathen nations to Jesus Christ under the New Testament.

Ver. 20. The Amalekites were once one of the principal nations around Canaan, and were the first who attacked the Israelites; and therefore gradually destroyed by them in the days of Gideon, Saul, David, Hezekiah, and Esther.

Ver. 21. Perhaps these Kenites were not the posterity of Jethro, but rather an Arabian tribe, who were neighbours to the Amalekites, and were at last carried captives by the Assyrians, about the time of Hezekiah or Manasseh.

Ver. 24. This was fulfilled when first the Greeks, and afterwards the Romans, invaded Asia, subdued Assyria, Canaan, and the places about; and when their respective empires were, not long after, brought to ruin; the Greeks about one hundred years before Christ, and the Romans about A.D. 476; and of the Most High, who saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open :

17 I shall see him, but not now : I shall behold him, but not nigh : there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.

18 And Edom shall be a possession ; Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies ; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was the first of the nations, but his latter end shall be that he perish for ever.

21 And he looked on the Kenites ; and took up his parable, and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock :

22 Nevertheless, the Kenites shall be wasted, until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas, who shall live when God doth this !

24 And ships shall come from the coast of Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and returned to his place : and Balak also went his way.

CHAP. XXV.

Because God would not suffer Balaam to hurt the Israelites by his curse, before his departure he counselled Balak how he might cause them to ruin themselves. Hence (1) By the Moabitish and Midianitish women, who frequented their camp, the Israelites are seduced into whoredom and idolatry ; 1—3. (2) Their sin is punished with the hanging of a thousand by the magistrates, and with the death of about twenty-three thousand more by a plague from God ; 4, 5, 9. (3) The zeal of Phinehas in slaying two impudent transgressors, stops the plague, and procures to himself honour from God, and a lasting grant of the High Priesthood ; 6—15. (4) God commands the Hebrews to destroy the Midianitish nation, whose women it seems had been the principal seducers ; 16—18.

AND Israel abode in Shittim, and the people begun to commit whoredoms with the daughters of Moab.

2 And they called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods : and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor : and the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, will be more fully accomplished in the ruin of the Popish and Turkish empires.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Wretched indeed are those who are, by their conscience, excluded from the carnal enjoyments of this world, and notwithstanding live in those lusts which will exclude them from heaven : for great light may abound in the head when there is nothing but naughtiness in the heart. Often sinners are proud of those gifts which God bestows upon them for the benefit of his people : and their knowledge, being cursed, is an effectual hindrance of true wisdom. But numerous and large are the blessings which God bestows upon his chosen people ! they may be an eye-sore to Satan and his agents ; yet God lays an effectual restraint upon their most inveterate enemies ; and he will at last convince his opposers of the emptiness and folly of all their devilish devices for thwarting his purposes or annoying his people. What infinite knowledge is there in God ! he perfectly discerns every circumstance of nations and persons, ages unnumbered, before there is the smallest appearance thereof. He sees all changes to the end, all the destruction and havoc which sin will make in the world of one nation after another. But blessed be the Lord, who hath raised up an Horn of salvation in the house of his servant Jacob ;—a Star to enlighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of his people Israel ; a Captain of salvation, to go forth conquering and to conquer. But let me not dismiss this eastern sorcerer Balaam, with his high pretences to religion, his glorious speeches, and his noted intimacy with God, without seriously inquiring, What am I—what have I—what do I—what desire I—more than He ?

Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto the judges of Israel, Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 And when Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement for the children of Israel.

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri the son of Salu, a prince of a chief house among the Simeonites.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cosbi the daughter of Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Vex the Midianites, and smite them:

18 For they vex you with their wiles, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cosbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, who was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

CHAP. XXVI.

The plague just mentioned having finished the ruin of the unbelieving despisers of the promised land, (1) God commands Moses and Eleazar the high priest to number the Israelites a third time; and a register of the families, and numbers of each tribe, (some-increased, some decreased, since last reckoned) and of the sum total, is inserted; 1—51. (2) God directs them to divide the promised land, when conquered, by lot, and in proportion to the numbers in tribes and families; 52—56. (3) The Levites, who were to have no inheritance, are numbered and registered by themselves; 57—62. (4) Express notice is taken that God's threatening (chap. xiv.) had been fulfilled in the death of all those who had been numbered at Sinai, about thirty-nine years before; 63—65; and the terrible death of Dathan, Abiram, Korah, Nadab, and Abihu, is particularly commemorated; 9, 10, 61.

AND it came to pass, after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

2 Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, from twenty years old and upward, throughout their father's house, all that are able to go to war in Israel.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram which were famous in the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

are the more aggravated and hurtful is their offence. A well-timed and prudent zeal for the honour of God, in opposition to prevailing abominations, is a remarkable blessing to nations and churches. And God greatly honours and rewards such as dare to be bold and impartial in his cause for ridding a land of sin, and rescuing it from plagues. But friendship in sin quickly issues in mutual hatred and ruin: and tempters to sin are tormented with trouble. But in Phinehas may I not discern Jesus, whose zeal for his Father's house, and for the destruction of sin, and the salvation of men, did as it were consume him who, for destroying the works of the devil, hath everlasting honours bestowed upon him and his spiritual seed: and an everlasting covenant of priesthood established with him as the reward of his work?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—If the devil's agents prevail not against the church one way, they will try another. But let us remember that no enchantment can hurt us but that of our own lusts; that one sin leads to another; and that few temptations are more dangerous than the lustful love of women. If once the heart be ensnared, the miserable slave of lust and beauty may be enticed to any thing sinful. Nothing more endangers the soul's final apostasy from God than yielding to the solicitation of fleshly lusts; nor doth any thing more effectually secure the vengeance of God, and damnation of hell. Yea, general distempers and loathsome diseases are the fruit of general and loathsome iniquities; and such sinners quickly become impudent in their crimes. It is necessary therefore to punish sins with great impartiality, as the higher men

No mention having been made of females in the late directions for the division of Canaan, here (1) The daughters of Zelophehad insist that they, as heirs to their father, may have a portion: and God enacts a law in their favour, constituting the daughters as heirs where no sons are surviving; 1—11. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—It is safe to number the people, or to do any thing else, when God requires it. Sin only is dangerous: it is this that ruins and destroys, yea, brings lasting and public infamy upon such persons as might otherwise have been of great usefulness and fame. What alteration providence makes in families, tribes, and nations, and what havock death makes of mankind, in a short time! Exactly, though gradually, are the threatenings of God's word accomplished; but, amidst, all the changes of this world, his faithfulness abides the same: yea, with care and wisdom, he fixes even the outward lot of his people; and the promises of his grace are sure to all the seed; and in the enjoyment of them we ought therefore to be attentive to his sovereign disposal.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The Hebrews were now mustered for conquering Canaan; the laws were given for the division of it; the governor, to conduct them in both, was appointed. In this and the following chapters orders are given for always carrying their religion along with them. Here we have brief prescriptions concerning the sacrifices and oblations to be offered. (1) Every day, morning and evening, and which were in no case to be omitted; 1—8, 10, 15, 23, 31. (2) Every weekly sabbath; 9, 10. (3) At every new moon, or on the first day of every month; 11—15. (4) Every year, at the passover and feast of unleavened bread; 16—25; and at pentecost; 26—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, My offering, and my bread for my sacrifices made by fire, for a sweet savour unto me, shall ye observe to offer unto me in their due season.

3 ¶ And thou shalt say unto them, This is the offering made by fire which ye shall offer unto the LORD; two lambs of the first year without spot †day by day, for a continual burnt-offering.

4 The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning, and the other lamb shalt thou offer at †even;

5 And a tenth part of an ephah of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil.

6 It is a continual burnt-offering, which was ordained in mount Sinai for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

7 And the drink-offering thereof shall be the fourth part of an hin for the one lamb: in the holy place shalt thou cause the strong wine to be poured unto the LORD for a drink-offering.

8 And the other lamb shalt thou offer at even: as the meat-offering of the morning, and as the drink-offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

9 ¶ And on the sabbath-day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering, mingled with oil, and the drink-offering thereof:

10 This is the burnt-offering of every sabbath, beside the continual burnt-offering, and his drink-offering.

11 ¶ And in the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt-offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot;

12 And three tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth-deals of flour for a meat-offering mingled with oil, for one ram;

13 And a several tenth-deal of flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering unto one lamb, for a burnt-offering of a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

14 And their drink-offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt-offering of every month throughout the months of the year.

15 And one kid of the goats for a sin-offering unto the LORD shall be offered, beside the continual burnt-offering and his drink-offering.

16 ¶ And in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the LORD.

17 And in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

18 In the first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein:

19 But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire for a burnt-offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: they shall be unto you without blemish:

20 And their meat-offering shall be of flour mingled with oil: three tenth-deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth-deals for a ram;

21 A several tenth-deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs:

22 And one goat for a sin-offering; to make an atonement for you.

23 Ye shall offer these beside the burnt-offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt-offering.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire of a sweet savour unto the LORD: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt-offering and his drink-offering.

25 And on the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work.

26 ¶ Also in the day of the first-fruits, when ye bring a new meat-offering unto the LORD, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—With these daughters of Zelophehad let me manifest a strong faith in the promises of God, a strong desire after the better country, and a tender regard to my parents' honour; so shall my labour not be in vain in the Lord. While I observe that it is appointed for all men once to die; that God's principal favourites are often most severely chastised for their sin: but that in death believers retire to their best friends, to their unchanging and eternal rest;—while I profit by the death of others, whom I have seen depart before me in peace and comfort;—let me, with Moses, kindly accept God's warnings of my own death.—Let me manifest a deep concern for the welfare of the church after I am gone; and rejoice that Jesus liveth, and is appointed of God as her Governor, to put all her true members in possession of the promised rest.—And let me, with Joshua, cheerfully comply with God's call to the hardest work, and always act according to his inspired directions.

CHAP. XXX.

Here God directs, to the heads of the tribes, the laws concerning vows, as it became them to instruct the people, and call them to account for breach of vows or oaths. (1) In general every vow was to be punctually fulfilled; 1, 2. But (2) The vows of daughters under age are declared not binding, if at the time of hearing them they are disallowed by their father; 3—5; and the vows of wives, if in the same manner disallowed by their husbands; 6—16.

AND Moses spake unto the ^aheads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, ^bThis is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

2 If a man ^cvow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond: he shall not *break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

3 ¶ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her; then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if ^dher father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand: and the LORD shall forgive her because her father disallowed her.

6 ¶ And if she had at all an husband when ^eshe vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it: then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void, and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, ^fher husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day, then he establisheth all her vows, or all her reproach, distress, persecution by men, temptation and harassment by devils, and under an infinite load of sins imputed, curses of God fixed, and wrath inflicted on him.—Thus all my sins, all the sins of an elect world, were transferred on the Son of God, satisfied for by him, removed from him and from us, in our respective justification, destroyed in us by sanctification, marvellously improved by Providence for our good, and their fruits shall be finally and perfectly abolished in our glorification. Thus a great and everlasting salvation was effected for sinful men,—for ME,—devised in God's ancient counsel of peace, purchased with the blood of his Son, freely offered in the gospel, powerfully applied by the Holy Ghost, and in time and eternity is enjoyed in full right of marriage, law, and sonship, and in the most delightful possession. Thus the spirituality, self-existence, infinity, eternity, unchangeableness, independency, sovereignty, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth, of the most High, the great JEHOVAH, are vindicated from all reproach, all the injury done to them by sin is fully resented, and themselves glorified to the highest; and in consequence hereof they all appear smiling and breathing forth unbounded love and mercy to sinful men,—to sinful me. Thus a redeeming Godhead in all his persons, perfections, purposes, works, fulness, and property, is offered to bestowed on, enjoyed, and to be for ever enjoyed, by rebellious men, by rebellious me, as my ALL and in ALL.—Let me then observe that my whole life whether I fast, or whether I feast, whether I weep, or whether I rejoice, ought to be a life of faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and thus gave himself for me; and that, while I study to have as many solemn feasts on his death as I can, I ought never, morning or evening, to neglect the daily service of God in my closet and my family.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—In these numerous and complex oblations, and their often repeated occasions, I remark the insufficiency of the Jewish ceremonies. Yet I cannot but behold and admire the one oblation of the Redeemer himself, so fully satisfying to justice, expiating sin, procuring peace, and purchasing life and comfort, for every believer. In virtue and usefulness so answerable to, but in glory so infinitely transcending, them all,—But while I travel through such groups of typical feasts and oblations, let me, illuminated by gospel light, stop to behold in them the blessed new covenant of grace; let me view it in its gracious origin, glorious parties, wonderful construction, important parts, condition and promise; its wise, effectual, and infinitely useful administration, and its delightful properties; as all my salvation and all my desire! Here let me contemplate Jesus in his savoury and saving names, his wonderful natures, his glorious person as God-man, his endearing excellencies and qualifications, his saving offices of Mediator, Saviour, Redeemer, Prophet, Priest, and King, and his heart-captivating relations to God and men; let me consider his infinitely diversified, but necessary, states of humiliation and exaltation, his delightful labours of love in undertaking for us, assuming our nature, obeying and suffering in our stead, rising from the dead, ascending to glory, appearing in the presence of God as our advocate, and returning to judge the world, to complete and carry to the highest our eternal salvation; while I admire all his fulness, natural or communicative, as lodged in him for sinful men. Let me behold the ten commandments as a broken covenant of works fulfilled, magnified, and made honourable for me, in having the Lawgiver himself, its obedient subject, fulfilling at once both its precept and penalty in the highest degree, and in the most disadvantageous circumstances, amidst poverty, bonds, which are upon her; he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them, then he shall ^ebear her iniquity.

16 These are the statutes which the LORD commanded Moses between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

CHAP. XXXI.

Contains the history of the Israelites' sacred war with the Midianites. (1) At God's command a thousand men of war out of each tribe are mustered, and marched under the command of Phinehas the zealous priest; 1—6. (2) By God's assistance they easily cut off most of the Midianites; but spare the women; for which Moses chides them on their return; and appoints all the women, except virgins, to be put to death; 7—18. (3) According to God's direction the warriors purify themselves before their return into the camp; 19—24. (4) By his order the great spoil they had taken is divided; half to the warriors, half to their brethren of the congregation; and a part of each share to the Lord; 25—47. (5) The officers in this expedition, finding that not one of their troops had been lost, devote a part of their share of the spoil for a thank-offering to the Lord; 48—54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ^aAvenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou ^bbe gathered unto thy people.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and ^cavenge the LORD of Midian.

4 ^dOf every tribe a ^dthousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.

5 So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and ^ePhinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand.

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and ^fthey slew all the males.

8 And they slew ^gthe kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba; five kings of Midian:

^hBalaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they ⁱburnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they took all the ^jspoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, ^kwent forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses was ^lwroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the ^mbattle.

15 And Moses said unto them, ⁿHave ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, ^othese caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.

17 Now therefore ^pkill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying ^qwith him.

18 But ^rall the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

19 And ^sdo ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And ^tpurify all your raiment, and all ^uthat is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war who went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 ^vOnly the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead,

23 Everything that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless, it shall ^wbe purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water.

24 ^xAnd ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey ^ythat was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:

27 And divide the prey into ^ztwo parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

28 And levy a ^{aa}tribute unto the LORD of the men of war who went out to battle: one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep:

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for ^{ab}an heave-offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—In order to our more perfectly obeying what the Lord requires of us by his sovereign authority, it is often useful and necessary that we bind ourselves by new bonds of self engagement: and the obligation of such engagements is solemn and awful, and therefore should be made with great deliberation, and care be taken that the fulfilment thereof no way interfere with any relative duty. God hates robbery for burnt-offering, and pays the strictest attention to the peace and order of families. Let therefore all my vows be well considered, and important. Let them proceed from a serious consulting with Jesus Christ as my father and husband, in solemn prayer and careful searching of his word. In all my religious concerns let me pay the strictest regard to relative duties; and, having opened my mouth unto the Lord, never dare to go back again from my vows.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep,

33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,

34 And threescore and one thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep :

37 And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave-offering, unto Eleazar the priest, as the LORD commanded Moses.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, thousand, and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

47 Even of the children of Israel's half Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, who kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 ¶ And the officers who were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses :

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war who are under our *charge, and there lacketh not one man of us.

50 We have therefore brought an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath †gotten, of jewels of gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, to make †an atonement for our souls be-

51 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the †offering^b that they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 †(For the men of war had taken^c

54 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, for a^d memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD.

CHAP. XXXII.

Here (1) The tribes of Reuben and Gad humbly supplicate a settlement for themselves on the east of Jordan, where the Israelites were encamped; 1—5. (2) Moses, suspecting that they intended to remain at home, and give themselves no further trouble in the conquest of Canaan, remonstrates against their request, as extremely unbrotherly and dangerous; 6—15. (3) They explain and state their proposals, to the full satisfaction of Moses and their brethren; and engage that all their warriors shall attend and assist their brethren till the whole promised land be conquered; 16—32. (4) Upon this express condition, they and the half tribe of Manasseh have the kingdoms of Sihon and Og parted among them, and repair the cities thereof; 33—42.

the children of Gad had a very REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—Short-lived is success in sinning, and at last most dearly bought. Enticers to sin therefore ought to be held as our worst enemies, and treated accordingly: especially since God takes the greatest delight in comforting and honouring those who have been singularly zealous for his cause. And it is easy for him to accomplish great exploits, whether by many or by few. Our humane tenderness, carried to an excess, often spares our most dangerous enemies and the most guilty criminals. But every thing, even in war, ought to be conducted with a sacred regard to religion, strict equity, and brotherly kindness; and the whole success thankfully ascribed to God. And after every action we have need to purify ourselves in Jesus' blood; as, even in the best, there is enough of sin to damn us, if God deal not with us according to his great mercy, and his Son's infinite atonement. Let then every enticement of my indwelling corruptions provoke my resentment against them, and animate me to put on the whole armour of God; that, directed by Jesus, my Captain of salvation, I may exert myself for their utter destruction. And, since the Lord and I have one common cause, let me, however weak, hope for certain victory.

Let me never spare an enticing lust. And let him have the honour; and let the church and my own soul have the advantage of whatever spoil the Lord shall bring to my hand.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—The love of the world, and the pride of frequently hasten men in their earthly settlements. Though such, even in world, often issue in early and frequent disasters: and it is a fearful symptom when the rising generation tread in their father's sinful steps, and grow and worse. How base is it to desire our own rest and ease, when God's are in hardships, and need our assistance! But how wise to improve past sciences as means of preventing future iniquities. Yea, it is prudent to ve every monument of idolatry, lest it should entice us to offend. Au holy discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob; because they have not wholly followed me;

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun; for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your father's stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

15 For, if ye turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness; and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities, because of the inhabitants of the land.

18 We will not return unto our houses until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance:

19 For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him, 22 And the land be subdued before the LORD: then afterward ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out.

24 Build ye cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead:

27 But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the LORD, and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But, if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be our's.

33 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad built Dibon, and Ataroth, and Aroer, 35 And Atroth, Shophan, and Jaazer, and Jogbehah, 36 And Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities; and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, 38 And Nebo, and Baalmeon, (their names being changed) and Shibmah: and gave other names unto the cities which they builded.

39 And the children of Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.

41 And Jair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them Havoth-jair.

42 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Contains a record of the different encampments of the Israelites, from their departure out of Egypt till they entered Canaan, forty-two in all; with some remarkable events, which happened at several of these stations; 1—49. (2) A strict charge to drive out the inhabitants, and destroy the idols of Canaan, into which they were quickly to enter, otherwise they themselves would be ruined; 50—56.

indignation against sin, in whatever form it appears, is commendable and useful. But, since the best of men often uncharitably mistake their neighbours' words or designs, and judge before they hear, it is therefore proper that every body be allowed to explain himself; that every article of our agreements be precisely stated, and fully understood, at the making of them, that there may be no disputing afterward; and that the strictest equity and the tenderest affection may be maintained among the people of God, who are all brethren in Christ Jesus.

THESE are the ^ajournies of the children of Israel, who went forth out of the land of Egypt with their ^barmies under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their ^cjournies by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journies according to their goings out.

3 And they ^ddeparted from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out ^ewith an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

4 For ^fthe Egyptians buried all their first-born, which the LORD had smitten among them: ^gupon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.

5 And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they ^hdeparted from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And they ⁱremoved from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they ^kdeparted from before Pi-hahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.

9 And they ^lremoved from Marah, and came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees; and they pitched there.

10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red sea.

11 And they ^mremoved from the Red sea, and encamped in the wilderness of Sin.

12 And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah.

13 And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush.

14 And they removed from Alush, and encamped at ⁿRephidim, where was no water for the people to drink.

15 And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the ^owilderness of Sinai.

16 And they ^premoved from the desert of Sinai, and pitched at ^qKibroth-hattaavah.

17 And they departed from Kibroth-hattaavah, and ^rencamped at Hazeroth.

18 And they departed from Hazeroth, and ^spitched in Rithmah.

19 And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez.

20 And they departed from Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah.

21 And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah.

22 And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah.

23 And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in mount Shapher.

24 And they removed from mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah.

25 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.

26 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahiath.

27 And they departed from Tahiath, and pitched at Tarah.

28 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.

29 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched at Hashuramah.

30 And they departed from Hashuramah, and encamped at Moseroth.

31 And they departed from Moseroth, and ^tpitched in Bene-jaakan.

32 And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and encamped at ^uHor-hagidgad.

33 And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbatha.

34 And they removed from Jotbatha, and encamped at Ebronah.

35 And they departed from Ebronah, and encamped at ^vEzion-gaber.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the ^wwilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they ^xremoved from Kadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And ^yAaron the priest went up into mount Hor, at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt; in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

40 And ^zking Arad the Canaanite, who dwelt in the south of the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

41 And they ^{aa}departed from mount Hor, and pitched in Zalmonah.

42 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.

43 And they ^{ab}departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth.

44 And they departed from Oboth, and pitched in ^{ac}Ije-abarim, in the border of Moab.

45 And they departed from Iim, and pitched in Dibon-gad.

46 And they removed from ^{ad}Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon-diblathaim.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.

48 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and pitched ^{ae}in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho.

49 And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto ^{af}Abel-shittim, in the plains of Moab.

50 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

51 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^{ag}When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan, 52 Then ye shall ^{ah}drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places:

AND the LORD spake unto Moses,
saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them; When ye come into the land of Canaan, (this is the land that shall fall unto you for an inheritance, even the land of Canaan with the coasts thereof;)

3 Then your south quarter shall be from the wilderness of Zin along by the coast of Edom, and your south border shall be the outmost coast of the salt sea eastward:

4 And your border shall turn from the south to the ascent of Akrabbim, and pass on to Zin: and the going forth thereof shall be from the south to Kadesh-barnea, and shall go on to Hazar-addar, and pass on to Azmon:

5 And the border shall fetch a compass from Azmon unto the river of Egypt, and the goings out of it shall be at the sea.

6 And as for the western border, ye shall even have the great sea for a border:
this shall be your west border.

7 And this shall be your north border: from the great sea ye shall point out for you mount Hor:

8 From mount Hor ye shall point out your border unto the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to Zedad:

9 And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at Hazar-enan: this shall be your north border.

10 And ye shall point out your east border from Hazar-enan to Shepham.

11 And the coast shall go down from Shepham to Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the side of the sea of Chinnereth eastward:

12 And the border shall go down to Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at the salt sea: this shall be your land with the coasts thereof round about.

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes and to the half tribe:

14 For the tribe of the children of Reuben according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance, and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance:

15 The two tribes and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sun-rising.

16 And the LORD spake unto Moses,
saying,

17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you;
Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun.

18 And ye shall take one prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these: Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel, the son of Shiphtan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—It is useful to remember and record God's providences, for the after-direction or comfort of ourselves and others in future trials and temptations; for this world is but a waste-howling wilderness, and the condition of churches and saints therein always changing and unsettled.
—But the believing recollection of God's dispensations will enable us cheerfully to pass on, while we discover how he preserves his people in all, and sets their mercies and judgments the one over against the other,—guides them with his counsel while here, and afterwards brings them to glory! But dangerous and infectious is intimacy with wicked men, and with the unfruitful works of darkness! Carefully then ought professors of the true religion to avoid it, and to remove out of the way whatever might occasion temptation or stumbling.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—It is necessary to bring our mind to our lot, since God sets the bounds to it: and though a small portion of this world may be allotted to the people of God, yet is that small portion fertile,

CHAP. XXXV.

Here (1) In order that God's ministers might be properly accommodated, and his people have equal access to their instructions, forty-eight cities, and their suburbs, and a field on each side of them, are appointed out of the portions of the twelve tribes for the Levites; 1—8. (2) Six cities, at proper distances, are appointed for places of refuge to such as should accidentally and undesignedly kill their neighbour; 9—15, 22—28. But (3) Every wilful murderer is peremptorily appointed to be punished with death; 16—21, 29—34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab, by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 ^a Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in: and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

4 ^b And the suburbs of the city, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward ^a a thousand cubits round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side [†] two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And ^c among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that ye may flee thither: and [†] to them ye shall add forty and two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be ^d forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be ^e of the possession of the children of Israel: ^f from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which [†] he inheriteth.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^g When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan,

11 Then ^h ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, who killeth any person ^{||} at unawares.

12 And they shall be unto you cities of refuge from the avenger; that the manslayer die not until he stand before the congregation in judgment.

13 And of these cities which ye shall give, ⁱ six cities shall ye have for refuge.

14 Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, ^j both for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them: ^k that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

16 ^l And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer; the murderer shall surely be put to death.

17 And if he smite him ^m with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

18 Or ⁿ if he smite him with an hand-weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 The ^o revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him he shall slay him.

20 But ^p if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; ^q for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly ^r without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait,

23 Or with any stone wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm:

24 Then the ^s congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments.

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled; and he shall ^t abide in it unto the death of the high priest, who was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; ^u he shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

The memorial of heaven's vengeance on Sodom at the south-east; the memorial of Egyptian bondage on the south-west; the wilderness of their wandering on the south; the goodly mountain Lebanon on the north; the great sea, that emblem of eternity, on the west; and Jordan, that river of God, on the east. Thus are we surrounded with mementos of our state. But, in all, infallible is the accomplishment of God's promises, whatever hard warfare and wearisome waiting may be necessary to precede it. Let me therefore, even now, raise up my weary spirit—Jesus, the prince of all the tribes of ransomed men, shall quickly assign me my share in his celestial Canaan!

CHAP. XXXVI.

God having appointed (chap. xxvii.) that the daughters in a family should inherit their father's portion when there were no sons, here (1) A difficulty is started, that these heiresses, by their marriage, might carry off their portion into the inheritance of another tribe; 1—4. (2) To prevent this, God appoints that heiresses should marry only with husbands of their own tribe; 5—9. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—What care God takes to arrange his ministers in the church and world as best promotes the edification of his people! Often, for that purpose, as in the case of the Levites, he turns a curse into a blessing. At the same time it is his will that his ministers should be suitably provided for, that they may not be embarrassed with carnal care or labour: and to provide a gospel minister ought to be the great care of every people. Such as minister to us in spiritual things have a right to reap our carnal things: and such as are engaged in gospel administrations should, as far as possible, disengage themselves from every worldly care. Never therefore should we receive worldly portions without devoting a part of them to the Lord, or the benefit of his church. How heinous is the guilt of hating and murdering our neighbours! And it is presumptuously wicked for such as are in power to permit wilful murderers to pass without the due punishment of death. But if men sinfully indulge their escape, God's sword will in due time reach them. Yet, on the contrary, care ought to be taken that none be punished but upon sufficient examination and full proof; and that none be punished with death for any thing done contrary to his intention. But what a lively type of Jesus are these cities of refuge! What murder of God—of Christ—of our souls—of our neighbour—of time—of ordinances—of mercies and judgments—we commit ignorantly, and in unbelief! And if death overtake us loitering in our sins, we must perish in them! But Jesus, in his person, covenant, blood, power, and grace, is a safe and comfortable refuge set before us in the gospel. He is every where near to flee too; and the way to him is plain and clear. Strangers, Gentiles as well as Jews, have equal access to him. Him that cometh to him he will in no wise cast out: and in him we must abide for ever, that we may be safe.—But how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation!—if we sin wilfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth!—if we tread under foot the Son of God, count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and do despite unto the Spirit of grace!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—It is prudent to foresee difficulties, that we may avoid them: and in laws, covenants, and other affairs, to have every point so fixed that no disorder or dispute may arise in after-times. But let us remember that it is most profitable to acknowledge the Lord in all our ways; for often he defers his directions till men perceive the necessity of them: and a ready obedience to his command and will, when known, yea, even to those of our superiors, is necessary and becoming. But, whatever power parents have in the marriage of children, none ought to be forced into marriage connections contrary to their inclination.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

DEUTERONOMY.

This book is so called because it contains a repetition of many laws formerly delivered. It records the history of Israel during one month before Moses' death, and another after it. Here we have scarcely any new history, but what relates to Moses' renewal of the covenant between God and Israel, his charge to Joshua, and his death. Never, except in ch. xxxi. 14—21. and xxxiv. 4, is God exhibited as speaking to Moses or the Israelites as in the three preceding books. But Moses, just going to leave them by death, in the most affecting manner rehearses to them what God had done for them; and the laws which he had given them, with several explications and additions. This rehearsal was extremely necessary and kind. (1) Many of the laws in respect of their matter, and all of them in respect of their author and intent, were very important, and worthy to be again and again inculcated. (2) The weakness of the Israelites made it necessary that the laws which immediately concerned them should be represented separately from those which concerned the priests and Levites. (3) The persons to whom these laws had been originally published were now almost all dead, and a new generation was grown up, to whom God would leave his laws repeated by Moses himself, that, if possible, it might make a lasting impression upon them. (4) They were just going to take possession of Canaan; it was therefore proper that they should be expressly admonished of the conditions upon which they were to hold it. In this his last speech and dying words, (1) Moses gives a summary rehearsal of what events had happened to them in the wilderness; ch. i. ii. iii. ix. 7—29. x. 1—7. (2) He rehearses the moral laws which had been given from mount Sinai; and, by a variety of motives, drawn from the kindness of God toward them, and from the danger of disobedience, charges and calls upon them to obey them; iv.—xi. (3) With a mixture of moral institutes he inculcates manifold ceremonial and judicial observances: some of which; as of extirpating false prophets and idolatrous cities; making battlements around the roofs of houses; expiating uncertain murder; taking down hanged malefactors in the evening; punishing of rebellious children; distinguishing apparel of the sexes; marriage of captive women, and wives of deceased brethren; of divorcing of wives, and trial of virginity; of runaway servants; &c.; had not before been plainly established; xii.—xxvi. (4) To enforce obedience to these laws, he charges them to surrender themselves solemnly to God at Ebal and Gerizzim, as his dutiful servants, who regarded his blessings, and stood in awe of his curses. He solemnly announces the blessings annexed to their obedience, and denounces the curses which would befall them if disobedient; xxvii.—xxxi. (5) After encouraging Joshua, his successor, and leaving a song for the people, warning them of their future sins, miseries, and deliverances, and a testamentary benediction for their encouragement, he views the promised land from mount Pisgah, where he dies, and is buried by God, and lamented by the Israelites; xxxi.—xxxiv.

CHAP. I.

After marking the time and place of his discourse, 1—5, Moses, in his farewell-sermon, reminds the Israelites (1) Of the promise of Canaan, which God had made to them; 6—8. (2) Of the provision of inferior judges he had made for them; 9—18. (3) Of their unbelief and murmuring upon the report of the wicked spies; 19—33. (4) Of the wrathful sentence which God had passed upon them for their sin, and the ratification thereof; 34—46.

THESE are the words which Moses spake unto all Israel ^aon this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against ^{*}the Red sea, between ^bParan, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

2 (There are ^celeven days' journey from Horeb, by the way of mount Seir, unto Kadesh-barnea.)

3 And it came to pass ^din the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, ^ethat Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 ^fAfter he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, who dwelt at Ashtaroth in Edrei:

5 On ^gthis side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt ^hlong enough in this mount:

7 Turn ye, and take your journey, and ⁱgo to the mount of the Amorites, and unto [†]all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have [‡]set the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you at that time, ^ksaying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath ^lmultiplied you, and, behold, ye ^mare this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers, ⁿmake you a thousand times so many more as ye ^oare, and ^pbless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone ^qbear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

13 ¶ Take ye wise men and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

32 Yet in this thing ye did not believe the LORD your God, 33 Who went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to shew you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 ¶ And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and sware, saying,

35 Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers, 36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath wholly followed the LORD.

39 Moreover, your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 But as for you, turn ye, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And, when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and went presumptuously up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, who dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and chased you as bees do, and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

CHAP. II.

Here after passing untouched the wanderings of thirty-eight years, which the Israelites had spent under the manifest tokens of God's wrath, Moses reminds them of (1) The charge which God gave them not to disturb the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites, their kinsmen, to whom he had given the lands of the ancient Horims, Emims, and Zamzummims, the heathen posterity of Ham; 1—23. (2) The care which God took of them in the wilderness; and his complete fulfilment of his threatening, in destroying the unbelieving contemners of the promised land; 13—16. (3) The order they received from God to conquer the kingdom of Sihon the Amorite; their just quarrel with him, and seizure of his country; 24—37.

(2) The distribution of this and the former conquests to the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, on certain conditions; 12—20. (3) Of his encouragement of Joshua to carry on the war which had been so gloriously begun with the Canaanites; 21, 22. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What regard God bears to his noted favourites; and what temporal favours he bestows, even on their wicked posterity, for their sake! But he hath appointed times for exercising his people's faith, and permitting his enemies' prosperity. He plants and plucks up nations; keeps them in, or turns them down from, their property as he pleases; and the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Thus the cursed offspring of Ham, after many ages, perish under the patriarch's curse. But the people of God ought to be always generous, forgiving, and disinterested; neither injuring their enemies, nor laying unnecessary burdens on their friends. And the more vain and changeable the possessions of this world are, the more solicitous we ought to be to secure a kingdom which cannot be moved. When nations are ripe for ruin, God permits their proud lusts to plunge them headlong into it: and their barbarous refusals of common kindness issue in their own and their neighbour's destruction. Let me be always content with such things as I have; always tender of dispossessing others of what the Lord has given them. Let my portion be the Lord himself, from which neither hell nor earth can turn me out, or mar my enjoyment, while I live in the hopes of exchanging all my wanderings, fightings, and fears, for that city of God, that house eternal in the heavens.

CHAP. IV.

Here (1) Moses solemnly charges the Israelites to attend to God's statutes, and preserve his ordinances pure and entire: to avoid idolatry; to instruct their children in the truths and ways of God; and never to forget his covenant themselves. To enforce these duties, he urges the greatness and goodness of God; their relations and obligations to him; the wisdom of real religion; the singular glory and advantage of their theocratical establishment; the affecting appearance of God upon mount Sinai; the merciful deliverances which God had wrought for them, and his severe corrections of them; the advantages their obedience, and the punishment their apostasy, would entail upon them; 1—40. (2) He appoints three cities of refuge on the east of Jordan; 41—43. (3) He particularly describes the place where he delivered this repetition of the law; 44—49.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Haughty sinners scorn to be warned by their neighbours' fall, and dare to provoke their own judgments, in which they perish. But, amidst the strongest enemies, all slavish fears are altogether groundless when we have the Lord on our side: he kindly proportions his encouragements to his people's fears, and the terrible appearances of their enemies. There is no might nor counsel against him. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. Created force is of little avail when God is the opposer. He can deal with giants as with grasshoppers.—It highly becomes those, who by faith have entered into their new-covenant rest, to look not on their own things, but every man also on the things of others; and to labour till their brethren, and especially Zion, enjoy rest along with them.—Every experience of God's power and kindness ought to be improved as an antidote against slavish fears, and an encouragement to follow God in the hardest service: and every glimpse of God's glory quickens the desires after more abundant displays

4 But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

8 And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons;

10 Specially the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude, only ye heard a voice.

13 And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

15 ¶ Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire;

16 Lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air, of it. Thankfulness for former mercies is an excellent mean to obtain what blessings we need: and contentment under disappointments is a good evidence that our prayers were not rejected, though we obtain not what we ask. One single slip in the conversation of a saint sometimes renders his most earnest supplications unsuccessful; for God makes his own principal favourites the most distinguished examples of his righteous judgments. Often, for their own faults, as well as for the punishment of others, he removes them by death in a wrathful-like manner, when the continuance of their life seems to be most necessary; and yet readily he gratifies their innocent desires, as far as his own honour permits, whenever he finds them penitent. What a comfort is it for dying rulers, in church or state, to leave the flock of God in the hands of faithful successors: and it is pleasing to see aged saints on their death-beds encourage their younger brethren.

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth :

19 And lest ^athou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and, when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath ^ddivided unto all nations under the whole heaven.

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of ^ythe iron furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a ^zpeople of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore, the LORD ^awas angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land ^bwhich the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance :

22 But ^cI must die in this land ; I must not go over Jordan : but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take ^dheed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

24 For ^ethe LORD thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God.

25 ¶ When thou ^fshalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and shall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger :

26 I ^gcall heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ^hye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it : ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

27 And the LORD shall ⁱscatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whether the LORD shall lead you.

28 And there ^kye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which ^lneither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 But ^mif from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

30 When ⁿthou art in tribulation, and all these things ^oare come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice ;

31 (For ^pthe LORD thy God is a merciful God ;) he ^qwill not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them.

32 ¶ For ^rask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the ^sone side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it ?

33 Did ever people ^thear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live ?

34 Or hath God essayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes ?

35 Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest ^uknow that the LORD he is God : there is none else beside him.

36 ^vOut of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee : and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire ; and thou heardest his words ^wout of the midst of the fire.

37 And ^xbecause he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt ;

38 ^yTo drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 ^zKnow therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath ; there is none else.

40 Thou shalt ^bkeep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee ; and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, ^cwhich the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.

41 ¶ Then Moses ^dsevered three cities on this side Jordan toward the sun-rising ;

42 That the slayer might flee thither who should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past ; and that fleeing unto one of these cities he might live :

43 Namely, ^eBezer in the wilderness, in the plain country of the Reubenites ; and ^fRamoth in Gilead, of the Gadites ; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites.

44 ¶ And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel :

45 These are the ^gtestimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt,

46 On ^hthis side Jordan in the valley over against Beth-peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel ⁱsmote after they were come forth out of Egypt :

47 And they possessed his land, and the land ^kof Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan toward the sun-rising ;

48 ^lFrom Aroer, which is by the bank of the river Arnon, even unto mount ^mSion, which is Hermon ;

CHAP. V.

Here (1) Moses represents that the ten commandments, published at Horeb, were given to this present generation in the form of, and as the rule in, a covenant between God and Israel; 1—5. (2) He repeats these commandments themselves, subjoining some new enforcements to the fourth and fifth; and reminds them that they were delivered both by the word and the writing of God; 6—22. (3) He reminds them how, upon their request, God graciously settled an amicable correspondence with them, through his mediation and ministry; 23—31. (4) From the whole he infers what deep obligations they were under to the most exact obedience; 32, 33.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Blind and hardened indeed are the hearts of men, which need such earnest and repeated inculcation of the plainest duties. And greatly important are the statutes and testimonies of God, which are worthy of all these enforcements. Oh with what solemnity and fervour ought ministers then to preach the truths of God! His glory, and the eternal salvation or ruin of mankind, are deeply concerned in them. Let me receive every article of their divine message with the deepest awe and the most solemn regard: and, while I have an ear to hear, let me hear what the Spirit saith to the churches as said to myself. Let me walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless. Let every carnal representation of the true God, every deviation to idols, be the thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 And "remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath-day.

16 ¶ "Honour thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee, that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

17 "Thou shalt not kill.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

19 Neither shalt thou steal.

20 Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 "Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife: neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.

22 ¶ "These words the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice; and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

23 And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the "heads of your tribes, and your elders:

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath shewed us his glory, and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us: if we hear the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go thou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say: and speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee; and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words when ye spake unto me; and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people which they have spoken unto thee: they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 "O that there were such an heart detestation of my soul. And, remembering God's covenant with me, and relation to me, let me exert all my care and skill in raising up a seed to the honour of Jesus Christ, my elder brother. Let every manifestation of God's character or providence encourage and animate me to close walking with him. And, if I choose not that sin should become my punishment, let me never make it my pleasure. But let the immutability of God's love, and his readiness to shew mercy to returning prodigals, lead me to a speedy and a hearty repentance for sin. And, recollecting the manifold, the distinguishing, manifestations of God to me and to his people, let me never forget my superior obligations; but, while I enjoy his peculiar blessing, return him peculiar honour.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will ^bspeak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I gave them to possess it.

32 Ye ⁱshall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

33 Ye shall ^kwalk in all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

CHAP. VI.

Here (1) Moses inculcates obedience to God's law from the advantage of it to the present and succeeding generations; 1—3, 17—19. (2) He warmly inculcates a strict attention to the principal duties of religion; such as faith in God the only true God, and a superlative love to him, a mindfulness of him even amidst prosperity, a filial fear of him, a serving of him, and swearing by him alone, a care not to tempt him; 4, 5, 10—16. (3) He prescribes proper means for maintaining true religion in their hearts and families; viz. frequent reading and meditation upon God's word, pious conference, and careful instruction of children; 2, 6—9, 20—25.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Sinful men must have God's will declared to them, line upon line, precept upon precept. But the covenant of grace made with Jesus Christ is the great foundation of all our holy obedience: and there can be no happy covenant of duty between God and a soul but through his mediation. Public covenants of duty between God and parents bind the children to all generations; and it is at their peril if they become ashamed of them. But all obedience to God's law must be immediately founded on what God is, and is to us, and hath done for us. And Oh what great pleasure God takes in granting himself to be our God in Christ! Often he repeats this grant even in the short abridgment of his law; and many hundred times in the Bible; that wherever we read, hear, or meditate, we may be constrained to believe that he is God, even our own God, by his new covenant grant of himself to us. Indeed every peculiar circumstance which men can be in hath its own peculiar enforcements of duty to God and our neighbour. In what a solemn manner was God's law delivered! and it is a mercy that we have his word written for us, for the greater certainty and the better spreading thereof. But it is still a greater mercy that we have one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; and so receive the law as fulfilled in Christ. And it is most acceptable to God when sinful men, terrified by the holy law, kindly flee to Jesus and his mediation; when our hearts are right with him; and especially when the views of his covenant, his law, and the mediation of Christ, and our own vows, concur in animating us to the greatest exactness in all holy obedience.

if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

CHAP. VII.

Here, besides general exhortations to obedience to God's law, (11, 12,) Moses (1) Particularly charges the Israelites to avoid communion with idolaters. 1. They must utterly destroy the seven devoted nations of Canaanites, and make no leagues or marriages with them; 1—4, 16, 24. 2. They must destroy all their altars and images; and not so much as to take the metal thereof to their own use; 5, 25, 26. (2) He enforces these charges, 1. From God's gracious choice of the Israelites to be his peculiar people; 6—8. 2. His readiness to reward their obedience, and revenge their disobedience; 9, 10. 3. His promises to bless them if they served him faithfully; and to drive out the Canaanites from before them if they earnestly attempted it; 12—15, 17—24.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hast cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites; seven nations greater and mightier than thou; 2 And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them:

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

6 ¶ For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people:

8 But because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bond-men, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 ¶ Know therefore that the LORD thy God he is God, the faithful God, who keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments to a thousand generations;

10 And repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

11 Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 ¶ Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers:

13 And he will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And thou shalt consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.

17 If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

18 Thou shalt not be afraid of them: but shalt well remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt:

19 The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out: so shall the LORD thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 Moreover, the LORD thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them; for the LORD thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible.

22 And the LORD thy God will put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

24 And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee until thou have destroyed them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—God's law is profitable for all things—it hath the promises of this life and of that which is to come! and unbounded is the happiness of all those who have the one only God for their all and in all. But in the important business of religion it is necessary to lay a good foundation, by faith in God as our God, and to attend to the various duties thereof according to the degree of their importance. In this respect the word of God is a most precious treasure and useful instructor; and contains the most extensive ground of holy meditation and heavenly discourse. With awful reverence should God be regarded and enjoyed, particularly in swearing of oaths. And it is altogether inconsistent with the truth of religion to entertain sloth and unconcern for the glory of God, or the lasting welfare of his church. What an important and laborious work out we to make of the religious education of our children and servants! It is very necessary to instruct them in the knowledge of God's remarkable appearances for his church, as well as in the doctrinal principles or laws of revelation; and that no obedience can be accepted of God but what is performed in regard to him as our God in Christ, and is universal respecting all his commandments!

25 ¶ The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the LORD thy God.

26 Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing.

CHAP. VIII.

To fasten his admonitions upon the consciences of the Israelites, Moses still insists upon his former topics. (1) He gives them general exhortations to universal obedience to God's laws; 1, 6. (2) He charges them to remember the favours and rebukes they had met with from God in the wilderness, as an incitement to obedience; 2—5, 15, 16. (3) To improve the excellency of Canaan also, into which they were going, to the same purpose; and to beware of making their prosperity an occasion of, or temptation to, impiety; 7—14, 17, 18. (4) He solemnly warns them of the fatal consequences of their apostasy or idolatry; 19, 20.

ALL the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD swore unto your fathers.

2 And thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna; which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God bringeth thee into a good land; a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates; a land of oil-olive, and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.

10 When thou hast eaten, and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest when thou hast eaten, and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the LORD thy God, who brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth.

18 But thou shalt remember the LORD thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he swore unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

19 And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, so shall ye perish; because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

CHAP. IX.

Having formerly mentioned their enemies, and their goodly inheritance in Canaan, Moses here (1) Assures the Israelites of victory over their enemies, however powerful; 1—3. (2) He charges them to remember that, though these Canaanites were to be cast out for their impieties, they themselves were not to obtain the country for their righteousness; 3—6. (3) To impress their consciences with this humbling truth, he reminds them of their making and worshipping the golden calf, and of their repeated murmurings and contempt of the promised land; 7—24. (4) He represents God's reconciliation to them as the fruit of his own repeated and solemn intercession; 18—20, 25—29.

providences every way, to lead men to Jesus, the tree of life. To mortify our pride, commemorate our peevishness, and render the wisdom, holiness, and mercy of God familiar, let us observe the frowns and smiles of God's providence towards us. Trials are as necessary as deliverances; nor can any thing hinder God from supplying us in the greatest straits. If the enjoyment of an earthly Canaan, much more should the faith of the heavenly inheritance, animate to an earnestness in universal holiness and gratitude. But how difficult is it to maintain humility of mind amidst remarkable prosperity! or fellowship with God amidst a flow of earthly enjoyments! For this purpose, let me always remember that forgetfulness of God, ingratitude, and pride, bring into the prosperity by which they are occasioned the most fearful curse; and let me wisely observe the providences of God in my lot. To humble me, and discover my own naughtiness, let me remember the wilderness straits to which I have been reduced. To recommend JEHOVAH to my heart, let me consider what he hath done for me, and promised to me. Let every peculiar excellency in my lot be a mean of elevating my heart to God himself, my goodly inheritance. In the day of my adversity let me be joyful in him; and in the day of my prosperity let me consider that all comes from him, and may be withdrawn at his pleasure: and, while the loving-kindness of God allures me to holiness, let his terrors awe me and deter me from sin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God sovereignly disposes of mankind, even with respect to their life or death, they having all forfeited whatever they have into the hands of his justice. It is dangerous to contract marriage, or cultivate intimacy with wicked persons, particularly such as are of a false religion; and absurd is the expectation, that by such means we shall convert them, when God hath warned us that they will corrupt and seduce us. The faith of God's free love and mercy, in choosing and redeeming us, most effectually constrains to holy obedience: and what profit and pleasure is there in the faithful service of God! The most difficult duties are easily performed when we attempt them in the faith of God's promised presence and assistance. Why should we fear our strongest enemies, though greater and mightier than we are? If God be for us, who or what can be against us? Though our conquest be gradual, it shall be complete at last. And in all our strugglings let us beware of covetousness; for to enrich ourselves, even with the spoils of a false religion, may issue in our ruin: and it is therefore very important to remove and avoid every temptation to sin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—With great care and skill should ministers promote holiness among their people: and there is need to turn promises and HEAR, O Israel: thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great, and fenced up to heaven;

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak!

3 Understand therefore this day that the LORD thy God is he who goeth over before thee: as a consuming fire he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

4 Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land; but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform the word which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff-necked people.

7 Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you to have destroyed you.

9 When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights; I neither did eat bread nor drink water:

10 And the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words which the LORD spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people, whom thou hast brought forth out of Egypt, have corrupted themselves: they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore, the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people:

14 Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven: and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.

18 And I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

19 For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you. But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust: and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 Ye have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

25 Thus I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O LORD God, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin:

28 Lest the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAP. X.

Having declared to the Israelites their unrighteousness and rebellion against God, Moses here (1) Reminds them of the undeserved tokens of God's reconciliation to them; such as 1. The renewal of the tables of the law or covenant; 1—5. 2. The new orders for their marching onward to Canaan; 6, 7, 11. 3. His continuing of the priesthood after Aaron's death, and choice of the Levites for his ministers; 6, 8, 9. 4. His accepting of Moses' intercession for the people; 10, 11. (2) From these; from the greatness, equity, and goodness, of God; and from his peculiar kindness to Israel; he urges the fear and service of God, and the due love of their neighbours; 12—22.

AT that time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And I made an ark of shittim-wood, and hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten commandments, which the LORD spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD separated the tribe of Levi, to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to bless in his name unto this day.

9 Wherefore Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.

10 ¶ And I stayed in the mount, according to the first time, forty days and forty nights; and the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and the LORD would not destroy thee.

11 And the LORD said unto me, Arise, take thy journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land which I swore unto their fathers to give unto them.

12 ¶ And now, Israel, what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but to fear the LORD thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, 13 To keep the commandments of the LORD, and his statutes, which I command thee this day for thy good?

14 Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD's thy God; the earth also, with all that therein is.

15 Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you, above all people, as it is this day.

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiff-necked.

17 For the LORD your God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, a mighty, and a terrible, who regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward:

18 He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment.

19 Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name.

21 He is thy praise, and he is thy God, that hath done for thee these great and terrible things which thine eyes have seen.

22 Thy fathers went down into Egypt with threescore and ten persons; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude.

CHAP. XI.

To inculcate constancy in the love of God, and obedience to his laws, Moses here (1) Reminds them of the marvellous acts of God in destroying Pharaoh, Dathan, Abiram, &c. for their pride and disobedience; 1—7. (2) He represents what plenty, what victory, and what enlargement of their country, would attend their obedience; and what curses would follow on their disobedience; 8—17, 22—25. (3) He directs them to proper means for maintaining a due sense of religion in themselves and their families; 18—21. (4) While he directs a solemn intimation of the blessings and curses from mount Gerizzim and Ebal, he solemnly puts it to their choice, whether they would have the blessing or the curse; 26—32.

THEREFORE thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.

2 ¶ And know ye this day: for I speak not with your children who have not known, and who have not seen, the chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand, and his stretched-out arm,

3 And his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—The greater our enemies and impediments in the way of our duty, the more shall the power of God be magnified in our overcoming them. God can easily find instruments to execute his vengeance upon a people devoted to destruction; and his promises and threatenings are most certainly performed in their due time. Though judgment may be delayed, yet sin will at last make the most fearful havock in nations and families, however great and powerful. And yet it is hard to keep the very worst of men from trusting and glorying in their own fancied works of righteousness. But, to keep us humble amidst many and great mercies, let us search the records which conscience keeps of our sins. Nothing but obstinate blindness can support us in a good opinion of ourselves. But thanks be to God that, where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; thanks for that infinite mercy, that such a wicked generation have a most prevailing intercessor to stand in the gap to turn away the Lord's wrath and indignation from them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—What a mercy is it that the law, as a covenant, is fulfilled and hid in Christ, our gospel ark! And what a sure token of divine favours yet in store for a people when God raises up faithful ministers and earnest wrestlers at a throne of grace! Marvellous indeed are God's returns of love for hatred—of mercies for rebellion and provocation; and inexpressible therefore is disobedience to a God so great and gracious! But it is honourable and becoming to walk in love as God himself walketh! It is a most fearful proof of the corruption of our nature, and the necessity of a gracious change, that we need so much urging to that which is so remarkably at once our great duty and interest. But let me always retain in mind the wonderful character and the peculiar mercies of my God, the God of Israel; esteem it my glory to belong to him; and make him the only object of my fear, my praise, and joy.

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

5 And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place;

6 And what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben; how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the ^{*}substance that was in their possession, in the midst of all Israel:

7 But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did.

8 Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land whither ye go to possess it;

9 And that ye ^bmay prolong your days in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 ¶ For the land whither thou goest in to possess it is not as the land of Egypt from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with [†]thy foot, as a garden of herbs:

11 But the land whither ye go to possess it is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven:

12 A ^kland which the LORD thy God ^{||}careth for: the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

13 ¶ And it shall come to pass, ^mif ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, 14 That ⁿI will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 And ^oI will [§]send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.

16 ^pTake heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And then the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he ^qshut up the heaven, that there be no rain; and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 ¶ Therefore shall ye ^rlay up these my words in your heart, and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou shalt write them upon the door-posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

21 That your ^udays may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 ¶ For ^vif ye shall diligently keep all these commandments, which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him;

23 Then ^wwill the LORD drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea, shall your coast be.

25 There shall no man be able to stand before you: for the LORD your God shall lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath said unto you.

26 ¶ Behold, ^bI set before you this day a blessing and a curse:

27 A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day;

28 And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizzim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.

30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the [†]champaign [§]over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh?

31 For ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.

32 And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Thus let my love to the Lord always work in holy obedience to all his commandments. Let the remembrance of his early kindness to me and mine, and his awful judgments on others around me, stir me up to the utmost circumspection in my conduct. God's mercies should leave an impression on us which neither time nor age should ever efface. And while sin shorten men's days, and cause countries to spue out their inhabitants, yea, often into hell fire, let me carefully observe God's kindness, even in outward things. Mercies coming from the immediate hand of God are doubly sweet. Godliness hath the promise of the life that now is as well as of that which is to come. But, if we refuse to be influenced by God's mercies, we must sink under his judgments. When the heart is filled with the knowledge and love of God's word, the tongue will be as the pen of a ready writer in speaking of divine things. Let me therefore, by all means, labour to fix a deep sense of spiritual things upon my own soul, and be careful to transmit the knowledge of them unto my seed: for true religion stamps a reverence on its professors, which keeps even their enemies in awe of them: and godliness, transmitted with our possessions, is the surest way to perpetuate them in our families. How plain and evident, in God's word, is the way to happiness and misery! And if men will not see, will not walk aright, their blood must be on their own head. Since, then, the blessings and curses of time and eternity are set before me in the gospel, let me choose Jesus, and his inexhaustible fulness of blessings, as my portion, and my everlasting ALL.

CHAP. XII.

Having at length inculcated the leading and general duties of religion common to all men, Moses now proceeds to inculcate the positive institutions, which God had given in charge to Israel, to be observed in Canaan. (1) In general, they must destroy all monuments of idolatry, and keep close to God's tabernacle, and form of worship instituted by him; 1—5. (2) They must bring all their oblations to God's altar and residence; 6, 7, 11, 12, 14, 18, 26, 27, 28; and always regard and support God's ministers: 18, 19. (3) They must neither do as they now did in the wilderness, nor as the Canaanites had done in their worship; 8—11, 29—32. (4) They are allowed to eat flesh, but not any blood, at their respective homes, and are appointed to eat their share of the sacred oblations only at the Lord's special residence; 1—18, 20—25.

THESE are the statutes and judgments, which ye shall observe to do in the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2^d Ye shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree:

3 And ye shall overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods and destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 ¶ Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God.

5 But unto the place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation, shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

6 And thither ye shall bring your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, and your tithes, and heave-offerings, of your hand, and your vows, and your free-will-offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks:

7 And there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

8 Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance which the LORD your God giveth you.

10 But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety;

11 Then there shall be a place which the LORD your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there; thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave-offering of your hand, and all your choice vows which ye vow unto the LORD:

12 And ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God, ye, and your sons, and your daughters, and your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and the Levite that is within your gates; forasmuch as he hath no part nor inheritance with you.

13 Take heed to thyself, that thou offer not thy burnt-offerings in every place that thou seest:

14 But in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 ¶ Notwithstanding, thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, as of the roebuck, and as of the hart.

16 Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 ¶ Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy free-will-offerings, or heave-offering of thine hand:

18 But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 ¶ Take heed to thyself, that thou forsake not the Levite as long as thou livest upon the earth.

20 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh; because thy soul longeth to eat flesh; thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

21 If the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen, to put his name there, be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

22 Even as the roebuck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them: the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.

23 Only be sure that thou eat not the blood; for the blood is the life, and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

24 Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

26 Only thy holy things which thou hast, and thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose:

27 And thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.
